G. M. Strike Reported Delayed 24 Hours as Board Seeks Solution

Defense Labor Scene Brightens Except In Walkout of Coast Shipyard Machinists

BULLETIN

At 3:30 o'clock this morning, with the Mediation Board still conferring with disputants in the General Motors strike threat, it was expected that Vice Chairman William H. Davis, of the board, soon would announce a 24-hour postponement of the strike set to begin at 7:00 a. m., today.

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The biggest question mark in the defense labor situation early today was the threatened strike in 61 General Motors Corporation plants, while a Defense Mediation Board panel continued grim efforts to avert a walkout at 7 a. m.

As a night conference of the panel with management and labor representatives continued past midnight, it was reported as a toss-up whether a board proposal for settlement would be accepted or the strike would begin as scheduled.

Aside from the G. M. C. case, and the obdurate resistance to Government back-to-work proposals in the San Francisco area shipyard strike, the sudden surge of labor stoppages appeared to be subsiding as rapidly as it had emerged.

Along with reports of settlement or imminent settlement of several of yesterday's principal strikes, there were promising indications that a threatened repetition of April's crippling soft coal strike would be averted. In only one instance, that of a shutdown in a division of the Corning Glass Works due to lack of materials from a strike-bound source, did the strike impact spread.

Yesterday's principal labor developments:

1. Following a White House visit, at which Sidney Hillman, OPM associate director general, discussed the San Francisco strike with the President, Hillman called on officers of the striking A. F. of L. machinists "to see to it that their contractual obligations are enforced" so that the $500,000,000 work stoppage would be ended. He was immediately rebuffed, however, when union officials in San Francisco declared that no contractual obligations were involved.

Hillman referred to the master stabilization plan for West Coast shipbuilding labor, recently ratified by 16 out of 17 A. F. of L. unions involved. The machinists, however, were the hold-outs, and decline to accept the master contract.

2. A sudden cancellation of the afternoon conference scheduled in New York between Southern bituminous operators and the C. I. O. United Mine Workers led to speculation that the mine owners were preparing a proposal to offer to the workers and thus forestall another strike of from 300,000 to 400,000 miners, threatened Tuesday by union President John L. Lewis. A union spokesman suggested that the operators might submit a settlement proposal at today's conference. The issue is the union's demand for

Car Loadings Decrease

April Strikes Cause Break In Year-Long Industry Gains

Further Expansion of Plants Producing Defense Goods Reported by Commerce

The Department of Commerce reported yesterday that management-labor disputes in April resulted in the first break in the year-long rise of industrial output, despite the further expansion of industries producing finished defense goods.

These gains were offset by reduced output in coal, automobiles, and steel. Directly reflecting the recession in business were lower freight car loadings and the electric power output, which fell to the lowest levels of the year, although remaining substantially above the same period of 1940.

The Commerce Department noted, however, no slackening has appeared in the advancing pace of residential and plant construction, and retail buying in April remained in heavy volume after the best Easter season since the late twenties.

Important price developments during April included a decline in the pace of the advance in basic commodity prices. The Bureau of Labor Statistics 28-commodity index moved only from 135 to 137, the smallest increase since January. Most of the rise was concentrated in a few farm and food products.

The latest report on new orders revealed continued strength in all lines, with a further rise in the tremendous volume of new business flowing to most durable goods industries.

"That goods produced are now flowing in a somewhat larger degree to ultimate consumers was again apparent from recent inventory reports," it is stated. Aggregate accumulation by manufacturers during March was about $125,000,000, more than the 75,000,000 of February, but much less than the monthly average of last fall and early winter.

"Rapidly expanding defense industries requiring larger raw material and goods-in-process stocks led the upward movement. In nondurable goods, inventory shifts were small."

FCC Accused Of Deceiving Roosevelt

Ethridge Resigns President's Commission To Survey Radio Field

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 14.—Mark Ethridge, Louisville radio and newspaper executive, declared today he believed President Roosevelt "was deceived" and "almost betrayed" regarding troubles in the radio industry.

He referred to the recent anti-monopoly report of the Federal Communications Commission ordering broad revisions in the internal structure of the broadcasting business.

Simultaneously Ethridge, general manager of radio station WHAS, Louisville, and a former president of the National Association of Broadcasters, announced his resignation of a commission by President Roosevelt to make a survey of the radio industry.

"That work has been destroyed not only by the text and tone of the commission's order," Ethridge asserted, "but by the evident determination of the commission by precipitate action, to forestall the expression of views by any other agency."

Investigation Urged

[The Association of Broadcasters adopted a resolution urging the United States Senate to give "prompt and favorable consideration" to the resolution of Senator Wallace White (Republican), of Maine, proposing an investigation of the issuance of the FCC Monopoly report, International News Service reported.

[The White resolution, as a result of the proposed investigation, contemplates the possible enactment of a new radio law and the FCC would be asked to suspend operation of its new network rules pending completion of the Senate inquiry. Ethridge urged approval of the resolution.—Editor's Note.]

Addresses Broadcasters

Asserting he felt the FCC had gone beyond "any powers conferred in the law," Ethridge said:

"I firmly believe the President was deceived as to the extent of radio's ills and almost betrayed in

21 Big Bombers Fly in Secret To Hawaii

Flying Fortresses Cover 2,400 Miles To Bolster Defenses

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

In the greatest mass flight of heavy bombers in history, the Army yesterday sped 21 of its newest "flying fortresses" to Hawaii to bolster the offensive power of America's main Pacific bulwark.

The long-range 4-engine craft, capable of flying across the Pacific via island outpost bases, landed at Hickam Field, Hawaii, yesterday morning, after a spectacular overnight trip over 2,400 miles of water.

Departure of the bombers from Hamilton Field, San Francisco, late Tuesday night had been kept secret, and it was not until some hours after the last of the planes arrived safely that the War Department here announced that the flight had been made.

Planes of Latest Model

Normally, movements of planes and troops to overseas bases are kept hidden as far as possible. Yesterday, however, the War Department, with an evident eye to the effect abroad, stressed the steps being taken to strengthen the Hawaiian air power.

"The planes were the latest model of the Flying Fortresses, technically designated as B-17-D," the announcement said. "They have a speed of more than 300 miles per hour and can operate in excess of 1,000 miles at sea. They have the most modern armament and armor."

Noting that the movement of the planes marked the first heavy bombers to be stationed in Hawaii, the department added:

"Others will follow later."

Emmons Leads Flight

In the past three months the Army greatly strengthened the Hawaiian air force, sending several squadrons of the latest type pursuit planes and the most modern medium (two-motor) bombers to the islands. Yesterday's announcement also said that more of the latter type of craft are to be delivered to the mid-Pacific base in the near future.

Isolationists Defer Convoy Showdown

Tobey Not to Offer Amendment as Rider To Alien Ships Bill Before Senate

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Senate isolationists late yesterday abandoned plans to force a fulldress convoy debate this week, but insisted they will demand an early showdown on the explosive issue.

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, was understood after a conference with leaders of the isolationist bloc to have agreed not to offer as a rider to the foreign ships requisition bill his anticonvoy amendment.

Close Vote Seen on Amendment

With the decision to postpone a floor fight on convoys, perhaps until after President Roosevelt's fireside chat May 27, Senate approval of the ship bill seemed assured for today or tomorrow.

Senate debate yesterday centered on the Vandenberg-Clark amendment, barring transfer to Britain of any of the German or Italian ships now in American waters.

Administration leaders conceded that a close vote was in prospect on the amendment.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, revealed that Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee and floor manager for the bill, had voted in favor of the amendment in the committee's executive session. (It was rejected by a 10-to-6 vote.)

"Cheap Price to Pay for Unity"

Vandenberg also disclosed that Breckinridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State, testifying before the committee in secret session, had said the Administration planned to use all the 34 foreign ships to be taken over under the bill, including 2 German and 28 Italian vessels, on Western Hemisphere trade routes.

The power to transfer the Axis ships to Britain is "totally unnecessary to accomplish the purposes of this bill," Vandenberg argued, and his amendment would remove from the bill "a provocative act of war."

Vandenberg said he believed the bill would receive almost unanimous support if his amendment carries.

"No Element of Retreat"

"Surely this is a cheap price to pay for unity in the Senate in this crisis," he continued. "The only thing you do by this amendment is to say that this neutral government shall not violate every rule of international law and morality by turning over the ships of one belligerent to another belligerent in a clearly provocative act of war. You do not restrict this Government from turning over any of the 54 neutral foreign ships to the British. You do not restrict this Government from using the 30 belligerent ships for our own requirements."

The decision against offering an anticonvoy amendment to the ship-

Navy's Eagle, Leftist for Years, Now Faces Right

The Navy, discovering that the eagle on its insignia has been facing wrong for more than a century, yesterday ordered that it be turned around to face right instead of left.

The Wrong-Way Eagle

New uniform regulations prescribe that eagles worn on the "front or rear of uniforms" face right and those on the sleeve or shoulder face the front, "in accordance with proper heraldic law." The Navy, it was said, has been using the Napoleonic eagle, which faces left—"in violation of the laws of heraldry."

The eagle on Army insignia now faces to the right, so no change is contemplated by the military service.

Fuehrer's Deputy Mapped His Way to Scottish Estate, London Discloses

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), May 15. Rudolf Hess broke away from Germany as a hopeful missioner of peace, it became known today with the British disclosure that his unauthorized flight out of the Reich was aimed at a rendezvous in Scotland with his old English sports acquaintance, the Duke of Hamilton.

It was hinted, too, that Hitler's runaway deputy was describing internal conditions in Germany to the British government as a basis of the need for his solo mission of peace.

Well-informed British sources said this most amazing "good-will" flight of all time was undertaken in defiance of Hitler, with Hess banking on his friendship with the duke "to bring about some peace negotiations."

Wrote Some Time Ago

Hess and the duke were long acquainted and this ripened to a semblance of friendship at the 1936 Olympic games in Berlin, where both were officials. The friendship was trustful so far as Hess was concerned, for it was disclosed that he wrote a letter—presumably a peace feeler—to the Duke some time ago.

The duke turned the letter over to the government and on its advice he did not reply. What the government did about it remained a mystery but Hess came parachuting down on a Scottish moor near the ducal estate—seeking his answer.

Some of the great mystery may be dispelled in a statement expected later today from Prime Minister Churchill himself on the bewildering Hess case. How Churchill would deliver his eagerly awaited disclosure was not made known.

Full Report Doubtful

Through all the highly guarded secrecy of this momentous wartime mystery it was persistently reported that Churchill personally had interviewed his prize prisoner, or would do so, in an effort to solve the riddle.

However, if Churchill drew the whole story from Hess—and believed it—it is doubtful that he would relay it in toto to the world, for it might involve Nazi secrets too valuable to be revealed.

The British radio announced the preliminary report of Ivone Kirkpatrick, the foreign office attache, formerly of the Berlin embassy staff, who clinched the identification of Hess and interviewed him, has been forwarded to the war cabinet for study.

Field Day for Propagandists

Whatever the outcome of Hess' amazing flight, the British were making intense capital of it, night and day, on the air lanes to Germany. Wednesday night, for instance, this German language broadcast went out from London:

". . . We agree with the German propagandists; Hess desires peace. We also agree that he is in possession of secret information. But isn't it more likely that the Nazis are worried more about the fate of Germany than of Great Britain?"

Authorized sources said that Hess had told the farm folks who took him into custody that he had a message of paramount importance for the duke, information that would be of great use to the British in overthrowing the "tyranny" which he said was prevailing in the Reich.

Moreover, these sources said Hess asserted that Royal Air Force bombings were causing great distress in Germany and that the

Vichy Cabinet Throws in Lot With Germany

But Officials Insist She Won't Give Nazis Fleet, Bases or Army

By Ralph E. Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, May 14.—The French cabinet today unanimously approved Hitler's terms for a scheme of French-German "collaboration," and agreed, in effect, to turn its back on both the United States and Great Britain in favor of the Axis new European order.

The government's decision meant that France, convinced that Germany will win the war, is ready to throw in her lot and her colonial empire with Germany.

Officials insisted, however, that France will not be required to enter the war on Germany's side or put either her fleet, naval bases or army at disposal of the Axis.

The decision, which gave Vice Premier Darlan a free hand to negotiate with the Germans, was taken as the Nazi-controlled French press in Paris lashed out angrily at the United States and warned that France may yet be compelled to fight both the United States and Britain.

President Roosevelt was accused of attempting, through agents in Vichy, to "blackmail" Marshal Petain in hopes of preventing Vichy from entering into a political collaboration pact with Germany.

United States Ambassador William D. Leahy also was bitterly attacked in Paris.

(British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden alleged in the House of Commons Wednesday that the Vichy government has permitted Germany

'Make Them Sweat'

British Radio Plays on Nazi Doubts, Fears

By the Associated Press

London, May 14.—With an incomparable subject at hand—Rudolf Hess and his flight to Scotland—the British radio pulled out the stops today in a ten-a-day schedule of broadcasts designed to keep the Nazi leaders in an agony of doubt and fear as to what their erstwhile colleague was doing and saying in his hidden refuge.

Like the author of a serial thriller, Britain was trying to get the utmost in suspense and mystery from the fantastic affair, at the same time apparently leaving the world in doubt as to whether the former Hitler "shadow" was to be considered hero or villain.

Hess, declared an official of the British Broadcasting Corporation in a remark characteristic of this opening series, already was speaking and writing "words which may make the German high command sweat."

Said a broadcast directed to Germany:

"Nothing precise will be known until Mr. Churchill divulges as much as he thinks fit to divulge of what Rudolf Hess has been reading and writing in the military hospital where he lies."

There was no effort to conceal that the broadcasts and the handi-

Hess Loyal, Just Visionary, Berlin Insists

Fugitive Couldn't Know Inner Secrets, Germans Assert

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 14.—High Nazi sources declared tonight that Deputy Fuehrer Rudolf Hess was a political incompetent who flew to Britain under the spell of a Messiah complex, believing he could end the war and fly home to Germany in about two days.

Berlin will disavow any peace proposals he might make in England, it was asserted, but on the other hand the Nazis denied that he carried any documents likely to disclose German state or military secrets and insisted he was not a traitor.

That he was no turncoat was indicated by his action in permitting his Messerschmitt 110 fighter plane to crash while he parachuted to earth in Scotland at dusk Saturday, the Nazis said. Had he landed the plane, it might have given the English some Messerschmitt construction details, it was asserted here.

Hess, who became a pursuit pilot in 1918 after infantry service on the Western Front, flew to the Glasgow area in the hope of seeing the Duke of Hamilton, on whose estate he landed, authorized party

President Roosevelt yesterday received a verbal report on the British position in the war and needed American aid from James V. Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy, the highest ranking American official, except Sumner Welles, to be sent to Great Britain on a mission since the war started.

Forrestal lunched with the President in his private quarters at the White House and neither executive sources nor Forrestal made any statement to the press. In Administration quarters it was understood, however, that the Navy official informed Mr. Roosevelt that Britain's prime immediate needs were sufficient heavy bombers to

Fairfax Girl Attacked, Burned By Masked Stranger on Farm

A 16-year-old Fairfax County, Va., farm girl was in serious condition at Garfield Hospital last night with burns which she said were inflicted by a masked stranger who assaulted her and then set her bedclothing afire.

The girl, Daisy Kephart, fled from her home about 5 miles from Herndon to a neighbor, Mrs. Edgar Poole, and gave this account of the experience:

She was at home alone about 9 a. m. yesterday, her four younger brothers and sisters having gone to school and her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Kephart, having gone to jobs in the neighborhood.

She answered a knock at the back door and was confronted by a heavy man in green trousers and a sport shirt, the lower part of his face covered with a handkerchief. He demanded breakfast and she refused to

Churchill Wary of Hess, Officials Say

British Prime Minister Winston Churchill has adopted an extremely skeptical attitude toward his unexpected visitor, Rodolf Hess, experienced official observers here believed yesterday on the basis of evidence.

One government official with an intimate knowledge of the British government based on long experience in London said it was of great significance that Ivone A. Kirkpatrick, formerly British Minister in Berlin, was dispatched to Glasgow to identify and talk with Hess rather than Sir Nevile Henderson, formerly British Ambassador to Germany, who also knew the No. 3 Nazi well.

The Post's informant said that Kirkpatrick, minister under Henderson as well as under his predecessor at the Berlin Embassy, was known for the distrust, skepticism and distaste with which he regarded the Nazi leaders, including Hess.

Sir Nevile Liked Him

Sir Nevile, on the other hand, had good words for Hess in his book, "Failure of a Mission," an account of his observations written after the war began.

Kirkpatrick was picked to conduct the first interviews with Hess, it was explained, because he would be less likely to be taken in by any ruse than almost any other diplomatic officer who knew the former Deputy Fuehrer.

According to protocol and precedence Sir Nevile, who was the last chief of mission in Berlin, should have received the assignment.

Bailey Gives View

These considerations lead some American officials to conclude that Churchill has adopted from the first an extremely circumspect attitude toward his uninvited guest, that the British government will make full propaganda capital out of the strange incident, but that it will not allow itself to be hoodwinked by any trick, if such be the motive behind the Hess flight to Scotland.

Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, in a Senate debate on the ship seizure bill, expressed the opinion that Hess fled Germany "because he could not trust Hitler."

"Hitler can give us no assurances," said Bailey, "because there are no assurances in him."

Linked to Buchmanism

Hess went to Britain as a Buchmanite ,a follower of the American preacher and missionary, Frank Nathan Daniel Buchman, who founded the so-called Oxford movement which swept England and part of the European continent just before the war, William Hillman, European director of Colliers, declared last night in a broadcast over a National Broadcasting Co. hook-up.

"Great secrecy surrounds most of what Hess told the British following his fantastic visit to Britain by parachute," Hillman said. "But this I am able to reveal: Hess went to Britain as a penitent seeking peace, as a Buchmanite moved to confess his sins and mistakes and that of his Nazi associates and try and plead with the British to help him put an end to the slaughter of men."

headquarters declared.

They said these two had met at the Olympic Games in Germany in 1936 and had kept in touch thereafter, the duke being described here as a member of a pacifist organization.

(When the Duke was the Marquess of Clydesdale, and also in the House of Commons, some English newspapers listed him as a member of the Anglo-German Association, which had as its purpose the fostering of friendship between the two nations. This society was dissolved before the war.)

"Hess had the fixed idea he was a sort of Messiah who, by a spectacular individual gesture, could bring about a termination of hostilities," a Nazi spokesman said, asserting that the peace complex and other details of the quixotic scheme were disclosed in "rather copious documents which Hess left behind" when he flew from Augsburg.

While emphasizing that the German government knew nothing of these plans, the spokesman said Hess had expected to fulfill the peace mission in about two days and return freely to Germany with gasoline (and presumably a plane) furnished by the British.

"He believed he was so situated that he could bring about peace by agreement between Germany and England if he were able to bring the truth to England," it was asserted.

"Naturally Rudolf Hess was not initiated in plans of the Reich's supreme military leadership, which —as is known—are available to a circle of only a very few persons.

"On the other hand, he knew enough that he was convinced the German?English War would be carried out to its last consequence, regardless of what support England should yet receive, and that it must end not only with the defeat but the destruction of England."

This source went on to say that Hess knew "England had made false assumptions not only about Germany's military but about her interior and economic conditions and that continuance of the war was possible only through Churchill and his clique, who alone hinder world peace."

Thus, it was said, Hess wanted to see the Duke of Hamilton and other personalities to acquaint them with "the real situation."

The spokesman said Hess "considered discussion with Churchill useless because he (Hess) had expressly observed that he had no wish to confer with the English prime minister under any circumstances."

(Regardless of whether this is the case, dispatches from London said Hess was going to have an interview with Churchill, and soon.)

He confided that he had made the most painstaking preparations for his flight—a statement borne out by the map he carried and its markings showing the Duke of Hamilton's estate as the journey's end.

While there was no official confirmation of Hess' mysterious peace plan, reliable sources said that since his arrival by plane and parachute Saturday night, Hess had given the British government "highly useful information."

Hess did finally see the duke, but only after he was under guard in a Glasgow hospital, under treatment for an ankle fracture suffered in his parachute leap from a commandeered Messerschmitt plane in which he flew from Germany Saturday night.

What they discussed was not disclosed.

That Hess was bound on his mysterious mission directly to the duke was left in no doubt whatever. It was announced that he had with him a map on which his course from Augsburg, Bavaria, to the duke's estate at Dungavel, Scotland, was marked in blue pencil.

The duke's castel was ringed as journey's end.

Hess landed less than 15 miles away, an amazing feat of navigation considering the means at his command.

When he came down near Newton Mearns, a village barely 8 miles from Glasgow, his first words were to ask the way to Dungavel, the Press Association said.

David McLean, the farmer who captured Hess with a pitchfork, said "Hess did not say why he wanted to see the duke, but was obviously very anxious to do so," the Press Association reported. Instead, McLean turned Hess over to the home guards who took him to a hospital.

Had Hess landed in the Dungavel grounds, he still would have missed the duke, who was absent on military duty as an R. A. F. squadron leader.

The castle has been used since October, 1939, as a military convalescent home.

Hess and the Duke had met several times before the war in connection with flying and skiing activities in which they both were interested and at the 1936 Olympic games in Germany, when they both were officials.

The Duke of Hamilton is premier Peer of Scotland, with lands and titles dating back to 1339. His estate is one of the largest in the entire country.

He succeeded to the title only last year on the death of his father, the 13th duke.

Not only the duke himself, but his youngest brother, Lord David Douglas-Hamilton, and David's wife, the former Prunella Stack, have traveled extensively in Germany.

Lady Douglas-Hamilton, as head of the Women's League of Health and Beauty, took a team of her physical culturists to Germany's "Strength Through Joy" convention at Hamburg in 1938, the year she was married.

Lord David once worked as a coal miner in Germany's Ruhr district, and also worked in two German labor camps. Like his brother, he is in the R. A. F.

The duke in 1937 married Lady Elizabeth Percy, daughter of the Eighth Duke of Northumberland, thus uniting two of the oldest Scottish families which in medieval days were blood enemies.

Their wedding was an outstanding social event, and among the gifts was one from German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, then Ambassador to London.

Strasser Predicts Hess' Act Will Lead to Early Invasion

Montreal, May 14 (AP).—Dr. Otto Strasser, the anti-Nazi "Black Front" leader, predicted in an interview today that Germany would attempt to invade Britain as quickly as possible as a result of the flight of Rudolf Hess.

"Hitler hopes that even if Hess should say something the British could not prepare a defense quickly enough to matter," said the former associate of the German chancellor. "The Germans have a long timetable of war and cannot quickly change it."

Strasser said he also thought that Hess' flight would bring almost instant close collaboration between Hitler and Joseph Stalin.

"Stalin and Hitler will cooperate," he predicted. "That is the only chance Germany has of victory. I think that Russian troops will enter Iran at the same time the Nazis make their attack on Palestine and Iraq.

"There will be no formal declaration of war. In my opinion, Russian troops will go to the Indian Ocean through Iran. This will be part of the great price Stalin will force Hitler to pay for Russian collaboration."

Nazi Party Takes Over News of Hess

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, May 14.—Germany's national shock-absorber, the Nazi Party organization, flung itself today under Adolf Hitler's direction into the task of giving the population an explanation of what lay back of the flight to Scotland of Rudolf Hess, the Fuehrer's deputy.

The first step was taken yesterday, when Hitler met his district leaders. Step by step the official reassurances will be spread out over all Germany, down to the remotest villages.

Nazi leaders frankly admitted the shock of having the Fuehrer's personal friend and one of his most devoted followers suddenly fly out of the "family circle" into the camp of the enemy would be tremendous.

But they insisted that the party organization was designed to meet just such a situation as this.

Story Vanishes From Papers

One of the first signs that the party organization had taken over the job of quieting unrest was the abrupt disappearance from newspapers of stories on one of the most disturbing events Germany has experienced in years.

In its propaganda machinery Germany does not depend upon newspapers or radio to handle the most difficult problems of shaping or controliing public sentiment.

That job falls to the party organization, which reaches down to every block in every city and town in Germany.

Only a trifling remnant of the population, living on isolated farms, may fail to feel the direct impact of the party's effort to mobilize public sentiment.

Orders Passed Along

What the message to the population is to be can be only partly surmised from what already has been made public.

The party machine works this way: From Hitler, or from those assigned by him to the task, the district leaders get definite instructions on what they shall tell the people. These orders are passed along to subordinates, each of whom is in charge of a city or section of a city.

Under these officials come still more subordinates, each responsible in his particular section. But even he is relatively a "big shot," in charge of perhaps 100,000 persons. Under him come "circle" leaders who are assigned to a partieular number of blocks in a city or village. Then come the actual block leaders, whose job it is to complete the task of conveying Hitler's reactions to every person in his block.

Fresh News Promised

Sources here said that while ordinarily it might take a week or two weeks to get the message distributed, this time the case is more urgent and action will be quicker.

Meanwhile foreign correspondents were assured that something would be happening very soon which would blot out the Hess episode.

Authorized sources quickly disclaimed any intention of predicting that this might be a military action, but said that it would be something tremendous.

President Calls For Flag Day Programs June 14

President Roosevelt declared yesterday that "the principles of unity and freedom" symbolized by the American flag are under attack, as he proclaimed June 14 as flag day and called for suitable public and private celebrations.

In emphasizing what he felt to be the dangers to American institutions at present, the President said that at this time "it is especially fitting that we reaffirm our faith in the ideals for which our flag stands and our loyalty to the nation over which it has waved for a century and a half."

ing of the affair in general were intended to build up the greatest possible unrest among German listeners.

No opportunity was lost to impress that Hess must have had the help of many persons to escape; that his plane had a special gasoline tank fitted; that it all was symptomatic of an ultimate breakdown of German faith in Hitler.

Churchill was expected to make a statement about the flight of Hess to Scotland. Meanwhile, the whole subject continued to occupy almost everybody from top to bottom. Foreign Minister Anthony Eden offered this theory in a luncheon talk:

"A small group of men possessed of immense military power are trying to impose their rule by force on all civilization.

"When you have that spectacle you are certain to see something else, too.

"You are certain to see in time of stress and strain evidence among that small group of men not only of tension but of dissension.

"In this you may well find, in part at least, an explanation of the parachute descent that so electrified the world last weekend."

Hess himself was said authoritatively to be "writing and reading"—this for the second consecutive day—and occasionally listening to the radio, perhaps to the British Broadcasting Corporation's accounts of his case.

Remaining with him was Ivone Kirkpatrick of the British foreign office—and it was said, too, that in the party that accompanied him from a Glasgow hospital to his present retreat were high officers of military intelligence.

Hess' broken ankle was reported on the mend.

"He's cranky about what he eats," said a member of the hospital staff. "Guess he has a reason at that: He made his flight with only compressed food tablets."

The Nazi deserter, this informant added, has no nurse. Instead, there is a captain of a famous regiment to keep him company when Hess is not otherwise engaged—part of his time being spent in reading mystery novels.

Outside the door soldiers stand guard. Every dish of salmon, chicken or eggs—upon which Hess insists—passes the most minute examination before it is admitted to his convalescent chamber.

In the press some news columns showed a disposition to portray Hess as a disillusioned idealist; others described him as a villian, and the London Mirror editorially suggested "restraining our native credulity and our extraordinarily easygoing habit of making heroes out of Huns."

A letter of protest was published against the action of the B. B. C. in quoting an authoritative statement that Hess' flight showed "great physical and moral courage."

U. S., Canada Form Information Board

Creation of a new joint committee, to link the United States and Canada in the exchange of "vital information" on their supplies of strategic war materials, was announced yesterday by William S. Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management.

Membership of the group is: for Canada, G. C. Bateman and H. J. Symington, both members of the Canadian War Time Industry Control Board; for the United States, E. R. Stettinius, jr., director of priorities of the OPM, and William L. Batt, deputy director of priorities of the OPM, and William L. Batt, deputy director of the OPM production division.

Winant Cites Effectiveness Of Convoys

By the Associated Press

London, May 14.—John G. Winant, United States Ambassador, brought a London audience cheering to its feet today with a "do it now" speech in which he declared the destinies of free people might hinge "on the wise use of the navies of the world."

He spoke before a luncheon meeting of the English-speaking Union, and he declared that if the United States and Britain would not "put off for tomorrow what can be done today, the victory for freedom will come sooner than we dare hope."

"When clever, cunning dictators are striking with lightning speed at every free nation that dares stand in their way," he said, "the time has come for the democratic nations to prove to the world that while they are free to debate they have the power and the will to act."

Winant referred indirectly to the latest disclosures of British shipping losses in the battle of the Atlantic and said they did not tell the whole story, but served to prove "the protective power of adequate convoy."

The most recent admiralty figures showed that shipping losses in the Atlantic were 301,070 tons in April, the lowest in this area in months.

This news has been treated with reserve by the press and it has expressed that there still is considerable anxiety over Atlantic sinkings.

"Not Britain's Fight Alone"

Winant said that "freedom loving and peace loving people of this earth are coming to realize that this is not Britain's fight alone."

He expressed hope that in debate over losses at sea of goods manufactured in the United States both Britons and Americans "realize that the mere statement of sinkings of ships from America does not tell the whole story."

"It only proves, as does the successful transport of troops to the Middle East, the protective power of adequate convoy," he said.

"Such figures do not show the necessity of selection. They do not disclose what food may have been taken from the children of Britain to give her soldiers arms.

"They tell only a small part of the battle of the Atlantic and of the shipping problem to be faced in the prosecution of total war. In total war, it is total strength that counts."

The Ambassador declared that so far, the totalitarians have been "pallingly successful" in "keeping their threats and breaking their promises," warning that "when dictators conspire together, men and women of good will everywhere must act together."

Referring to the naval experience of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, Winant said "a kindly providence at this time of stress and danger has placed at the heads of the two great English-speaking peoples two men whose knowledge of the sea is probably greater than that of any statesmen of any kind."

"We Need Our Brothers"

Saying the democracies had slept while the dictators conspired, the Ambassador added:

"We have all tried to make ourselves believe that we were not our brother's keeper; but we now are beginning to realize that we need our brothers as much as our brothers need us."

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, speaking after Winant, declared that "overthrow of Nazi tyranny is the first condition for all progress in the world, but there is something more than that."

"In the growth of understanding between our two peoples," he said, "lies the greatest hope for the future of the world that will emerge after this ordeal is passed.

"Between your Government and ours there are no treaties, there are no sealed deeds and documents.

"There is something much deeper than that. We, at heart, care strongly for the same thing. Great Britain and the United States share the same traditions and we here know you understand us when we say that, rather than yield up the faith in which we believe, we are prepared to suffer whatever it may be that German military might can impose."

U.S. Bomber to Fly Serum to Brazil

By the Associated Press

A 22-ton Army bomber will fly $5,000 worth of serum to Brazil, where the rising Gualba River is reported to have made 50,000 persons homeless at Porto Alegre, the Red Cross announced yesterday.

The plane, piloted by Maj. R. E. Koon and carrying a crew of five, is scheduled to take off from here today for Rio de Janeiro, from where the serum will be transshipped.

On the basis of reports from Ambassador Jefferson Caffrey that outside help is urgently needed, the Red Cross is sending typhoid serum for 16,000 persons, diphtheria serum for 15,250 and dysentry serum for 250, with appliances for administering it.

Russia, France Set for Roles In New Drama

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, May 14.—Events of the utmost importance, expected to take place within the next few weeks, have been discussed in Rome during the last few days.

Details, even if avialable, could not be mentioned, but it would probably be a good guess that the chief protagonist of the new drama will be Russia, although France obviously is slated for a great role.

There has not been what one can call a tripartite meeting in Rome, but representatives of three countries have had several talks, which taken in conjunction, amounts to the same thing.

Japan, of course, is interested in Russia and the United States, but not especially in France. Italy is interested primarily in France and the Dalmatian coast, and it seems fairly certain a definite solution of the Croatian problem is coming along in a matter of days.

It would surprise no one here to find that Croatia will be Europe's latest kingdom, like Albania, and perhaps with the same king. Germany is the one power interested in everything and pulling the strings.

So far as Rusia is concerned, there is good reason to suppose she is willing to make the utmost concessions to gain Germany's good will. She has already made a number of minor ones in closing the diplomatic representations of German-occupied countries and recognizing Iraq's pro-German government. But it is understood that Moscow would go very much further if offered the opportunity.

The general opinion here is that Italy is getting such great concessions out of Yugoslav territory that she cannot expect to get anything out of the French.

The newspapers today have the tripartite pact and Japan very much on their minds. Virginio Gayda writes three vehement columns, trying to persuade the United States that she ought to be afraid of Japan and realize that Japan is going into the war if the United States intervenes against the Axis.

Axis Forces About Salum Thrown Back

By the Associated Press

Cairo, May 14.—German-Italian troops have been thrown back 40 miles to positions south and west of Salum and are under the continual harassment of British imperial forces, the British Middle East command said today.

(The Germans contended they and their Italian allies had advanced 45 miles east of the border village of Salum in a surprise attack begun Monday.)

In addition, the British communique said the imperial garrison besieged at Tobruk, 80 miles within Libya, inflicted "many casualties" and destroyed two German tanks in a "limited offensive operation."

(The Italian high command said Italian troops "bravely repelled" a strong British tank attack at Tobruk, inflicting losses in men and machines on the British.)

Continuing the roundup of Italians in Ethiopia, the British announced capture of 500 prisoners, two artillery batteries, five light tanks and an antitank gun in seizing strongly-defended positions in the lake region south of Addis Ababa, and said they took more than 100 other prisoners from the rear guard of the Italians retreating along the Neghelli-Dalle Road.

Two imperial forces pressed on toward Amba Alaji, one of the last Italian strong points, northeast of Addis Ababa.

Hitler's Personal Message Again Assures Turkey Of His Continued Friendship

By C. L. Sulzberger

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, May 14.—A personal message of friendship from Adolf Hitler was delivered this afternoon to President Ismet Inonu by Franz von Papen, recently returned German Ambassador.

The fuehrer's words were delivered to the President in the presence of Foreign Minister Shugru Saracoglu.

This is the second message of this sort from Hitler to Inonu within three months. The first followed the occupation of Bulgaria by Nazi troops.

Presumably today's message carried the fuehrer's reassurances of good intentions.

How long these soft-spoken tactics will continue is difficult to say, but the impression of British here is that the Reich soon will begin making specific requests.

It is widely believed the minimum objective of the Germans will be a far-reaching new economic agreement, and the Turkish press has intimated this country is ready to extend its trade relations. Turkey is practically cut off from British markets.

The only free ports available to British shipping now are Mersin, Antalya and Iskenderun. New harbor installations are being set up at Iskenderun, which will become the principal commercial link between Turkey, Britain and America.

It is thought probable that Germany will ask Turkey to supply food from her Aegean ports to the recently acquired Greek Islands, and German merchants have been making sizable purchases around Izmir (Smyrna).

Some British diplomats believe Von Papen might eventually request Turkey's permission to send war materials across this country as one clause in an economic pact.

Von Papen is postponing the inevitable question of amended Turkish-German relations—altered by the Balkan situation—and will first await developments in Syria, it is believed. Everyone here is becoming increasingly convinced trouble there is imminent. Foreign newspaper reporters are now banned from crossing Syria.

New groups of German "tourists" are constantly entering Syria. It would appear likely that some are personages of considerable importance, since German consulate officials in Istanbul meet almost every Black Sea boat as it comes through the Bosphorus and care for some of these "tourists" until they board the express for Aleppo and Tripoli.

Nadji Chevket, Iraqi defense minister, has delayed his departure for Bagdad in order to see Von Papen. It is believed he wishes to order German war materials and to arrange for the delivery of those already ordered.

British Need Planes First, Roosevelt Told

eliminate the convoy problem, heavy tanks to meet the assault of any mechanized forces Germany may succeed in landing in Britain, and ships.

Forrestal was also represented in these quarters as having advised the President that the morale of the common people of Britain was so high despite persistent bombings that there would be a revolution if any British government tried to negotiate a peace, and that the position of Winston Churchill, British Prime Minister, was stronger than at any previous time.

Administration circles believed that if the United States could get Britain shortly about 200 heavy bombers, capable of flying up to 3,000 miles, these planes could practically eliminate the threat to vital British shipping from Axis surface raiders and submarines. It was believed here that at least that many could be sent to Britain by the end of the summer.

President Roosevelt, on May 5, saying that the democracies "can and must" obtain control of the air, ordered a "substantial increase" in production of heavy bombers.

With the danger from surface raiders to shipping carrying American war supplies abroad greatly reduced by extension of the American naval patrol and observation service far out across the Atlantic, there is a growing belief in informed Administration circles that American naval escorts for convoys would not be necessary, at least for the present.

It was believed that the British need for heavy tanks, which Forrestal reportedly emphasized in his talk with the President, indicated that the British still expect an invasion attempt at any time. Britain is producing few heavy bombers and few larger tanks.

The undersecretary of the Navy also was said to have told Mr. Roosevelt that the Royal Air Force has made great progress, through use of new techniques, in combating German night attacks through the air. The British believe, he is represented as having informed his chief, that if they can bring down 10 per cent of the planes coming over, they can smash the effectiveness of these raids as they virtually eliminated daylight raiding shortly after the collapse of France.

Although this was the only information about the undersecretary's mission which could be gleaned with any accuracy yesterday from Administration quarters, other informed sources here said that a difference of opinion about the value of convoys—ships travelling together in groups—is developing in Britain.

Some British circles are said to have made a careful study of the success of fast ships traveling alone in getting through the Nazi raider, submarine and air blockade and of convoys, and to be inclined to believe that for much of the way across the ocean it is safer for the faster ships to travel alone.

with headquarters at Bolling Field here, led the flight. He took off from San Francisco at 9:29 E. S. T. Tuesday night. The last bomber arrived at Hickam Field at 11:28 E. S. T. yesterday morning. Col. Eugene L. Eubank commanded the group of planes.

As the bombers are land planes, the Navy provided destroyers at three stations en route in case anything went wrong with the flight.

Defense chiefs have taken every precaution to make Hawaii impregnable. As base of the mighty Pacific fleet, it is the key to the entire Pacific defense situation. Besides aircraft and huge 16-inch guns, some 40,000 of the Army's most seasoned troops now garrison the islands.

In another announcement yesterday, the War Department said that the Regular Army antiaircraft strength has more than tripled in the past year and that National Guard antiaircraft regiments have been more than doubled in this time. The exact strength was not given.

Air Raid Spotters To Ring 2 Coasts

Networks of civilian aircraft spotters will be organized by June 5 on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts to participate in air raid warning operations with the General Headquarters Air Force, it was announced yesterday. Frank Bane, chairman of the Division of State and local cooperation, said the service would be organized in other areas later.

Bane instructed each State defense council to develop immediately a statewide organization for registering volunteers.

Senate Isolationists Defer Convoy Showdown

ping bill was made known after a conference in the offices of Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, attended by Tobey, Senators Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and several other isolationist spokesmen. It was their second strategy conference of the day.

"The consensus," Taft reported, "was that there are better ways, from a parliamentary standpoint, to bring the convoy issue before the Senate."

One device that might be employed, he said, would be a motion to discharge the Foreign Relations Committee from consideration of Tobey's anticonvoy resolution, which it refused two weeks ago to report to the Senate. It also voted against committee hearings on the resolution.

Senate polls have indicated certain defeat for any anticonvoy amendment offered as a rider to the shipping bill, and isolationists feared such a vote might be interpreted as Senate approval of convoying.

"The Senate is supposed to be the greatest deliberative body in the world, and we want it to consider convoys uncomplicated by another issue," Clark said.

Tobey declined last night to say in so many words that he would not offer his amendment, but he told reporters "There will be no element of retreat in my decision—convoys will be debated by the Senate at the proper time."

Senator Bailey opened debate on the shipping bill with an acknowledgement that the action contemplated by the measure is "without precedent" and that the United States "might invite retaliation" by taking over ships in its harbors.

Questioned by Vandenberg on the international law involved, Bailey said the United States, in its relations with Germany, "is dealing with a nation that disregards the moral law."

Vandenberg said he favored "aiding courageous, intrepid Britain to the last material possibility," but declared that the transfer of Axis ships to Britain might plunge the United States into a war opposed by at least 90 per cent of its people.

Facing Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who recently urged the United States to "get tough" with the Axis and occupy Iceland, Dakar, Singapore, the Azores and other points, Vandenberg attacked "some of our more belligerent gladiators who would plunge us into a war on four continents and two oceans, when we are unprepared for a war on one continent."

Pepper and Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, led the opposition from the floor to the Vandenberg-Clark amendment.

Peace Pickets March On With New Lantern

Special details of White House and Metropolitan police, marines and soldiers last night kept peace for American Peace Mobilization pickets who marched with a new lantern in front of the White House, after a lone marine attacked a picket earlier in the day and was arrested.

The picketing continued at the end of a day in which more than 200 members of Women United, Inc., a new anti-war group, arrived at the White House to express their disapproval of involvement in a foreign war with a petition to the President. Eight delegates form the union of physically handicapped, who are here to demand defense jobs, also picketed the Executive Mansion yesterday.

Pvt. Andrew P. Tomaszky, on furlough from the Marine training camp at Parris Island, S. C., was the man who knocked the old lantern from a picket's hands with his belt, police said. He was turned over to Marine authorities.

Third Clash in Week

It was the third time since the pickets began their "perpetual peace vigil" last Friday that service men have clashed with them.

Tomaszky was seized by Capt. Herbert L. Marcey, of the White House police, and Pvt. R. S. Eichelberger, detailed to White House duty from the Tenth Precinct.

Members of Women United arrived shortly after Tomaszky was arrested and waited in an orderly group outside the White House gates while their president, Mrs. Hall Herrick, Boston artist, and Mrs. Sara Gordon, of New York, presented their petition to Presidential aides.

Their resolution asked Prseident Roosevelt to assure them American troops would not be sent to foreign soil. It protested "against further American involvement in the war."

In the afternoon delegations from the organization visited the offices of Senators and Representatives on Capitol Hill. Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York told them Congress will defeat any proposal to establish convoys.

See Many Secretaries

Women United, Inc., met 1,000 strong in the House Caucus Room on Capitol Hill. They cheered a series of antiwar speeches from a Congressional delegation that included Representative Fish of New York, and Rankin of Montana, both Republicans.

Then, under the careful chaperonage of the Capitol police, they spent the balance of the afternoon in a large-scale demonstration of the tell-it-to-your-Congressman technique.

In groups of a dozen to 50, each with a policeman escort, they made the rounds of the Congressional offices with arguments against convoys.

Toward the close of the day the leader of one of these groups was asked if they had seen many members of Congress. She replied:

"No, but we certainly have seen a lot of secretaries."

Most of the women arrived by train from New York City, New Jersey and Connecticut at 11 a. m.

The women unanimously adopted a resolution petitioning President Roosevelt to "give us assurance" that "American boys . . . shall not be sent to fight in any place outside of the United States . . ."

Shout in the Senate

During Senate debate of the ship-seizure bill, some of the women sat in the galleries. Senators were made aware of their presence by a shout of approval sent up during an attack on the measure by Senator Brooks (Republican), of Illinois.

Public airing of findings of investigators assigned to the Washington branch of the American Peace Mobilization was scheduled by a subcommittee of the Dies Committee yesterday.

A subcommittee headed by Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, and including Representatives Mason (Republican), of Illinois, and Voorhis (Democrat), of California, will start the hearing at 10 a. m. Wednesday, it was announced.

The investigation was ordered by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, committee chairman, when Mrs. Sarah V. Montgomery, secretary of the Washington branch, testified at a hearing that the organization has no records.

Two photographers, who said they were from the Dies Committee popped in and out of the picket line yesterday, attempting to "shoot" the marchers' faces. Some pickets, as the "shifts" changed, begun using their signs to hide their faces.

Six-Alarm Fire Rages in Baltimore

Baltimore, May 14 (AP).—A six-alarm fire which broke out just before midnight tonight destroyed the steamer Tolchester, tied up at the Tolchester Line pier, and threatened adjacent piers of the Old Bay Line and Chesapeake Line in downtown Baltimore.

The fire, of undetermined origin, leaped to the steamer Southport. The Southport was cut loose from the dock and a fireboat towed her into the harbor where the flames were extinguished.

Six alarms were sounded in ten minutes as firemen battled to keep the flames from spreading to adjoining piers.

La Follette Scores Stimson and Knox

New York, May 14 (AP).—Philip F. La Follette, former Governor of Wisconsin, tonight urged the removal from office of Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox for "pushing the Nation to the brink of war," and asked Americans to "help President Roosevelt fulfill his promises to keep America out of war."

In a talk prepared for an America First rally in Brooklyn, La Follette described Stimson and Knox as "Republican jokers running wild in the New Deal" and attacked their recent talks as "designed to frighten and terrorize the American people into waging a war they do not want."

Thereupon the man forced his way into the kitchen. The girl tried to beat him back with a broom, but he took it away from her, dragged her into a bedroom, stripped off her clothing and attacked her.

Before he left, he set fire to the bedclothing with newspapers, saying, "I'm going to fix you so you'll never tell."

The girl managed to put out the blaze and go to Mrs. Poole's home nearby. They proceeded to the home of Mrs. Tulius Fleming, where there was a telephone, and assistance was called.

Dr. E. C. Shull, of Herndon, gave the girl first aid before she was taken to the hospital by the Herndon Rescue Squad.

They said she has improved since her arrival but still was in serious condition, with severe burns of the arms, thighs and back.

Fairfax County police commanded by Chief Carl McIntosh scoured the woods without success in a search for the masked man. Bloodhounds brought from Lorton Reformatory in charge of Capt. Paul Pegelow were put on the trail but later withdrawn.

President Favors Steep Profits Taxes

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night was revealed as favoring excess profits taxes on corporations only slightly short of the maximum 80 per cent rate in force during the World War and which would yield almost a billion dollars in revenue annually.

This disclosure was made by high ranking Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee, who also hinted that the Treasury may increase its tax program to $4,000,000,000, the additional revenue to come from higher excess profits levies.

President Roosevelt was reliably reported to be in favor of the excess profits tax plan submitted to the committee by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board and Defense Price Administrator Leon Henderson, as against the Treasury's proposal to raise only $400,000,000 additional from this source.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was learned, sent Sherman Minton, former Senator from Indiana and now executive assistant at the White House, to Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, to request that Eccles and Henderson be invited to testify. This was done last week. After Eccles and Henderson, both of whom criticized certain phases of the Morgenthau program, testified, Minton went back to Doughton to learn the committee's reaction.

Morgenthau Favors Plan

As a result of numerous conferences, Democratic members said, Secretary Morgenthau was now in favor of the Eccles-Henderson excess profits plan.

Further, they indicated, the Treasury will claim that in order to carry out the formula of paying two-thirds of the defense program out of revenues and one-third by borrowed money, more money will be needed to meet unanticipated stepping up of defense spending.

Assistant Secretary John L. Sullivan will present the revised excess profits tax plan tomorrow, Doughton announced.

At yesterday's hearings, Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale University, urged the committee to avoid taxes on savings of corporations to encourage expansion and proposed that the Government tax only that portion of a person's income which he spends.

The plan also includes levying heavily on the estate left by the taxpayer at death.

Fisher said such a levy would not "kill the goose that lays the golden egg," which he contended was the case with levies on capital accumulations. In addition to individuals, he suggested that a spending tax be applied to partnerships and corporations.

Same Income Tax Exemptions

He proposed rates starting at 5 per cent on spendings up to $5,000 by single individuals and $10,000 for maried couples, and rising to 50 per cent on spending above $45,000 by single persons and $90,000 by couples.

In advance of applying the spendings levy, the taxpayer would be allowed exemptions of $800 for single persons and $2,000 for married couples, the current income tax exemptions.

Clinton M. Hester, of Washington, representing the United States Brewers' Association, declared the proposed increase from $6 to $7 a barrel on beer would yield no more revenue than the present tax. It would reduce consumption and drive many brewers out of business, he said.

Representative Dikrsen (Republican), Illinois, meanwhile introduced in the House a resolution demanding that President Roosevelt inform Congress whether he would recommended any sepecfic reductions in the Federal budget.

Dirksen, in a brief speech on the House floor, said that he offered the resolution in connection with Secretary Morgenthau's suggestion that nondefense spending might be reduced by $1,000,000,000.

Daughter Born To Mrs. Ickes

MRS. HAROLD L. ICKES, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, gave birth to an 8¼-pound daughter yesterday in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. The child is the second of the 67-year-old Cabinet member and the former Miss Jane Dahlman, of Milwaukee. A son, Harold McEwen, was born September 4, 1939. At the Interior Department it was said, "mother, father and child are all doing fine"

U. S. Licenses Machine Tools For Russia

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The American Government granted licenses for the export of $1,000,000 worth of machine tools to the Soviet Union last week, it was learned authoritatively here yesterday Machine tools figure on the list of commodities which require export licenses under the supervision of Brig. Gen. Russell L. Maxwell, administrator of export control. Gen. Maxwell was quoted last week as saying that the general policy being followed, with regard to exports to Russia is "to keep all the tools and machinery we need and let what we don't need go."

The fact that the American Government has permitted further exports of machine tools to Russia comes as a surprise as it was generally believed that the Administration had tightened the screws on American trade with Russia since hte latter concluded a neutrality pact with Japan last month. The appeasement policy pursued until then with a view to keeping Russia from the Axis was generally considered to have been definitely set aside.

Soviet Ambassador Constantine Oumansky called on Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday afternoon in the first meeting the two have had for over a year, since the City of Flint was a lively topic of diplomatic controversy. It was also the first call of the Russian Ambassador at the State Department since the conclusion of the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles was present part of the time at yesterday's meeting which lasted one hour and was also attended by the Soviet Counselor of Embassy, Andrei A. Gromyko.

Senate Unit Keeps Priority Power in OPM

By the Associated Press

Urged to speedy action by defense officials, the Senate Military Affairs Committee voted unanimously yesterday to give the Office of Production Management undisputed authority to channel the flow of supplies into defense industry and to dictate which products are to be manufactured first.

The committee struck out of a House-approved bill a provision to establish a priorities division independent of the defense agency and operating under the Munitions Control Board.

As approved by the committee, the measure would give legal status to priority orders issued by the Office of Production Management affecting the production and disposition of raw materials and finished products.

The eliminated provision setting up a separate priorities division—a last minute addition by the House—had provoked a storm of protest from Administration quarters that it would divide the authority over this important function and disturb the present OPM setup. There had been reports that William S. Knudsen, OPM director, would resign if this provision were not eliminated but Knudsen smilingly denied this.

Favor Present Setup

One by one, the defense officials—including Knudsen, Edward R. Stettinius, jr., director of priorities; Leon Henderson, price control administrator, and Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War—arose to tell the committee the present system of fixing production priorities was working well and ought not to be disturbed.

What they wanted, the officials said, was to have statutory authority to give the right of way to materials which were being produced for the British or supplies which were not directly connected with Army and Navy contracts, but nevertheless were esential to defense.

Their legal power to order priorities, it was added, extended only to Army and Navy contracts. They said that while industry voluntarily had followed OPM'S orders elsewhere, they wanted to preclude any challenge to their authority to enforce such orders.

System Criticized

While this was going on, however, a hearing by the Senate Defense Investigating Committee headed by Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, produced sharp criticism of the OPM's present system of fixing priorities through committees made up in part of representatives of the industries affected.

Frank B. Cliff, of the OPM Priorities Division, testified that "voting members" of the priority committee on aluminum and magnesium included Ralph Farrell, chairman of the Fairmont Aluminum Co.; E. J. Barney, of the frigidaire division of General Motors Corporation, and a representative each of the Army and Navy.

While Cliff insisted that the final decisions on priorities were made by Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth University, chairman of the committee, Truman said it appeared to him that the matter was "in the hands of men whose interests are most at stake."

R. A. F. Renews Day Attacks on Nazi Bases, Blasts Helgoland Naval Center, Ostend Airport

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, May 14.—Renewing their daylight attacks on German bases following the waning of the moonlight, R. A. F. bombers yesterday raided the fortified Nazi naval stronghold at Helgoland, bombed and fired jetties and buildings and swooped low to machine gun naval barracks.

The British onslaught followed by only a few hours an attack by R. A. F. fighters at dawn yesterday on a Nazi-held airfield at Ostend, Belgium. Two hurricane planes among others swept across enemy bases, at 100 feet altitude and one squadron leader reported a brilliant red explosion following his machine gunning of a large hangar. Other hangars and a barracks block were swept by the British planes' fire. Hurricanes inflicted casualties on Nazi gun posts between the airfield and the sea.

Docks and shipping at St. Nazaire, in France, also suffered heavily. A German supply ship of about 12,000 tons was hit directly amidships by British bombs and set ablaze. More bombs struck a 2,000-ton Nazi vessel off Ushant nearby and left it sinking. The British lost two planes in a day attack on St. Nazaire, which followed one of the night before.

In the daylight onslaught on Helgoland, British bombers had the full advantage of a surprise and sent inhabitants of the town and the naval garrison into confusion. A full squadron of R. A. F. planes attacked in line abreast at 150 feet. Before antiaircraft gunners could open up, the British pilots were sweeping over their targets and dropped sticks of powerful explosives. Columns of smoke, made more dense by the dust and debris of shattered buildings, spurted immediately to dim the surrounding cliffs.

Luftwaffe Visits 2 Scottish Towns

London (Thursday), May 15 (AP). German planes were reported in the vicinity of two towns on the East Coast of Scotland early today—the only Luftwaffe activity over Britain reported thus far since nightfall.

Daylight activity over Britain yesterday was limited to several forays by individual bombers at points on the South Coast, in the Midlands and in Eastern England, the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security reported.

German Bombers Claim Hit on Merchantman

Berlin, May 14 (AP).—German bombers hit and sank a 3,000-ton merchant ship near Great Yarmouth in activities over British shipping lanes today, the official German News Agency D. N. B. reported tonight.

Trade Reprisal Against Japan Hinted by Eden

Copyright by New York Times

London, May 14.—Britain has made a new protest to Tokyo over Japanese discrimination against her interests in China, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today.

He said the Japanese need expect no consideration so far as trade with Britain is concerned until the dispute is settled.

The subject came up when the foreign secretary was asked whether the government had done anything to make the Japanese abide by their promises not to molest the trade of other powers in the occupied areas of China.

Eden said representations had been made to Tokyo. He added they had yielded no satisfactory results. Now Whitehall has embarked on another line which it is believed may bring results.

"We have replied to Japanese complaints of economic restrictions in British territories by saying that while our main object is to conserve supplies for our war effort and prevent these supplies from reaching our enemies, we are naturally influenced in deciding our economic policy by the attitude of the Japanese government in China," Eden said.

Pressed for an assurance that this policy would be carried out "with determination," Eden replied, "we will do our best."

"I think the position is quite plain," he continued. "If the Japanese government complains to us about our economic policy they can expect no help in that direction until they treat our interests in China with the proper consideration."

One of Britain's interests in China is the welfare of the national government with which Japan is at war. The foreign secretary left no doubt on that score, describing relations between London and Chungking as entailing "the closest cordiality and cooperation."

Tokyo, May 14.—For the first time since his return from Europe Foreign Minister Matsuoka today received first United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, and then British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie at the foreign office for a discussion of the international situation.

According to Domei, Japanese news agency, it is conjectured in well-informed quarters that the two envoys sounded Matsuoka's views on the tripartite relations between Japan, the United States and Britain. Beyond that no revelations were made.

Woman Held For Bureau Of Immigration

Mrs. Lidia Maria Panisch, 41, a German, was held at the Women's Bureau last night for Immigration Bureau inspectors who said she is in this country illegally.

She was arrested at her home, 1121 Euclid Street Northwest, by Department of Justice agents and booked at hte Tenth Precinct. She probably will be taken to Baltimore for deportation proceedings today.

A former employe at Garfield Hospital, Mrs. Panisch was said to have come to America from Yokohama, landing in San Francisco in 1939. She had a six-month visa which has expired, it was said. She was employed at the hosiptal as a seamstress and also as a maid in the X-ray department. She studied medicine in Germany, it was said.

A hospital official said Mrs. Panisch worked at the hospital about one and a half years and that her personnel record showed she was alien. She once said at the hospital she could not return to Germany because "Hitler would get her."

Immigration authorities said the woman was forced to leave Germany about three years ago because of anti-Nazi remarks.

Dr. House Named To Surgeons' Board

Dr. Hugh C. House, who has offices at 1835 I Street Northwest, yesterday was named by the Commissioners as a member of the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons to succeed Dr. James H. Earley, who died recently.

He will receive a salary of $1,265 a year. Born in Verdon, Nebr., Dr. House has lived in the District for seven years. He attended the University of Maryand and is a graduate of George Washington University School of Medicine. He has practiced medicine here since 1931.

Objectors' Camp in Md. Opens Today

Elkridge, Md., May 14 (AP).—A skeleton crew of a few volunteer early arrivals completed arrangements today to receive 50 men coming here tomorrow to start the nation's first camp for conscientious objectors.

Old barracks of an abandoned CCC camp at the nearby Patapsco State Park have been repainted and repaired as homes for a year for draft registrants who have religious or conscientious objections to any form of military service.

Ultimately, 125 men will be stationed here, with Patapsco the first of 22 camps now planned, and with reports that as many as 100 may be established throughout the country for the "C. O's."

The first 50 men, from seven Eastern States, will report during the morning at a Friends meeting house in Baltimore, and be brought to the camp by automobiles, said Dr. Ernest Wildman, camp director and chemistry professor on leave from Earlhal College, Richmond, Ind.

They represent 16 religious denominations, and will live their year here without any military discipline of any kind. The men will engage in forestry work, and in construction projects in the Patapsco recreational park area.

Stagger-Pay Bill To Be Studied Soon

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, yesterday followed his notification of appointment as chairman of a subcommittee to consider his stagger-pay bill with an nouncement that he would call the group together "as soon as possible."

Meanwhile Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, declared Capper's plan for paying Government workers on four instead of two days a month a "good idea."

Bilbo and Senator James H. Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware, were named to the District subcommittee with Capper.

Roosevelt Deceived by FCC In Radio Report, Ethridge Says

not being told the divisive possibilities of the sort of fight which was being invited.

"If that fight comes, he must blame the majority of the commission which insisted upon it."

His address before a general session of the NAB convention was interrupted frequently by applause.

Chairman James L. Fly of the FCC, who told the radio men yesterday the commission "has no desire and no plans" to take over the Nation's broadcasting system, was just three seats away at the head table. He made frequent notes during Ethridge's talk and was expected by many of those present to make an immediate reply.

Neville Miller, NAB president, adjourned the meeting without calling on Fly and Fly left the room immediately.

Later Miller issued a statement saying he had called upon Fly in his hotel room and invited him to reply to Ethridge's remarks if he desired.

Ethridge denounced the FCC for "resorting to sharp administrative practices" in issuing its report and declared it "has embarked upon a continuing process of adjustment that will lead us sooner or later to the easy solution of having the whole thing taken over.

"The chairman of the commission has denied that is his intent and of course he speaks in all good faith, but people who set houses on fire frequently have no intent to do so."

He asserted the commission did not reflect the attitude or the desires of the Administration.

"The very way in which the FCC report was issued," Ethridge said, "raised the question of the good faith of the invitation (of the President) to make the study. I know the President on his part issued the invitation in good faith.

"But there has been a breach of faith, and I am certain it can be pinned directly upon the commission's majority."

Ethridge also charged the FCC with allowing political consideration to influence its business, particularly in the granting of licenses, and urged the appointment of a new three-man commission.

"I subscribe deeply to the idea that the air belongs to the people," he continued, "and that the government is merely the trustee for the people in issuing licenses.

"If that be true, there is one test, and one test only, that should be made to determine who shall have them: who can best use them in the public interest. But nobody would pretend that that test has always been applied.

"All too frequently, licenses have been issued upon a basis of what appeared at least to be political pull."

He declared he knew of at least three instances in which the FCC violated its own principles "in favor of people who were not unfriendly to the Administration."

Swedish Meat Balls

1 pound ground beef	4 slices bread
1 egg	¼ cup water
1 teaspoon salt	2 tablespoons shortening
3 tablespoons grated onion	2 tablespoons flour
2 teaspoons Lea & Perrins Sauce	1 cup milk

Combine meat, egg, salt, onion and Lea & Perrins Sauce. Toast bread slowly until dry and brown. Break in small pieces; add water to toast. Combine softened toast with meat mixture. Shape into small balls and brown in hot shortening. Remove meat balls from pan. Add flour, stir until smooth, then gradually add milk, stirring constantly until smooth and thickened. Place meat balls in gravy, cover and simmer about 15 minutes. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

The humble meat-ball calls for rounds of applause when served up in this delicious disguise. Credit Lea & Perrins Sauce with the elusive and oh-so-satisfying flavor.

For Lea & Perrins Sauce has the canny knack of bringing glamour and party-dish flavor even to the simplest meals. Try it tonight, and you'll see why it's used in hospitable homes all over the world—including Buckingham Palace.

Senate Votes 85% Farm Parity, 75 to 2

By the Associated Press

By a top-heavy 75 to 2 vote, the Senate yesterday approved a measure intended to put millions of dollars into the pockets of farmers through Government loans pegging the price of cotton, wheat and corn.

The legislation, ordering Government loans at 85 per cent of parity prices, now goes to President Roosevelt and some congressional leaders speculated on a possible veto.

Suggestions that the price-boosting loans might increase costs for consumers drew a chorus of rebuffs from Democrats and Republicans alike in Senate debate of less than an hour.

The legislation also covered tobacco and rice but Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, floor manager, said only corn, wheat, and cotton actually were involved because tobacco and rice growers "are now above parity prices."

A parity price, he explained, was one that would give a farmer the same relative purchasing power he had in the prewar (1909-13) period.

Bankhead said that the proposed new loans would be 13.49 cents a pound on cotton, 69.87 cents a bushel on corn and 96.22 cents a bushel on wheat. This was considerably above past loans, Bankhead continued, but market prices of these crops had been climbing recently.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, first raised the question of increased costs to consumers and called attention to reports from some economists that the higher loans might cause price increases of from 10 to 20 per cent in some foods.

"Those statements are not true," Bankhead said, after Hatch explained that he did not believe them. Bankhead added that the estimates came from "theorists" who always fought any Congressional attempt to be "fair with farmers."

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, said that every time there had been an increase in farm prices "we have heard calamity howlers talk about the consumers. I do not think that we in this body ought to make peons and paupers out of the producers of that which sustains our lives, even though it does raise the prices to consumers, and I do not admit that at all."

elimination of a 40-cent wage differential between Northern and Southern mines.

At the same time, the union and representatives of anthracite coal operators, negotiating a new wage agreement for 100,000 Pennsylvania miners, announced a third extension for 48 hours of the expired contract to midnight Saturday, giving the negotiatros further time to reach a meeting of minds.

3. A two-day strike, affecting 4,500 workers at the Colt Patent Firearms Co. plant in Hartford, Conn., was settled last night, the Associated Press said. The company, the Nation's largest producers of machine guns and side arms and working on $30,000,000 of defense orders, was said to have made acceptable offers on the C. I. O. Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union demands.

4. A three-day strike which had interrupted a $30,000,000 construction project at the huge Boston Navy Yard was settled yesterday when the secretary-treasurer of the local A. F. of L. building trades council announced that Tuesday conferences with defense officials here had successfully "ironed out" difficulties. The strike of several hundred craftsmen was called in protest to the employment of WPA and civil service workers on the project.

5. A threatened strike, of 5,000 loggers and sawmill workers in the Portland, Ore., district, was forestalled by C. I. O. International Woodworkers Union acceptance of an employer offer of wage increase, vacations with pay, closed shop and union hiring hall. Settlement of the dispute, which had been already certified to the National Defense Mediation Board, is contingent on a vote of union members.

6. From defense and labor circles here it was reported that a settlement was imminent in the strike of 2,300 A. F. of L. molders and foundry workers which had cut operations in 20 Chicago foundries since Tuesday.

7. The Mediation Board, which yesterday sought to end a week-old strike of 900 C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee members at the United Engineering and Foundry Co., Vandergrift, Pa., also announced that management and C. I. O. union representatives of the strike-bound Ex-Cell-O Corporation had returned to Detroit with board proposals to settle the dispute. About 3,500 workers have been idle since May 5. Whether union and management would vote to accept the board suggestion was still in doubt last night.

Hillman told reporters that he had specifically reported to President Roosevelt on the West Coast strike and had been in touch with the international president of the A. F. of L. machinists. He added that "we are stilling giving the A. F. of L. an opportunity to bring their members around."

The 1,700 workers on strike have established picket lines which 20,000 other A. F. of L. craftsmen decline to cross. The result has been a cessation of work on several score naval vessels under construction in 11 shipyards.

Next most serious dispute involved 30,000 Detroit A. F. of L. teamsters and buildings trades workers. Joseph Keenan, OPM labor expert dispatched to the scene, sought yesterday to find a basis for settlement.

The shutdown of the Corning Glass Works pressware division at Corning, N. Y. is the result of a strike at the American Potash and Chemical Co., at Trona, Cal., which has halted borax shipments.

Maj. Gen. Grant To Review R.O.T.C. At Georgetown

Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, commanding general of the Third Corps Area will review the Georgetown University R. O. T. C. Battalion at 2 p. m. today at the start of the annual Military Day program on the medical school field. The cadets will demonstrate a combat problem with rifles, machine guns, mortars and 37 mm. guns as a part of the exercises.

A score of cups and trophies, donated by local military organizations, will be awarded to the winners of the recent spring competitions and the individual honor cadet of each of the four classes. Before the program, the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university will have Gen. Grant and other visitors as his luncheon guests.

The Georgetown University Hospital School of Nursing will hold its graduation exercises following the military exercises, at 4:30 p. m. in Gaston Hall on the campus. Father O'Leary will present diplomas to 26 graduates. Prizes also will be awarded.

Reserve Board Claims Averting Of 1939 Panic

By the Associated Press

A Federal Reserve official told Senators yesterday that that agency had helped prevent the "development of a panic" in this country by quietly buying Government bonds and notes when Germany invaded Poland.

Walter Wyatt, general counsel for the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, described the purchases before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee while urging that any actions "in the field of national monetary and credit controls" be exempted from proposed legislation to require court reviews of activities of Federal administrative agencies.

Action Immediate

"When Germany invaded Poland in September, 1939, there was a sudden emergency in the market for Government securities," Wyatt testified. "Prices dropped sharply and there were many offerings and few buyers."

This prompted, he said, immediate action by the board's open market committee and to maintain an orderly market, the committee placed "substantial buying orders at gradually declining prices."

Wyatt said these operations extended over several weeks during which the committee bought $473,000,000 worth of Government bonds and notes.

Decline Cushioned

"This operation," he added, "was successful in cushioning the decline in prices of Government securities, maintaining an orderly market, and preventing the development of a panic."

Wyatt protested that bills pending before the Senate committee might require "advance notice and public hearings" in such operations and thus defeat the very purpose of the activities.

"The effect might be similar to that of requiring a fire department to give public notice and hold public hearings before deciding whether or not to take steps to put out a fire," he asserted.

Sen. McCarran Decides Today On 'Mayor' Job

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, will announce this morning whether he will be able to assume the chairmanship of the Senate District Committee.

The announcement—yes or no—is expected to come as the Senate Steering Committee meets at 10:30 a. m. to clear its slate of Senate committee appointments that have been delayed by debate over the seating of Senator Joseph Rosier (Democrat), of West Virginia.

Although McCarran, one of the hardest-working members of the Senate, last night remained undecided on the question of accepting additional duties, members of the steering committee, it was learned, have determined to:

Elevate Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, present District Committee, chairman, to succeed the late Morris Sheppard, of Texas, as head of the Military Affairs Committee.

Name McCarran to succeed Reynolds as "Mayor of Wasnington."

Shortly after Senator Sheppard's death April 9, some members of the Senate were reported opposed to selection of Reynolds because of the North Carolina's failure consistently to support Administration aid-Britain moves. Yesterday, it was said, only one of the steering committee's 15 members is ready to oppose Reynolds.

Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, ranks next to McCarran on the District Committee and under seniority rule would be in line for the charimanship should McCarran decline.

McCarran declined the District chairmanship early this session and the post finally went to Reynolds, next ranking member of the committee. Recently McCarran has been reported willing to take the job provided means are found to relieve him of many of the details of the office.

Funeral Today For Mrs. Boyd, Church Founder

Funeral services today for Mrs. Hattie Daniels Boyd, 1360 Parkwood Place Northwest, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Hines funeral home, 290 Fourteenth Street Northwest, to be followed by burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Boyd, widow of Robert J. Boyd, died Tuesday night in her home. She was born in St. Paul, Minn., and moved here with her parents, Capt. and Mrs. Joseph Daniels, in 1866.

Mrs. Boyd and her late husband were among the founders of the Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, then located at Fourteenth and R Streets Northwest. She was assistant superintendent of the primary department of the Sunday School for more than 40 years.

Surviving are two sons, J. Reginald Boyd, 1211 Woodside Place, Silver Spring, Md., and Ralph D. Boyd, 1360 Parkwood Place Northwest.

John L. Hyde's Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral rites for John L. Hyde, sr., 61, for many years connected with the Tabulating Machine Co. here, have been set tentatively for tomorrow in New York. He died in a Baltimore Hospital Tuesday.

A native of England, Mr. Hyde came to this country in 1884. He joined the Tabulating Machine Co. here as a young man.

Later he assumed charge of the New York branch of that organization. When the International Business Machine Corporation was formed he served for a number of years as one of its representatives in Europe before returning to the United States to supervise the Pacific Northwest territory.

Mr. Hyde leaves his wife, Mrs. Helen Lee Hyde, formerly of New York; a son, J. L. Hyde, jr., of Washington; three sisters, the Misses Edith E. and Elizabeth Hyde, both of this city, and Mrs. R. E. Lee, of New York.

'Andy' Smith, Oldest U. S. Employe, Dies

William A. (Andy) Smith is dead. The well-known 86-year-old Congressional Record clerk, who began his career at the Capitol 66 years ago, when Gen. Ulysses S. Grant was President, died yesterday of heart attack at his home at 3817 Jocelyn Street Northwest.

Born in Baltimore, June 13, 1854, he had been record clerk since 1876. He had attended work as usual yesterday, Mrs. Smith said, had not been ill, and that the couple listened to the radio before retiring Tuesday night. She was at his side when he died.

Known widely as "the oldest Government employe in Washington," Smith began work as a messenger boy in the Government Printing Office in 1873. In 1875 he was transferred to the Capitol as assistant Congressional Record clerk. He was, Mrs. Smith said last night, extremely proud of his title of "oldest" Government employe.

When he reached retirement age several years ago Congressional members stepped in and effected a two-year extension. Two additional extensions were made in following years to allow him to retain his post and finally an act of Congress was passed awarding him life-long tenure of his job.

With exception of recent years, he was known to almost every President. He once related to Post Reporter Gerald G. Gross how many of them would come and visit with him in his Capitol office.

An ardent sport enthusiast, he had never neglected his exercise, even in recent years, and it was not until he was 75 that he learned to drive an automobile.

Besides his wife, Mrs. M. Louise Smith, he is survived by a son, William A. Smith, jr., local patent attorney, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Friday in the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest, and burial will be at Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Trammell's Funeral Today

The funeral of Mrs. Josephine Trammell, 63, widow of John L. Trammell, who died at Georgetown University Hospital after a long illness, will take place at 9 a. m. today from the Church of the Little Flower, Glen Echo. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Trammell was a retired employe of the Federal Government. She was connected with the United States Treasury Department for more than 30 years, her retirement being due to injuries sustained in an automobile accident. She was born in Washington but had lived at Glen Echo about 40 years. She leaves a brother, Frank A. Wiener.

Whitehurst Finds Room for Improvement In District's Mass Transportation System

(This is the thirteenth and concluding article in a series about improvements in the District highway system as suggested in the report of the Highway Planning Survey.)

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

There is "considerable room" for improvement in Washington's mass transportation system, in the opinion of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

In his report to the Commissioners on the Highway Planning Survey recently completed, Whitehurst urged that something be done to provide a "more expeditious movement of cars and buses" into the downtown business section.

"We are convinced," said the highway chief," that with rapid, direct and comfortable service, mass transportation can and should supplant much of the individual vehicular service into the central business areas."

Speed, Minimum of Stops

Speed and a minimum of stops, said Whitehurst, are essential to adequate service. He added:

"Slow service as the result of too many stops and indirect routing and concentration of lines into small areas force the use of individual transportation."

This issue is expected to be an important item for debate when the Whitehurst report is thrown open to discussion at public hearings scheduled for next Tuesday. Indirect attacks on the mass transportation situation, it was learned, will be defended at the hearings by representatives of the Capital Transit Co.

To remedy bus and streetcar service defects as outlined in the report, Whitehurst proposes a thorough and complete survey of the mass transportation system as a whole, covering riding habits, stops and routings of all streetcar and bus lines."

The Whitehurst report also calls for adequate funds to correct long-standing evils in the Traffic Department's program of erecting signs, signals and markings.

Advocates Uniform Method

In this connection, the report advocates a uniform method of placing signs and signals and urges that Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer be granted sufficient money to carry out the program.

In addition, Whitehurst indorsed recent civic demands that Van Duzer be given an increase in his engineering and permit examination personnel.

"Engineering in connection with traffic work," said Whitehurst, "is as necessary and essential as in highway work to perfect the final improvement. The Department of Vehicles and Traffic has been seriously handicapped by lack of adequate personnel."

For more efficient enforcement of traffic laws, Whitehurst recommanded that at least 200 men be made available for highway patrol duty on motorcycles. The Police Department now has 57.

Ft. Belvoir Costs Doubled, House Told

Cantonment construction costs at Fort Belvoir, Va., were more than double the War Department's estimate, although "there was no material increase in the capacity of the camp as originally planned," Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan, told the House yesterday.

Engel cited as one possible explanation of spread between cost and estimate the fact that workers on the project, he said, were allowed 75 cents a day for travel expenses and were permitted to arrive 15 minutes late in the morning and to leave 15 minutes before quitting time "without being subject to discipline or deductions from their pay."

"This was allowed regardless of where the worker lived," Engel added.

"The amount estimated for this project under the original appropriation bill was $5,906,878," Engel said. "The War Department weekly field report for March 15, 1941, estimated the total cost for work authorized to that date at $14,290,432. The project was 90 per cent complete on March 5."

Utilities Costs Quadrupled

Engel declared that the Army estimate for utilities—roads, sewers, railroads, etc.—was $543,000, while the actual cost was $2,084,900, "or nearly four times the original estimate."

Additional land is to be acquired for the reservation, Engel said, at costs ranging from $80 to $700 an acre for a total of 1,950 acres. He declared that he inquired about land values for one part of the site and was told by "authoritative sources" it was not worth more than $50 an acre.

In order to compensate for higher wages paid at Belvoir, Engel said, $1,808,000 was paid out in overtime wages at Camp Meade, Md., including some "premium" overtime for work not actually performed.

Pointing out that each post is about 15 miles from Washington, Engel declared that wage scales at both places were fixed by Secretary of Labor Perkins, and that salaries at Belvoir were substantially higher. Carpenters at Meade, for example, were paid at the rate of $1.25 an hour, Belvoir carpenters drew 1.62½, Engel said.

3,800 Carpenters

Of 3,800 carpenters employed at Belvoir, Engel said, "approximately 10 per cent were finished carpenters, 30 per cent rough carpenters and 60 per cent had no carpenter training whatever."

Engel listed initiation fees charged by unions represented on the closed shop project. The fees, most of which were payable in installments, ranged from $50 to $300 for carpenters, painters, truck drivers, rodmen, laborers, electricians, plumbers, steamfitters and sheetmetal workers, he said.

Contrary to experience at other camps studied by Engel, the Congressman noted that the cost of labor at Fort Belvoir became progressively greater as the work neared completion.

Draft Law to Put 4,000,000 In Army Ready if War Comes

Sweeping revisions of the Selective Service program if this country should become involved in war were described yesterday for The Post by officials at national selection headquarters.

The changes in the compulsory training act would probably include the following, it was said:

1. Scrapping of the 12-month period of service for an indefinite term of duty.

2. Expansion of the age limits for inductees with men 18 to 45, inclusive, likely to be called.

3. Tripling or quadrupling the number of local boards to speed selection machinery.

4. Breaking down the three deferred classes into "echelons" whose effect would be to move up men now excused into groups available for service.

Spokesmen at selection headquarters pointed out that the present 12-month period of training was based on the Army's desire not to create a huge standing Army, but to train a maximum of 900,000 a year to be available as reservists for 10 years.

With advent of war, this theory would go by the boards with the necessity of bringing much larger numbers into immediate active service for an indefinite period.

Discussing the age categories liable for future calls, officers said that while Selective Service currently is recommending cutting down the maximum age limit, this would apply only to peace time.

In time of war, the Army might find it necessary to broaden the available manpower reservoir to men 18 to 45, inclusive, as was the case in World War I.

To speed the painstaking selection process involving filling out and classifying of comprehensive questionnaires, hearing of appeals etc., the 6,400 local boards and appeals units throughout the country would be greatly increased.

To make vastly greater numbers of men available for call, deferred classes would be broken down into "echelons" in this manner:

Each clas would be subdivided with groups now deferred being subject to call. Thus, men with dependents now lumped into Class III-A and excused from service would be reclassified according to whether they had (1) a dependent wife; (2) a dependent wife and child; (2) a dependent wife and two children and so on. They would be called in that order.

Similarly, men with slight physical defects, now in Class 1-B as available for limited military service only, would be redesignated Class 1-A, ready for immediate military service.

These classification changes would require merely revision of Selective Service regulations. On the other hand, to induct more than the present 900,000 yearly now allowed by the act would require amendment of the legislation.

While deferments for dependency and physical reasons would be greatly restricted, deferments for men important in defense industries would be liberalized, it was predicted.

Many more men than at present would be excused from duty in such occupations as the following: aircraft industry, shipyards, all metal industries, railroads, the merchant marine.

Selection officials said that the Nation-wide machinery is prepared to induct as many as 4,000,000 men in the space of a few weeks. However, it was pointed out the Army would not have sufficient cantonments to hous esuch a force as fast as it might be called.

Meanwhile, the Washington Appeals Board handed down decisions in 18 disputed draft cases, in 6 of which it overruled local boards. Those appealing successfully from Class 1-A selections were Walter E. Bogart, 26, assistant clerk of Board No. 21; Maurice J. Blaustein, 36, Interstate Commerce Commission employe, of Board No. 17; William J. Murwin, 25, of Board No. 6, assistant foreman at Washington Airport; Klein E. Parkes, 26, auditor, of Board No. 6, and Henry G. Moffett, 22, plumbers' helper, of Board No. 6. Arthur Raymond Boulanger, 23, a theater employe of Board No. 2, who was originally deferred as a necessary man, was placed in Class 1-A.

Appeals of the following men, listed with local board numbers, were overruled:

Donald E. Walker, 22; Fred O. Abraham, 21; Samuel Radow, 20; Guido M. Antonielli, 14; William Smith, 17; Abraham I. Cohen, 8; Morris Axelrod, 6; Paul E. Stettlemyer, 1.

The Appeals Board held up for further information appeals of men from local boards as specified:

John A. Haddock, 17; Elton E. Lowry, 21; Wong F. Soo, 14; Joseph A. DePuglia, 20.

Flag Association Founder Leaves $65,000 Estate

Col. James A. Moss, U. S. A., retired, who founded the United States Flag Association in 1924, left an estate of $65,000, his will disclosed yesterday when filed for probate in the District Court.

The petition, filed by the Riggs National Bank, executor, showed that $21,000 of the assets was represented by money due Col. Moss from the association. Mrs. Eleanor Austin, executive secretary, said Col. Moss advanced the money for educational campaigns shortly after he founded the organization.

Col. Moss wrote 30 patriotic books and military treaties. He died April 23 of injuries suffered when a taxicab and a bus collided during a heavy rain in New York.

The estate will go to relatives in the South.

116th Infantry Is Inspected At Fort Meade

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., May 14.—The 116th Infantry Regiment, commanded by Col. Evarts W. Opie, held its annual inspection today with a personnel of 2,859 soldiers, virtually its full modified war strength and the largest number of men in the Virginia organization since its reorganization after the World War.

The inspection, which began this morning and concluded with a regimental parade at retreat, was conducted by Lieut. Col. Graham B. Bright, inspector general of the Twenty-ninth Division.

It included inspection of the entire regiment on the field and also of barracks, kitchens and unit records.

The regiment began adding to its ranks with selectees April 23, when 244 recruits joined the Third Battalion, and since that time the recruits have been arriving in groups of from 2 to 200, the last group of 89 arrived yesterday.

Most of the new men are from Virginia, but the group also includes selectees from Washington, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

The Seventieth Tank Battalion has a number of new officers who were recently ordered from reserve to active duty.

They are: First Lieuts. Robert H. Merz, Philadelphia; Ralph V. Lennen, Edward E. Sowder, Christianburg, Va.; Harmon L. Spencer, Washington, and Kenneth J. Krach, Baltimore; Second Lieut. John M. Bushey, Sunbury, Pa.

Twenty-ninth Division Headquarters has announced the following promotions to first lieutenants:

Second Lieut. Joseph T. Yarnall, jr., of the 176th Field Artillery, from Gwynedale, Pa.; Second Lieut. George Schaeffer Rare, 115th Infantry, from Westminster, Md.; Second Lieut. Reamar Stefansson, 175 Infantry, of Baltimore; Second Lieut. Frederick E. Consolvo, jr., 111th Field Artillery, of Norfolk; Second Lieut. Miles C. Shorey, 175th Infantry, from Round Bay, Md.

Jewish Youth Urged to Dispel Spirit of Defeat

A Jewish youth rally, held in behalf of the United Jewish Appeal, last night was called upon "to dispel the spirit of defeatism" and to take active steps in aiding the Jews "being destroyed" by the Nazis.

Dr. Baruch Braunstein, of the faculty at Beirut University, Syria, declared that "the horrors of the Inquisition in Spain were not as frightful as the ordeals experienced by the Jews of Poland and Rumania under Nazi regimes."

More than 200 delegates from Jewish youth organizations pledged support to the fund drive for overseas relief. The rally was held in the Jewish Community Center. Rabbi Jonah B. Wise, national chairman, will address another campaign meeting tonight at the Woodmont Country Club.

First Orders Awaited

Organization of Civilian Air Observation Unit to Be Speeded

The organization of civilian volunteers for aircraft observation duties with the General Headquarters Air Force must be completed by June 15, it was announced yesterday by Frank Bane, director of the division of State and local cooperation, Office of Emergency Management.

Locally, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director and executive vice chairman of the District Defense Council, said he contemplated no moves until official orders are received. He expects the orders some time today, Whitehurst added.

Steps by local defense councils for registering volunteers and assigning observation posts were divided into three brackets by the OEM.

1. Appointment of a member of the council to devote full time to the program during the next 30 days.

2. Appointment of a planning committee to carry out the work.

3. Development of a city or State-wide program for registering volunteers.

Councils were instructed to register only men for outside observation posts, but both men and women may be used for inside work at filter and information centers. The filter centers, it was explained, eliminate nonessential information and only essential reports are forwarded to the information centers.

As soon as instructions are received, councils are requested to forward all detailed data to the observation post organizer. The organizer will then establish posts and make tentative assignments of volunteers after they have been registered.

Whitehurst said he will comply immediately with the instructions as soon as they reach his hands.

District Bar Outing Set for June 12

The 1,300 members of the District Bar Association will hold their annual outing June 12 at Bay Ridge, Md., J. Edward Burroughs, outing chairman, announced yesterday.

The attractions will include outdoor games, swimming and golf at the Sherwood Forest course, a buffet luncheon and a banquet. Guests of honor will be the justices of the United States Court of Appeals and the District Court.

John L. Laskey, assistant district attorney, is chairman of the ticket committee.

United Service Offices Open

Headquarters for the District of Columbia United Service Organizations have been established at the Garfinckel Building, 1419 F Street Northwest, Chairman Sidney F. Taliaferro announced yesterday.

Purposes of the new organization are to help provide funds for a program of recreation and morale-building activities, under civilian auspices, for new recruits of the Army and Navy, and young men and women working in national defense jobs.

The preliminary program calls for establishment of about 300 civilian clubs outside of camps, naval shore establishments, and centers of defense production. The new clubs will be set up not only in continental United States, but in the new bases in the West Indies and elsewhere.

Quota for the Washington organization has been set at $250,000. The program has been requested by the President, and the Secretaries of War and Navy, to raise the morale of armed forces and defense workers. Agencies making up the new group include the Y. M. C. A., the National Catholic Community Service, the Salvation Army, the National Travelers' Aid Association, and the Y. W. C. A.

Other officers in the Washington group, in addition to Taliaferro, are Albert W. Atwood, vice chairman; Corcoran Thom, treasurer, and Edwin N. Lewis, secretary. Names of committee chairman and their committee members will be announced later.

Home Builders Here to Study Defense Needs

Home builders of the Nation will assemble at Mayflower Hotel today for a three days' session of preparation to meet great emergency needs for defense housing. The conference is called by the newly organized Home Builders Institute of America, a professional branch of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and will set in motion a program for guarding home building standards.

Conferees will discuss the entire machinery for home production. Focusing directly on the task of producing for the defense program more than 250,000 new housing units, at least half of which, it is estimated, can be built through private enterprise, the builders will confer with heads of Federal agencies regarding details of how this may best be accomplished. They will exchange experience on present best means of reducing costs; consider essentials for satisfactory neighborhoods; plan ways for keeping building steady through the emergency period and afterward.

The institute is headed by David D. Bohannon, San Francisco. Philip W. Kniskern, Philadelphia, president, National Association of Real Estate Boards, will open the program, speakers on which will include Federal Housing Administrator Abner H. Ferguson; Governor James F. Twohy, Federal Home Loan Bank Board; Administrator John M. Carmody, Federal Works Agency; Russell G. Creviston, Chicago, director of trade relations, Crane Co.; Roy Wenzlick, St. Louis, president, Real Estate Analysts, Inc.; George F. Nixon, president, Metropolitan Chicago Home Builders Association, and past president, Chicago Real Estate Board; Fritz B. Burns, president, Southern California Chapter, and E. L. Crain, Houston, Texas, a vice president of the institute; Hugh Potter, Houston, Texas, past president, National Association of Real Estate Boards; Hugh L. Dryden, chief, mechanics and sound division, National Bureau of Standards; F. Stuart Fitzpatrick, manager, construction and civic development department, United States Chamber of Commerce, and chairman, executive committee, National Homes Foundation; H. R. Northrup, executive secretary of the foundation, Milburn L. Wilson, director of extension service, Department of Agriculture and the following Federal Housing Administration officials; Earle S. Draper and Jay Keegan, assistant administrators; Howard P. Vermilya, director, technical division; Seward H. Mott, director, land planning division; Curt C. Mack, director of underwriting.

7,209 Volunteers Assist District Red Cross in April

A total of 103,133 hours of service in District Red Cross work was contributed by 7,209 volunteers during April, it was announced yesterday by Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the local chapter.

Gen. Keefer, who delivered his monthly report, said 19,289 garments and 120,474 surgical dressings were produced by the workers during the month. Hours donated by staff assistants and other clerical volunteers totaled 2,531, he reported.

The District group last month also produced 2,600 bandages for first-aid classes, sent 1,000 comfort kits to England, wrote 1,830 pages in Braille for the blind and sent 656 food packages to Allied soldiers in German prison camps.

Gen. Keefer stressed a need in the report for more volunteers in sewing and knitting. A new quota of 160,000 garments has been assigned the local organization, he said.

Hess? Who's He? The Circus Is Pitching Its Tents Today!

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

CIRCUS' BRIDE-TO-BE—Toto, 438-pound bride-to-be of Gargantua the Great, will be here today with the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey Circus. She is shown with Jose Tomas, keeper

The Hesses and the Churchills, taxation and Selective Service, totalitarianism and the weather—all, ordinarily, handsome topics fit for meaty conversation.

But today, the circus comes to town. And the occasion, to the faithful, meaning all whose eyes go into a dance at sight of show canvas and whose pulses throb in time to the band music, is no ordinary one.

This, for them, is Der Tag and beginning a little after sunup, when the first section of four streamlined silver trains rolls into the Benning freight yards from Baltimore, they'll make the most of it.

In blissful contemplation of it all, Fred Orsinger uttered one "Gosh!" after another yesterday. Orsinger, director of the Commerce Building aquarium, has it pretty bad. His wife has all she can do to restrain him from joining up when the Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey show comes to town.

Patients in the same ward are Melvin D. Hildreth, attorney; Dr. William M. Mann, Zoo director, and hundreds of lesser known tanbark b gs who last night were counting the hours.

Come rain, wind or 5-pound hailstones, there'll still be scores of incurables on hand at the Benning yards this morning when the show trains arrive and immediately begin unloading for the opening matinee at the Twenty-first and C Streets Northeast grounds.

The performers will still be asleep, but early comers ought to get views of the gorilla Gargantua and his bride, M'Toto, 50 elephants at work, the dozens of brightly painted wagons and props.

And on the grounds canvas will be rising, and the aroma of coffee will be issuing from the cook tent. In a matter of a few hours a city unto itself will have been created, ready to receive as of yore open-mouthed patrons come to worship at the shrines of Alfred Court, peerless animal trainer; Elly Ardelty, the daring aerialiste, and the Flying Concellos and the clowns and high school horses and all the others.

To the faithful, it is good news that the menagerie has been improved, the big top restyled and the midway radically changed. Yet it would still be a red letter day for them if the show had nothing new and every customer had to water an elephant.

Circus fever gets you that way.

Hotel Men Elect Roberts

Osgood Roberts, public relations director of the Mayflower Hotel, yesterday was elected first vice president of the Hotel Sales Managers Association at its fourteenth annual convention in Boston, Mass. He was program chairman for the convention. Theme of the sessions was "Hotel Sales Offensive in a National Defense Year."

Fowler Given Post as New Budget Officer

Creating a new municipal finance post, the Commissioners yesterday named Walter L. Fowler, assistant corporation counsel, to be District budget officer.

The new job has been contemplated since the death last October of Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, who acted as both auditor and budget officer.

In connection with Fowler's promotion, the Commissioners granted the full rank of auditor to Arthur R. Pilkerton, principal assistant auditor since 1929, who has been acting auditor since Maj. Donovan's death.

Several changes involving promotions also were made in the Corporation Counsel's office. Two assistant prosecutors were given pay raises and assigned to take over condemnation work before the courts previously handled by Fowler.

James W. Lauderdale's salary was boosted from $4,400 to $4,600 a year, and an increase from $3,800 to $4,600 was granted to Stanley DeNeale.

To carry on the work assigned to Lauderdale and DeNeale, Assistant Corporation Counsel Lee F. Dante was promoted to receive a salary of $3,200 a year and Glenn A. Wilkinson, who has been serving under a temporary appointment, was made a permanent assistant corporation counsel.

Fred J. Icenhower, of 3712 Jenifer Street Northwest, was appointed to the corporation counsel's office at a salary of $2,600. He is a native of Ohio and has lived here since 1920. Since his graduation from the National University Law School in 1933, Icenhower has conducted a private practice of law here.

Fowler is a veteran of 24 years' service with the District Government. He has won high praise from local authorities for his work in connection with condemnation proceedings. He will receive a salary of $6,500 a year. Pilkerton will jump to $6,500 from $5,000.

Youth Shot Aiding Gunman Capture Gets $1,419, Job

A check for $1,419 and an offer of a job with the District government was the reward yesterday of Jon Francis, 20, who last February was wounded critically when he aided in the capture of an armed man who went berserk on downtown New York Avenue.

Francis was officially commended by city authorities at brief ceremonies in the office of Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr. The check represented contributions from police, newspapers and the public.

The slight, blond youth, still carrying a .22-caliber slug in his chest, appeared flustered and had little to say about his adventure.

He was shot by Murphy L. Hubbs when he went to the assistance of Policeman W. J. Gaylor, who was attempting to arrest Hubbs. The gunwielder committed suicide after threatening to assault a beauty shop operator in a building near the Greyhound bus terminal.

Merit Board Head Lauds Aide at Fete

Members of Calvary Methodist Men's Class applauded last night as Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming, principal speaker, turned the tables and paid tribute to his introducer—Kenneth C. Vipond, assistant chief civil service examiner.

Just before beginning his formal address on "Morale" at the class' thirty-second annual banquet, Commissioner Flemming explained that he had waited long to praise his colleague, whom he called a "pillar of the church and the Government."

"His life has been dedicated to the ideals back of the merit system, back of the church and what the churches of the country stand for," he said of Vipond, who was quite stunned by it all. He is a former class president.

In his talk, Commissioner Flemming, who is lay leader of Foundry Methodist Church, stressed that an improvement in America's morale can only come through an awakened recognition of the basic spritual values inherent in Christ's teachings.

Earlier, Dr. Charles B. Campbell presented an authograph book bearing members' signatures to retiring teacher John W. Fisher on the class' behalf. Retiring president W. A. Brett was toastmaster. The Rev. Orris G. Robinson, Calvary pastor, brought greetings.

In business sessions preceding the dinner, the following officers were elected:

Edwin Dice, associate teacher; Theodore La France, president; Clarence E. Werback, first vice president; Loy H. Brodie, second vice president; W. Ellwood Baker, treasurer; Olin B. Tharp, secretary; Byron Bird, assistant; William B. Wells, chorister; Ralph M. Wolfe, pianist, and J. William DeGrange, historian.

Crawl Proves Whale Could Swallow Jonah

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 14.—A scientist came up with an affirmative answer today to the question of whether the whale could have swallowed Jonah.

Just to make certain, Dr. Eugene Maxmilian Karl Geitling, professor of pharmacology at the University of Chicago, said he crawled through the gullet of a whale.

The whale, of course, was dead. "It was a pretty slimy trip," Dr. Geiling remarked, "but there was plenty of room.

"And a number of the whalers up along the West Coast of Canada, whose families have been whaling for generations back, say their fathers told them of unquestioned cases in which men thrown overboard were swallowed.

"They were never seen again, though."

Dr. Geiling told of his trip into a whale while here to receive Villanova College's Mendel Medal, awarded annually for outstanding achievement in science. The medal was given, incidentally, not for his interest in whales, but for his contributions to the knowledge of the pituitary gland, its relation to other glands, and his assistance in the crystallization of insulin.

Dr. Geiling took up the study of whales years ago as a sideline to his interest in the pituitary and because these glands in the whale are of such whopper size.

Since then, as scientific supercargo on many whaling ships, he has assembled these whale facts:

The sperm whale is the only one large enough to have swallowed Jonah. The largest animal now on the earth, some sperms reach a length of 88 feet.

A whale baby comes from an egg no larger than the human ovum, but it is 20 feet long and weighs two tons when it is born.

French Cabinet Casts Lot With Axis

to send motor torpedo boats down the Rhone River through unoccupied France into the Mediterranean, where the Nazis have told of attacks by German "light naval units.")

Effects to Be Felt Soon

The announcement of the cabinet's approval of Darlan's negotiations on a new working agreement or "preliminary peace pact" replacing the existing armistice agreement, said "effects of the French-German negotiations will soon be felt."

These effects, it was reliably understood, are likely to include:

1. Early relase of about 250,000 the 1,750,000 French prisoners of war still in German hands, including miners, farmers, artisans and technicians badly needed to keep French internal life alive.

2. Further relaxation of the German control of the boundary between Nazi-held and unoccupied France, including perhaps the restoration of full French rule to Paris.

3. Reduction in the vast cost levied against the French people for maintaining the German army of occupation in France.

House Votes End to Lincoln Shrine Charge

By the margin of eight votes, the House yesterday balloted in favor of free admissions to the little house on Tenth Street where Abraham Lincoln died 76 years and a month ago today.

The initiative in the move to abolish the present 10-cent admission charge at the Petersen House, 516 Tenth Street Northwest, was taken by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), whose Illinois district embraces three of the counties represented by Lincoln when he was in the House.

The House accepted by a 51-to-43 standing vote Dirksen's amendment to the Interiour Department appropriation bill to refuse payment of salaries to National Park Service employes at the house unless the charge is abolished.

"It is a tragedy and a travesty," Dirksen said, "for an oppulent Government which spends money with such lavishness, to charge 10 cents for people to visit the place where Lincoln's soul tok flight."

Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, complained that abolition of the charge would create a demand for elimination of similar charges at other shrines.

Lincoln, said Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, would approve of the charge "because he was interested in solvency."

Representative Dondero (Republican), of Michigan, declared that "this country could do much for its school children by making it as easy as possible" for them to visit historic spots. He urged free admissions at Mount Vernon.

Lincoln was assassinated in the Ford Theater, now the Lincoln Museum, the night of April 14, 1865. He died in the Petersen House, directly across Tenth Street, the following day.

Premarital Health Bill For D.C. Ready

The Commissioners today will send to Congress a bill requiring local premarital tests for syphilis, gonorrhea and tuberculosis.

The measure was drafted by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech and received approval of the Commissioners yesterday

Provision for premarital blood tests have long been advocated by Health Officer George C. Ruhland and it was upon his recommendation that the bill was drafted. The plan has been indorsed by local lawyers, physicians and civic leaders.

The bill provides that the health certificate shall be issued within a month before application is made for the marriage license and automatically expires at the end of 30 days along with the license.

At present, a marriage license is good for a lifetime after it is once issued.

Free examinations, according to provisions of the bill, may be obtained at the District Health Department.

The measure further provides that only a judge of District Court may waive compulsory premarital tests and then only when there is "an emergency or other cause shown by affidavit proof."

A maximum punishment of six months in jail or a $500 fine, or both, is provided for violation of the proposed law. This penalty may be levied against the applicant, physician or laboratory representative who misrepresents facts.

Dakotans to Help Launch Battleship

Posters depicting a midwestern farmer's dilemma at the acquisition of a battleship will symbolize the theme of a dance to be held by Washington's South Dakotans at the Press Club auditorium tomorrow at 10 p. m.

The affair is preliminary to the launching of the Navy's newest battleship, the U. S. S. South Dakota, at Camden, N. J., June 7. A special train will take South Dakota residents in Washington to the launching ceremonies.

Gov. and Mrs. Harlan J. Bushfield, Senator and Mrs. W. J. Bulow, Senator and Mrs. Chan Gurney, Representative and Mrs. Francis Case and Representative and Mrs. Karl Mundt will head the party which will include the 80-piece band of the Sioux Falls, S. D., high school.

5 Properties Are Restored To Tax Rolls

Five additional Washington properties—three religious institutions, an orphan home and an agency of the Y. W. C. A.—yesterday were ordered returned to real estate tax rolls by the Commissioners.

Acting upon recommendations of the Real Estate Tax Exemption Board, the city heads ruled the following properties to be improperly exempt from taxes:

A building at 714 N Street Northwest listed in the name of Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore; premises at 623 F Street Southwest owned by the Fifth Baptish Church of Washington, Inc.; a structure at 715 Eighth Street Northwest controlled by the Calvary Baptist Church Extension Association, Inc.

Three lots in the 2900 block of Good Hope Road Southeast occupied by the German Orphan Home and a building at 522 Sixth Street Northwest owned by the Y. W. C. A.

In the case of the German Orphan Home, the Commissioners were told that "property surrounding this area is rapidly being developed and there does not appear to be any good reason why large areas of land like this should remain on the tax exempt rolls."

In the other instances, the Real Estate Tax Exemption Board found that properties involved were "not now being used for the purposes for which they were originally exempt" and recommended assessment of taxes.

Total valuation of the properties ordered returned to tax rolls is $143,731.

Dr. Noble Will Conduct At Cathedral Tonight

Dr. T. Tertius Noble, internationally famous organist-composer of St. Thomas' Church, New York City, tonight at 8:30 will conduct a festival of choir music at Washington Cathedral.

Paul Callaway, Cathedral organist-choirmaster, will accompany 100 men and boys from four local churches in a program of early English, Italian and contemporary American and English compositions. They will come from the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation; St. John's, Georgetown; Holy Comforter Chapel, and Washington Cathedral.

District Circles Speculate On Retirement of Police Heads

Whether Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and his two assistants, Inspectors I. H. Edwards and Bernard W. Thompson, will retire as a result of the Commissioners' "physical fitness" review was a matter for speculation in District government circles yesterday.

It is well known that none of the three has any intention of retiring of his own free will, though all are eligible to leave the department on half salary voluntarily.

Maj. Brown, often called the District's most successful police chief, is well liked by high-ranking citizens. His work with police boys' clubs has cemented his position.

Inspector Thompson has the support of the White House supplemented by strong political connections. He says, however, if the Commissioners want to retire him he will not oppose them.

Though Commissioner Young said his order for a specific review of recent physical examinations of all men over 55 "speaks for itself," he has indicated repeatedly his desire for a "streamlined police force commanded by young men."

He first revealed his desire some months ago when he refused to approve a recommendation of Maj. Brown to make Capt. James E. Bobo, 66, an inspector. He insisted upon a young man at that time and Inspector Arthur E. Miller was given the job. Bobo requested retirement.

Commissioner Young, it is understood, is much impressed with several younger officers who have brilliant police records. One man, though not young he is still below 60, Inspector Edward J. Kelly, is known to be in high favor with the Commissioners.

Capts. Floyd Truscott, Tenth Precinct; John H. Fowler, Thirteenth Precinct; Richard E. Mansfield, Ninth Precinct; Clarence Talley, Seventh Precinct, are all well thought of by city officials and all are under 55. Acting Capt. Earl P. Hartman, Maj. Brown's right-hand man, made a good impression at the District Building recently when he conducted an investigation into shortages in the Collector of Taxes office.

The Commissioners have the power to retire any official or private in the police and fire departments who is over 60 and who has 30 years of service. Edwards, Thompson and Brown are all in this class.

Southwest Children To Begin Frolic Today

Army Dreams Of Super-Super Flying Forts

By Stephen J. McDonough
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, May 14.—It may be a long way off yet, but Army Air Corps technicians are talking about fleets of "flying battleships" of the future.

Such planes would dwarf one of the world's largest military planes now being readied for test flights at Santa Monica, Calif., the 80-ton, 4-engine Douglas B-19.

Engines developing 8,000 horsepower each are being talked of as the motive power for the super-planes. The B-19 wings carry 2,000 horsepower engines.

Even while the aeronautical specialists at the Douglas plant are heaving sighs of relief over the completion of five years of intensive work on their newest giant, they are hurrying back to their drawing boards to design new ones which will make the present plane look like a fledgling.

The fundamental principle of the engineers is that "the bigger they are the more efficient and stable they are" and more "pay load" per horsepower can be packed into the increasingly larger planes.

Such planes might be built as flying battleships with armor impervious to all but heavy artillery. Present four-motored bombers could taxi under their wings without touching a propeller tip. Heavy cannon served by full gun crews, with ammunition delivered by automatic hoists, could be installed in the wings and the fuselage. Full-sized bunks and food facilities would be part of the equipment.

Majority of Spaniards Want British to Win, Writer Finds

By John Lloyd
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, May 14.—Opinion in Spain favorable to an English victory is founded not so much on love of the British as on a feeling that if the British win, Spain's lot will be easier.

The feeling is similar to that in France, with the exception that there is more of a division. While in France one would have to look far and wide to find German sympathizers, in Spain a considerable group of the population is in that category.

I recall an incident outside Madrid which illustrates the clash of opinions among Spaniards. For over an hour native partisans of the two sides involved in the war fought in a night club brawl that ended in many sore heads and some dagger wounds.

While one side shouted "Long live England!" the other yelled "Death to the English!" I had gone to the club with a party of English people and we were pushed into an upstairs room without exit before the battlers favoring the British finally won.

Windows had been shattered, bottles thrown indiscriminately and one Spanish woman had been hurled bodily against a wall, to collapse with a horrible scream, then stagger back to her feet, crying "Long live England!"

Order Rigidly Enforced

Such incidents are rare, however, as order in Spain is rigidly enforced.

It is my opinion that those who wish the English to win are the considerable majority. Those in the pro-Axis camp, however, are the aggressive faction, and party leaders are constantly stating that it is right and proper for a select minority to lead the country.

Spain's single-party system is born of the civil war and the Nationalist victory. It is a merger of elements that once threatened to come to blows within the Nationalist camp.

International events that followed on Franco's triumph have had a large influence on the shaping of the present Spanish state. When the civil war ended in 1939, it was already apparent that a general European war was in the offing. Franco had received bountiful support from the Axis powers, owed them a large debt. And only slightly more than a year after he won his own war, he had powerful German military forces on his northern border.

Party Approved by Axis

There was much talk in Spain that the generals would sooner or later insist on great influence in the government. The party had been steadily increasing its power under the approving gaze of the Axis countries.

Last week the military influence was finally increased, but the full significance of this move remains obscure. Franco has remained popular with his adherents.

When people think of Spain today, they think of a country reduced to a desperate state of hunger. The situation lends itself to exaggeration, but it is doubtful if there is another country in Europe, excepting Poland, that is suffering so much as is Spain. The food shortage is by all means acute. It is due to a combination of circumstances.

Foremost among questions is that of whether foodstuffs are being drained from Spain by Germany, or Germany and Italy. If this is not so, people ask, why is there a shortage of olive oil, which Spain produces in abundance? Why is there such a shortage of rice, also a leading product. And why, in a wheat producing country, should people be reduced to a mere mouthful of bread.

Both the Germans and the Spanish authorities deny that food is being sent to Germany. Other circumstances that must be taken into consideration in accounting for the shortage are that during the Civil War agriculture went largely untended, fields were ravaged and equipment and transportation facilities destroyed.

Blockade Adds to Difficulty

Getting back to adequate production would be a process of some years, even under normal circumstances. With the European War and the British blockade, the circumstances have been anything but normal.

There is plenty to eat in Madrid restaurants—at a formidable price. Food is much harder to get, however, in the stores; therefore keeping house is a problem. The people have recourse on a large scale to bootleg buying, purchasing from agents who come in from the country with supplies for clandestine sale. Prices from the bootleggers run several times higher than the store prices. Flour may sell at 60 cents a pound, and even then be far from pure.

With bootleg prices entirely beyond their means and supplies in the stores inadequate, the great mass of people in cities and towns of Spain go on short diet.

The result is more noticeable in a general physical weakening than in cases of actual starvation.

Looking out of my office window one day I saw what appeared to be a bundle of rags in the gutter. I sent a boy out to investigate and gave him five pesetas on the chance.

He poked the bundle, the head of a young woman emerged. He helped her to a place where she could sit up against a building. She had simply felt weak and collapsed, she told him. She took the five pesetas and after resting a few minutes managed to get back to her feet and depart.

Such things happen in Madrid, frequently.

Concert to Benefit British Churches

A benefit concert for the purpose of aiding one of the bombed churches in England will be given tomorrow night in Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church by Mary Apple, contralto, and Sylvia Meyer, harpist.

Accompanied by Claude Robeson, Miss Apple will sing: "An die Musik" (Schubert), "Pastorale" (Veracini), "Wie Wundersam" (Schillings), "Romanza de Solita" (Pittaluga), "I Sometimes Think" and "The Worldly Hope" from "In a Persian Garden" (Lehmann), "This Fair and Beauteous Song" (Chopin-Gaines), "Maytime" (Stuart Ross).

Miss Meyer will be assisted by Quinta Jensen Frey in Widor's Chorale and Variations for harp and piano. She will also play a solo group of pieces by Debussy, Palmgren and Salzedo, and accompany Miss Apple in the following songs: "The Heart Worships" (Holst), "Ave Maria" (Bach-Gounod), "Ouvre tes yeux bleus" (Massenet) and "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms."

AMOCO does it again!

The Company that gave America its FIRST special motor fuel is now FIRST AGAIN...with new, mightier HYDRO-FORMED AMOCO!

Over twenty-five years ago, the American Oil Company gave Amoco-Gas to the public. It was the first special motor fuel—making possible the high compression automobile motor.

At first people smiled—wondered why a special fuel was necessary. Then they tried Amoco-Gas, and discovered that they obtained performance and economy absolutely impossible for any ordinary gasoline to deliver.

Steadily Improved, Year by Year

As motors became more powerful, as compression increased, as operating temperatures moved up, Amoco-Gas kept pace, stepping up quality and efficiency with each motor improvement.

Amoco Does It Again!

For years chemists and engineers have striven to improve gasoline efficiency even more, by regulating its combustion in the cylinders. They knew that if a way could be found to cut down violent, explosive shock, much power-waste could be eliminated—transformed into useful energy.

Hydro-forming Solves The Problem!

Now the problem has been solved by the revolutionary new Hydro-forming Process of refining gasoline, pioneered by the American Oil Company, and used to make Hydro-formed Amoco-Gas.

Hydro-forming imparts new and even mightier qualities to Amoco. Most important of all, it permits combustion control—Flame Control!

Flame Control Gives Cushioned Power!

Hydro-formed Amoco-Gas burns in a different way. Flame Control reduces violent, explosive shock, cuts down waste, and produces more useful energy. Cushioned Power now replaces severe detonation—delivers a satin-soft, s-m-o-o-t-h surge of energy—a flow of driving power that follows the pistons through their entire course. Vibration is hushed—destructive pounding on bearings and moving parts is reduced.

Better Road Octane!

Official results of road tests by Industry Committees show that conventional gasolines, on the average, lose octanes on the road. Hydro-formed Amoco-Gas actually gains them—surpassing laboratory figures because its knock-arresting constituents become vaporized, distributed more evenly and impartially to all cylinders alike.

An All-time High in Quality!

Good as Amoco-Gas has always been, it is now mightier than ever—reaching an all-time high in quality and efficiency. Everything that makes for outstanding performance moves to new levels. Point for point, it is the finest motor fuel we have ever produced.

Test Hydro-formed Amoco-Gas yourself! Compare it feature for feature, with any other gas you have ever used. See how it outdates your old conception of quick starting, of getaway and pickup, of pulling power and mileage.

Never before have we made such a mighty motor fuel!

AMOCO

Always the best—now better than ever!

Liquor Prices

No fair-minded citizen would presume at this time to pass judgment upon the individuals alleged to be involved in a conspiracy to fix liquor prices in Washington. There is a broad gap between allegations of this sort and convictions in court. Yet the very fact that a grand jury investigation into these charges is about to be launched is cause for satisfaction. Experience has shown that the liquor business is particularly vulnerable to conspiracies and abusive practices. Rigid enforcement of the law is essential to prevent corrupt interests from obtaining a foothold in the industry. In the present instance, investigators for the district attorney's office assert that a group of local dealers are working together secretly to fix prices and to "take care of" other dealers who refuse to join them in that undertaking. Certainly this charge should be explored in every detail. In the meantime the community owes District Attorney Curran a vote of thanks for his vigilance in uncovering the alleged conspiracy.

Priorities

The Senate Military Affairs Committee lost no time in correcting the blunder of the House in voting to set up a separate priorities division. As passed by the House, the priorities bill was little short of a sabotage measure. It would have denied the Office of Production Management, which is responsible for the output of military equipment and supplies, the right to say what orders should be filled first by defense factories. That power would have been given to a separate agency. What the House was aiming at is something of a mystery, but in any event it is difficult to believe that a majority of the members understood the bill they passed.

By all means the OPM ought to have the power granted in this bill to determine the order in which defense contracts shall be filled. It can now require completion of Army and Navy contracts before private orders may be filled. The bill approved by the Senate Military Affairs Committee further authorizes the OPM to give priority to contracts under the lend-lease program. It is reasonable to assume that the Senate, too, will sanction systematic and orderly regulation of defense production. And the House should hasten to concur to overcome the unfortunate impression created by the destructive amendment it attached to the original bill.

Hitler And Vichy

The Petain government is reported to have unanimously approved the terms of the agreement made by Adolf Hitler and Vice Premier Jean Darlan. What these terms are has not yet been revealed. Undoubtedly Hitler baited the hook with tempting morsels. It is rumored, for instance, that in return for a greater degree of "collaboration" between France and Germany, Hitler has agreed to relinquish to Vichy a segment of the occupied area, including Paris; to ease the present restrictions regarding the flow of men and goods across the border dividing the two zones; to lower the costs of occupation saddled on Vichy and to release some of the French prisoners. But the "collaboration" called for in return is likely, in the long run, to chain France more tightly than ever to the Nazi chariot.

In the economic sphere Vichy long ago agreed to serve as the hewer of wood and drawer of water for the Third Reich. In part that arrangement resulted from economic compulsion; in part from the systematic looting of French resources under the guise of collecting costs of occupation. Hitherto, however, Marshal Petain has resisted every attempt by Hitler to get France to go much beyond the terms of the armistice agreement of last June. He has refused to grant Germany naval bases on the French Mediterranean or African coasts; to permit the French fleet to become an adjunct of the German war machine, or to permit Germany to use territories under French control in the Mediterranean for prosecution of the war against Great Britain. Now there is reason to fear that some or all of these long-standing demands will be granted by Vichy. If so, France will become Germany's tacit or even active ally in the struggle against the nation whose victory alone offers France hope of salvation.

It is inconceivable that the French people will favor such an arrangement or will view it, despite the temporary benefits they may derive from it, with anything but loathing. But they have nothing to say about their destinies at this time.

Revising The Draft

The Selective Service Act was passed last September with the object of creating a citizen army in the shortest possible time. Congress properly decided to distribute the burden of defending the United States in a critical period among a large number of citizens. It wished to avoid putting an undue burden upon any one age group. Current plans to eliminate men over 30 years of age from active training do not indicate a mistake in judgment last September. Rather, they suggest a logical development of the Selective Service system in the light of actual experience.

In requesting modification of the act so that the President could defer the training of the upper-age groups, Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of Selective Service, points out that few men in those age brackets are being inducted and that their presence in the citizen army creates problems which might well be avoided. It is a well-known fact that men over 30 are not as adaptable to military life as youths from 21 to 25. Obviously, too, the drafting of older men tends to have a more profound effect upon the economic and social life of the country than the selection of single men near the beginning of their economic careers.

What seems to be more important from the viewpoint of the Army is the long period of service which may be expected from the young trainee. Men inducted at the age of 21 are likely to remain physically fit throughout the subsequent 10-year period when they will be members of the trained reserve. On the other hand, men trained at 35 could scarcely be expected to remain active reservists for any length of time.

Gen. Hershey's proposal would not give us a permanent selective service system. If universal training is found to be essential, all male citizens might well be inducted at an early age. But that is a question for the future. During the present emergency we must still draw trainees from a relatively wide age group. Certainly, however, the President ought to have power to defer the drafting of men beyond the peak of military efficiency so long as that policy can best serve the national interest. Gen. Hershey's recommendation is especially timely because it coincides with an order to expedite the cataloguing of skills and experience of registered men. The OPM has been strangely negligent in designating the men of special skills essential in defense industries who should be left on the job. When the training of all the registrants has been recorded by the Selective Service system, assignments of even greater importance than military drill may be found for thousands of experts in the upper-age group.

The Party Line

We must pause at this point for a word of sympathy for our Communist brethren, especially those who have editorial responsibilities of one kind or another. These comrades, as you know, are under the necessity of harmonizing their obiter dicta with the current party line. They are, of course, accustomed to sudden shifts and reversals of party policy, but nowadays these shifts and reversals come so rapidly that the comrades may be forgiven if they feel a little giddy. The party line has become a most astonishing snarl of knots, loops and tangles, and new tangles are added overnight. It is hard to see how the boys at the Daily Worker, for instance, can ever put their paper to bed without getting into a cold sweat of apprehension. How can they be sure that the morrow will not find them excommunicated for such unspeakable heresies as imperialist warmongering on the one hand or social fascism on the other?

The comrades who are planted in labor union locals and other organizations are in an equally sad fix. They must be half crazy trying to figure out whether the Kremlin wants them to whoop it up for Col. Lindbergh and Joe McWilliams or to start knitting socks and sweaters for Bundles for Britain. They know that what is strict Marxian orthodoxy at 10 a. m. may very well be a horrid crime against the proletariat by 1:30 p. m. There is an unfortunate but inevitable time lag in all these matters. Thus by the time the faithful can be apprised of Comrade Stalin's latest change of mind the chances are that he will have changed it several times over again.

The dilemma of the comrades is perfectly illustrated by the celebrated affair of Rudolf Hess. It would require a clairvoyant to figure out the party line on that one. Suppose the comrades should decide that this time Joe and Adolf have become buddies in earnest, and should accordingly follow the Nazi line of denouncing Hess as a lunatic. Tomorrow Isvestia or Pravda may disclose that Hess had to flee Germany because he was exposed as the secret agent of the G. P. U.! Again, suppose they should assume that Hess really carried peace terms personally indorsed by Comrade Stalin. Anyway you look at it, this Hess business is a hot potato.

Yet it must be confessed that the boys on the Daily Worker have handled it with magnificent finesse. They followed the one formula that fits all possible cases. In an article by Oakley Johnson they cite testimony from one of the 1937 propaganda trials to indicate that this Hess business, which has so amazed and mystified the world, is just another conspiracy of the Trotskyist wreckers.

British Propaganda

It is rumored that the real reason back of Mr. Churchill's decision to make Lord Beaverbrook his No. 2 without portfolio is to enable him to give some time to the vital problem of propaganda. Lord Beaverbrook was minister of information in the last war. In this war no department in Britain has had to take such a grilling as has the Ministry of Information. In spite of the fact that in the popular American imagination, no propagandist is supposed to be more astute than the British, British propaganda plays a poor second to British fighting and to British resistance in general. Certainly the British have been left way behind by the Germans, as, for instance, in the publicity in connection with the Balkan campaign. It is now known that no Allied strategist at the beginning of the war had envisaged a repetition of the Salonika expedition of World War I. Such an exploit was excluded because of the decisive influence which the air arm would give to the Nazis in repelling a landing by sea. The expedition which has now been withdrawn was authorized, as is plain from Mr. Churchill's statements, for entirely different reasons, and was not expected to yield any military result for British arms. Yet Britain's spokesmen left the adventure to be regarded, as Col. Donovan put it, as a toehold out of which a foothold was expected to develop.

It would have been difficult, of course, to make the truth known in advance to commentators who were carried away by the prospect of setting up a Balkan front for a British attack on Germany. But the difficulty was not insuperable. It should not have been impossible, either in London or here, for British officialdom, which is authoritatively and numerously represented in the United States, to bespeak a sober appraisal of British expectations and the lack of expectations in the Balkans. This, however, was not done. And the result was that, in spite of the fact that the Balkans was a sideshow, there was created in some American minds after the evacuation a feeling of despondency about the British cause.

This feeling was intensified by the skillful manner in which the Nazis exploited their successes by releasing pictures of the Balkan fighting aimed at showing that the Nazi machine is irresistible. The best propaganda with which the British could counter this kind of publicity is the plain, unvarnished truth. Americans would like to see, for example, some illustrations of the heroism and epic fighting in the Mediterranean; they would like to get the facts about the food situation in Britain; they would like to have more details about the Battle of the Atlantic; they would like more information about the economic effects of the air raids. There is ample material available, in short, for propaganda (using the word in its best sense) which would galvanize the American effort, but which at the same time would reinforce and fortify Mr. Roosevelt's thesis that Britain can win.

Welcome Visitor

The warm reception which Dr. Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu, the new foreign minister of Argentina, is receiving in Washington is not only a tribute to the attractive personality of our distinguished visitor but also reflects the increasingly close and cordial relations which obtain between his country and our own. To be sure, there have been and there still are questions at issue between Argentina and the United States. Some of them are difficult questions. But none is incapable of solution, given the cooperative spirit and mutual understanding which increasingly characterizes the dealings of American nations with each other. Such visits as that which Dr. Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu is making here are of great practical usefulness. The Argentine foreign minister will discover how deep-seated and earnest is the desire of the people and Government of the United States steadily to strengthen the foundations of inter-American amity—a feeling which, happily, he fully shares.

FRAIL OF HEART

In the midst of happiness my heart was broken
So softly that only I heard:
Nothing had happened, there was not spoken
One cruel word.

It broke of its own weight, its own small measure.
There was no salt in my weeping.
Surely, a heart so frail is nothing to treasure,—
Not worth keeping.

British Imperialism

Those members of the America First Committee who have learned nothing since they abandoned their high school history books and who still think of British Imperialism in terms of Sir Francis Drake and Capt. John Hawkins and who are still fighting the Revolution and the War of 1812, should be required to read "Who Owns the British Empire" appearing in the May copy of the Readers Digest.

These individuals whose education ceased when they left school are familiar with the "Declaration of Independence" of 1776 but have never heard of the "Statute of Westminster" of 1931 by which six nations acquired complete independence.

Great Britain draws no tribute whatsoever from any of these nations or from any colony, but, on the contrary, the long-suffering British taxpayer is often mulcted for the defense and development of these overseas territories. Every member of this community of nations enjoys the protection of the world's largest and most expensive fleet at no cost—all at the expense of the British taxpayer, the most abused taxpayer in the history of the world.

Furthermore, the British taxpayer not only provides a navy for the protection of this community of nations but he also maintains the relief rolls in many places such as the West Indian Islands. We shall, undoubtedly, soon be able to appreciate what the British taxpayer has experienced during the last 20 years.

In the last 300 years England has become civilized and the Nazis have taken Germany back 500 years to a state of barbarism.

Crowded Crossing

May I offer the following suggestion for consideration. There is an ordinary traffic light at the intersection of New York Avenue and Virginia Avenue. New York Avenue is a one-way street and does not cut through Virginia Avenue. During the rush hours there is heavy traffic both toward and away from town on Virginia Avenue; hence traffic turning into New York Avenue must wait until traffic in the opposite direction clears. Usually only a few cars are able to turn into New York Avenue before the light changes. If a left arrow light were added to the present ordinary traffic light, it would allow opportunity for cars turning into New York Avenue to clear before the light changed for the Virginia Avenue traffic to proceed in the ordinary fashion. Such an arrangement would necessitate no change in timing of the lights.

The Recent National Folk Festival

I do not want the National Folk Festival of 1941 to be completely over without an expression of my appreciation to The Post for making it possible. I know the generosity which prompted your guarantee to the Festival. I know how much plugging was needed to develop popular support. You have done and are doing a service to our country.

I have indicated to Miss Knott my belief that we could materially improve the Festival by developing regional pride in certain presentations. For example, my family and I were delighted with the Shaw dancers from Colorado Springs. They had enough Western color to appeal to a Western Congressman.

I know that Congressman Jed Johnson and I were delighted with the Kiowa Indians. I spent a lot of time with Indian dances and dancers which one by one could be brought into the Festival and highlight it as effectively as did the group from Haiti.

For instance, there is a hoop dance which is fast and spectacular as contrasted with the usual slow rhythm of the Indian dancing. The Eagle dances I am sure you have had. The Navajo miracle dances are interesting but of no particular value in a large auditorium. The Crow dance of the Zia or Jemez Indians is colorful.

I suggested to Miss Knott that by a little pressure on certain Senators and Representatives, we might be able to bring some of these things into the Folk Festival. We all have railroad lines which are glad to cooperate, and when they aren't we have bus lines; occasionally air lines are willing to take part. It seems to me Miss Knott has done very well by her present methods but that quite a lot of help could be given her in the development of things which are more colorful than old fiddlers' contests. To me the Festival lagged at the point where the trainman sang Casey Jones.

I have a friend, in Sweden, Kurt Belfrage, of Stockholm, who has taken time from his duties as head of the Swedish Stock Exchange to develop folk dancing. He has found it a very interesting avocation, but he can only develop one type and it centers largely in the Province of Dalecarlia. We in America have the unusual opportunity of displaying the very thing which I saw in the Folk Festival this year—a Bohemian group, an Indian group, a cowboy group—all the elements which we have poured into our melting pot and which we need to retain somewhat as groups if we are to reach back into these lands.

I am thinking of the article in Fortune Magazine, in the April issue, I believe, which discusses a possible American offensive into the countries of South America and possibly some of the European countries. The point of contact with Latin America could easily be our Spanish folklore as developed and still retained in the Spanish border lands. Our contact with Europe might come from the groups representing immigrants who have retained the costumes, the songs and the dances of their native lands and who in the preservation of these might reach back to those native lands to establish and keep alive the channels of influence which the author of the Fortune article thought so important.

My father came from Sweden as an immigrant. In the next generation, as president of the world Rotary organization, I went back to Sweden to proclaim and institute a Rotary district organization in Sweden. I have dozens of friends among the business glasses of Sweden, but I do nothing toward keeping alive an appreciation of America and her democratic institutions—the thing which brought my father to this country. Maybe through the medium of the development of folklore I could reopen those channels which are now almost exclusively the property of Hitler.

I have gone a long way to say that I think the Folk Festival now has more significance than it had when you first sponsored it. It could be used as a very essential element of our American propaganda. I believe you have in it an element that can be effectively used for the service of this country in its relationships to Europe and Latin America, and I hope to see it grow.

Far Eastern Policy

To one who is trying to follow the course of fast-moving events with some sense of logic, it appears very confusing and inconsistent that the United States is supposed to be aiding China, and, at the same time, is actually sending war material to Japan.

According to the Department of Commerce statistics, United States oil shipments to Japan increased from 1,279,000 barrels in February to 1,553,000 in March. In addition, the British and American oil companies in the Dutch East Indies have just renewed an agreement to supply Japan with oil from the rich Batavian fields. Furthermore, huge amounts of steel, copper and other war materials are continuously flowing to Japan from America. The fact is that the bulk of the war goods which Japan is using in her aggression against China comes directly from the United States. And, inevitably, if the flow of war material continues from the United States, Japan is going to use it in a war against the United States. What sort of a policy is it which proposes to aid England on the one hand and actually helps one of England's Axis enemies on the other?

Another anachronism is the banning of machine tools—which, by the way, were already paid for—to Russia. One of the reasons for this, advanced by the State Department, is that Russia made a peace pact with Japan. Therefore, Russia should be punished for making a peace pact. Why for Heaven's sake, punish only one party to a peace pact? Is a peace pact a crime? Or is the continuation of aid to an aggressor against nations whom we pretend to be aiding not a crime?

Another question: Is our Far Eastern policy any wiser than the policy of the British government at Munich? And will it lead to any better results? I dare say that we will be in exactly the same position vis-a-vis Japan that England is in reference to Germany.

The policy of the Administration, in spite of all its protestations, is not aid to China. It is not a peace policy. It is a war policy, directed, it seems, by those interests which profit by the sale of oil to Japan. And the Administration is executing that policy with its tongue in its cheek. This attitude is bound to lead the American people into the same disaster that Munich led the French, and is now leading the British.

There appears to be one way, and only one way, to help China, and that is by stopping the sale of oil that helps to ignite the fires of war everywhere. In that way we will not only be helping China but helping ourselves and aiding the forces of peace. And who knows, but that "aid to China" is only one side of the same coin which also says "aid to Britain"?

The Post Impressionist

Revolucion

The period was some thirty years ago, and this observer was making his second—or perhaps third—trip through a delightful little country in Latin America: We shall call it the Republic of Chica-Chica. Your reporter was very callow, there was still on area of dampness behind his ears, and he thirsted for adventure. Thus it was he saw his first revolution begun and ended twixt dawn and dusk on a bright midsummer's day in February.

Now there were, and perhaps there still are, two political parties in Chica-Chica, which might have been called the Ins and the Outs, but they weren't. And they weren't called the Azules and the Rojos, either, but those names will serve the purposes of this report. The political system was delightfully simple: the two parties rotated in office every two or three years, the way the Republicans and Democrats used to rotate in office here—remember? Only there weren't any elections. When the Azules thought the Rojos had had access to the treasury long enough, they proclaimed a Revolucion, so that they would have a go at it themselves. Fortunately machine-guns were new, ineffective, and too expensive anyway, so the casualties in the Revoluciones were not numerous. The out-going Presidente, if he escaped at all, usually escaped to Paris, where he lived out a well-rounded life, sipping his aperitivos in the terrasse-cafes, and gossiping with other ex-Presidentes.

The first intimation your raconteur had that the periodical Revolucion was heading up was when early one morning, the iron shop-window shutters raised but a half-hour before were suddenly and noisily lowered. It being February, the streets were being decorated with festoons of colored electric lights for the nearly-due Carnival, and to add to the din of the shutters, the electricians suddenly began throwing hundreds of electric bulbs on the pavements—all, apparently, in sheer exuberance. Then in the distance down the Avenue came the cause and significance of all the excitement, a regiment of infantry, some three hundred strong, dog-trotting along rapidly, arms at the "carry," drums beating somewhat erratically, and bugles sounding a spasmodic march. The sidewalks, crowded with early morning shoppers a moment before, cleared as if by magic. Seen from a second-story balcony, it was interesting to observe how crowded the street was ahead of the regiment, and how empty it was after the regiment had passed.

Now, the capital city of [illegible] (which wasn't its name) was laid out in the checkerboard fashion of Latin-American town-planning in Colonial times: square blocks, straight streets, right-angle corners, and a central plaza, without which no Latin American town is complete. Some twelve streets and avenues centered in the Plaza, and down one of the roads parallel to the street in which Regiment Number One was trotting, there trotted Regiment Number Two, also with drums, bugles, etc. As the two regiments came to each of a dozen connecting side streets, they glanced through at each other, but they never fired through. An old-timer explained: all previous successful Revoluciones had been fought out in the Plaza, and these two regiments, one loyal to the government, and the other revolutionary, were actually racing for possession of the Plaza.

When the two columns debouched into the Plaza out of parallel streets at about the same instant, firing began, and some poor devils of soldados were killed, as usual, regrettably, but inevitably. However, the regiment of the Revolucion was so chagrined to find that the loyal regiment had reached the Plaza simultaneously, and before they could consolidate, that they had no stomach for the fight. By noon the courts-martial were sitting, by 3 P. M. the firing-squads were liquidating the Jefes de la Revolucion, and when this observer dropped in to his usual cafe for his usual before-dinner appetizer about 7 o'clock that evening, the waiter, in answer to his querry said, "Revolucion? Senor, there isn't any Revolucion; there was a disturbance this morning, but Revolucion, no hay."

Meantime, the story of how the navy was saved deserves a paragraph. At the height of the morning's disturbance the Minister of Marine phoned the Admiral of the Fleet to take the Navy away from the dock to which it was moored, and move it out into the harbor, where the Azules (or perhaps it was the Rojos) couldn't get it. The Navy was immobile, there was no steam up; but the Admiral was resourceful. He chartered a couple of tugs belonging to the British Steamship Company that served all the ports along the coast, and had the navy towed triumphantly out into the mid-harbor, her flag snapping from her mast in the brisk morning breeze. There she lay all day, her guns—both of them, trained sullenly on Miramar, her crew vigilant to repel anyone who would be foolish enough to row out and try to capture her.

The next afternoon, after the hasty funerals, there was a grand military—and naval—review, to celebrate the restoration to normalcy. And down the crowded streets of Miramar leading to the Plaza marched in slow and measured tread, arms at the "carry," drums beating magnificently, and bugles sounding a stirring march, Regiment Number One followed by Regiment Number Two. The crew of the Navy brought up the rear.

The absolute song hit of the Carnival, some ten days later, the most successful in years, was "Revolucion? No Hay."

India Today

By T. A. Raman

(Mr. Raman, an Indian journalist, is on a tour of the United States. He is London Editor of the United Press of India.)

Nationalists Cooperate With Britain

NEVER WILL the Nazi or the Soviet or the Japanese found a fifth column in India. India will as one man resist any direct attack on its integrity, precisely as it is doing all it can now to meet the peril at the strategic outposts of the Suez, Basra and Singapore. Whatever the course of the argument with Britain, no Indian leader will ever do anything materially to interfere with that country's magnificent war-effort. And, as danger approaches and if Britain's war position becomes imperiled, nationalist leaders in India will become not more intransigent but more willing to compromise.

These unshakable conclusions are clear to any intelligent student of India. They derive from the fact that though nationalist India is determined to achieve full self-government, she is equally as determined that the Nazis shall be defeated.

Long before Mr. Neville Chamberlain declared war on Germany, India, with one mind through all her papers and public men, proclaimed her implacable anti-Nazism and vigorously supported Mr. Churchill's absolute stand against aggression. Her heart went out to each of the invaded countries from the days of the Abyssinian war and the Austrian anschluss.

Springing from the depths of a culture which is the very antithesis of all that Hitler and his henchmen incarnate, India's basic anti-Nazism is a little noticed fact of profound significance to her future and the world's. Here is a sentiment in which all of India's diversities meet and in which, too, the spirit of modern India rings true to her ancient culture.

But it is more than sentiment. It is reinforced also by the urge of self-preservation of a huge and bewilderingly composite population. If Nazi racial phobias were to prevail, there is probably not one district in India which could be organized into a stable political unit. Nor has India any illusions about what would befall her lot if the Nazis were to win. Political slavery would be the smallest part of the price the country would then have to pay. The past of India as well as her future, her heritage and her hopes alike would perish under the Nazi heel. The very concept "India" would be lost, at least for our time and our generation.

IT IS because anti-Naziism is the determining factor in India's attitude to the war that India today is making a magnificent military and economic contribution; that she has raised over half a million fully equipped troops and sent the bulk of them to the Middle and Far East; that her factories hum 24 hours a day; that her volunteers far exceed her equipment; that her ordnance units work months ahead of schedules; that she pours out a hundred vital raw products in quantities the only limit to which is the shipping space available. And all the while, despite bitterness and misunderstanding, the most ardent nationalist leaders from Gandhi downwards repeatedly declare that they will do nothing to interfere with this immense war effort.

No Indian leader has ever been accused of flirting with the Axis or Japan. Pandit Nehru—after Gandhi, the most famous Indian nationalist—so curtly declined to meet Hitler when he was last in Europe, that Goebbels launched a violent personal campaign against him. Likewise Mussolini knows how vain have been his efforts to attract Indian nationalists into his influence. The dismal German broadcasts to India have failed even more completely than their attempt on British morale. Lavish promises of "a place as the supreme Asiatic power" evoke but derision and contempt. India ever since the war has proved the soundness of the shrewd judgment of the German banker, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, who, after an elaborately camouflaged tour of the country in 1938, reported to Hitler that the fifth-column possibilities of the country were negligible.

India is profoundly, unshakably anti-Nazi, and, by the same token, even her most "leftist" nationalists headed by Pandit Nehru denounced the Nazi-Soviet Pact and condemned the invasion of Finland in scathing terms. Communists in India number not more than 500 out of 400,000,000 and are under the watchful eyes of the public as well the police. India denounced too the aggression on China and today boycotts Japanese goods to such effect that most Japanese firms in Bombay and Calcutta have closed up and left.

With such identity of thought between Britain and India, why is the political problem not yet solved? What is the difference between what Britain has offered to India and what the Indian nationalists demand?

THE BRITISH offer was made in August last by the viceroy and has since been tirelessly urged and explained by the viceroy and Secretary of State. Pledging anew that the government's policy was to see India a free and equal partner within the British Commonwealth, Britain proposed that a conference representing all interests in India should meet immediately after the war to draft a constitution satisfactory to the powerful minorities as well as the majority. Britain agrees to implement this constitution provided it guarantees the continued performance of her obligations in the country. As to the immediate future, Britain says that it is impossible in the midst of a life and death struggle to recast the whole basis of the central government of India and, therefore, proposes to take leaders of Indian parties into the viceroy's executive council.

Had this proposal, which is still open, been accepted, the position would substantially be as follows: Full self-government in the 11 provinces into which the country is divided, which India already enjoys, plus a great share in administrative power at the central government.

But the offer was vehemently and instantly rejected by nationalist India mainly on the ground that the expansion of the viceroy's executive council may give administrative power but not control over policy and was therefore no answer to the demand for immediate responsible government.

This is a difference which sounds large in theory but is it likely to be nearly so big in the actual conditions of a life and death struggle? The viceroy would, indeed, be a very foolish man if he did not refer all major issues of policy to the executive council, consisting of leaders of the same parties which run all the provincial governments in the country. With goodwill and realism, a very close approximation to the provisional national government would have been secured and team-work of the various parties on a common objective would inevitably have led to a fully satisfactory constitution at the end of the war.

FROM INDIA'S own point of view this British offer might be the safest solution of her immensely complicated issues. But the offer was tragically misunderstood in India. Writing a week after he knew its terms, Pandit Nehru made a series of sweeping criticisms, every one of which has been disproved by the government's explanations. But the misunderstanding was natural, for the turgid language and clumsy arrangement of the statement and its sterile phrasing did not reflect the genuine anxiety of all sections of Britain to come to a settlement. Fearful of a majority rejection and anxious not to offend the powerful Moslem minority, the viceroy left many vital details to be filled in by subsequent negotiations, which, unfortunately, never developed.

The largest political party in the country, the Indian National Congress, rejected the offer and summoned Mahatma Gandhi to the leadership, and he forthwith proceeded to equate his pacifism with the political objection of three-fourths of his party. Anxious not to interfere with the war-effort, but compelled to some action, Gandhi elaborated a campaign of "Individual civil disobedience"—a movement which, unlike his previous efforts is not an attempt by mass passive resistance to paralyse the administration of the country but rather is in the nature of an emphatic and dramatic protest. Selected leaders made symbolic protests and succeeded in getting arrested. The movement has run its course but achieved no result, and today responsible Congress newspapers led by the Hindu of Madras, categorically demand that the campaign be dropped and negotiations with the government be resumed.

The factors, which delay settlement, are basically these. First, the lack of a working arrangement between the Congress and the next most powerful party in the country, the Moslem League, which claims to speak on behalf of India's 80,000,000 Muslims. The league undoubtedly overstates its claims and its strength but this is compensated for by the fact that, though the Muslims are less than a fourth of the country, they are about half of the Indian army as presently constituted. Further, any Moslem grievance, real or imagined, reverberates throughout the strategic network of Moslem countries in the Near East. The government can probably overlook Mr. Mohamadali Jinnah, the titular leader of the Moslem League, but not Sir Sikander Hayat, elected prime minister of the martial province of the Punjab who supports him. A working arrangement between the Moslem League and the Congress is therefore essential in any wartime settlement.

ANOTHER factor which has so far delayed rational compromise is the personality of Mahatma Gandhi, who, as the world's most sincere pacifist, is averse to any wartime settlement which would commit his party to active leadership in a war of violence. Two-thirds of the Congress party and about 90 per cent of India does not believe in the ideal of a completely unarmed independence, but, with Gandhi indifferent, the statesmanlike elements in the Congress are without their natural leader.

But facts tell and the facts are that between India and Britain today are no such differences as Nazi and Communist inspired propaganda here make out. But rather there is the deepest identity of sentiment, because both peoples hate the Nazi way of life; of destiny, because they would both perish if the Nazis should win; and even of cold, immediate material interest. Britain's war needs and India's lasting national interests alike demand that India should industrialize and that her defenses should become speedily adequate and self-contained. These basic identities assert themselves and all parties concerned in this immensely complicated problem come together realistically when the danger is at its greatest. The opportunity for a compromise, for instance, came close—to the dismay of the Nazis and the Communists—immediately after, and as a direct result of the fall of France, when Britain's position was its weakest. Today the Nazi menace is again rising with reverses in the Balkans and in Libya, and we notice that firstly the Moslem League drops its more extreme demands and secondly the right-wing nationalists urge a reorientation of Congress policy.

THUS a rational compromise on the basis (though not on the exact terms) of the Viceroy's offer will most probably be reached. But even while it evades us, liberal America might well ponder this blunt truth: that if the calamity of a Nazi victory were to befall the world, then American sympathy for Indian freedom would be of little avail. In every Indian heart is echoed the message of our poet-patriot, Rabindranath Tagore, to President Roosevelt, appealing for full aid to Britain to prevent a Nazi conquest of India.

Big Joe Explains

("Stalin has taken over the post of Premier."—News item)

This grave decision I have made
For all the world to see;
I've talked it over with myself—
I'm going to be ME!

Premiers I used to tolerate,
With now and then a purge,
But in a huddle with myself
I thought we'd better merge.

I've long used oily biggies as Ghost officers of state—
But by a vote of me and I
We now consolidate.

I used them to enunciate
The views obtained from me;
I never liked the pronoun "I,"
And quite abhored the "We."

Premiers I thus allowed to speak,
For they were really me;
For commissars expressing views
The same was true, you see.

If I said, "Take a letter," well,
The boys would do the same.
And just to keep the record strong
I let each sign his name.

For I was just the party chief,
By a distinction sly—
A secretary-general—
And nothing more (my eye!).

But state affairs grew so complex
And hot in latter days,
It got too hard for me to split
The double-cross three ways.

Resourceful are we Communists,
(And I'm an able Red),
But there's so much duplicity
The job calls for one head.

And so I talked with Stalin (Joe),
And Josef talked with me.
And he'll be me and I'll be him

L'ENVOI

This simplifies my country's acts;
Deception it now cuts;
It means a clear and honest course . . .
If you think so, you're nuts!

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Flight Of Hess

FOR AN EXPLANATION of his flight to Britain we are, of course, dependent on what the British authorities find it wise to publish about what on examination they are prepared to believe in the story that Hess is able and willing to tell them. But the known and indisputable facts are impressive. Hitler's first disciple and closest friend, his heir-apparent and his party leader, has surrendered to the enemy. He was not captured. He gave himself up. In order to do this he had to arrange a flight of 800 miles, a feat which certainly required some advance preparation, some assistance from others, and a plan. He has gone deliberately to the country which Hitler has sworn to conquer, has placed himself at the mercy of a government which has the right to shoot him if he attempts any hostile act, has placed himself in a position where, if Hitler ever lays hands on him, he will be beheaded as a traitor.

LIPPMANN

He has placed himself in the power of a government which regards him as one of the chief criminals of modern times, and, therefore, the probability is negligible that he can have hoped to match his wits against the judgment of the Churchill government, or his blandishments against the intense suspicions of an angry and outraged people. If he is deranged, a condition which the German medical profession seems not to have discovered until he had landed in Scotland, there are any number of excellent psychiatrists in Great Britain to examine him. The circumstantial evidence is, therefore, very strong that his flight marks a rupture within the Nazi Party of sufficient importance to have become an issue of loyalty and treason, of life and death.

HESS was until ten days ago a prominent figure in the life of Nazi Germany; he was present and in the first rank at the Reichstag session only a few days ago. We have no way of knowing whether, while he was making these public appearances, he was already planning his flight, or whether there has been in the past few days some sudden but hidden development in affairs which precipitated his flight. It may be that something which he had greatly dreaded—so greatly that he had to stake his life and his honor on his action—has suddenly become a reality.

There are innumerable possibilities of which any one or several in combination may have catastrophic consequences outside and inside of Germany, and extreme consequences personally for anyone as prominent as Rudolf Hess. For the war has entered a revolutionary, one might say a volcanic, phase which is certain to involve the personal destiny of public men.

THROUGH THE FOG of war, what do we see developing under the machinations of Hitler? We see him moving towards Russia—not, it would appear, towards a war with Russia but towards some kind of fusion of the two great European revolutions—the Nazi and the Communist. This will require, if it is to be consummated, a liquidation in Germany and in Russia of tremendous proportions.

We see Hitler moving towards the Moslem world with the object of provoking a fanatical war. This will entail, as would the fusion with Russian Communism, a violent disruption of Christendom in Europe.

We see Hitler moving into the Orient with the object of instigating the destruction of Western influence in what is numerically more than half the world.

We see Hitler moving into western Europe — into France, Spain, and Portugal—a movement which must bring him into mortal conflict with the United States and the peoples of the Western Hemisphere.

We see Hitler seeking to organize the European continent for the prosecution of a World War—a scheme which must entail the revolutionary destruction of the national life of the occupied nations. For in such a Europe there will be room only for peasants, forced laborers, conscripts, and the Quislings who will rule them. The rest must be liquidated.

WHAT WE do not see—because of the absoluteness of the Nazi censorship—is what these vast projects require in the way of an internal transformation of Germany. Shut off as we are from any knowledge of Germany, we are inclined to suppose that these vast revolutionary projects are solely a matter of military action and of external propaganda and intrigue. We are mistaken. A plan of revolution and conquest which is to embrace not only continental Europe but the Slavs and Latins, the Moslems, the Orientals, and in the end the English-speaking peoples will require an even deeper transformation of Germany than Hitler has as yet carried through.

For behind the facade there remains much of the older Germany—the Germany of the Christian churches, of industry and technology, of the workers' organizations, of the bureaucracy, of the professional army, of the family and the peasants and of the villages. The conquest of the world by revolution will require at its origin a thoroughly revolutionized Germany. Those who are inside Germany and inside the inner councils of the revolutionary enterprise know better than we can as yet imagine what this must mean. They know how many heads must roll, what personal catastrophes must follow a decision to liquidate what is left of German society. But what we can only imagine, no man knows better than Rudolf Hess.

$35 Gold Limit Knocked Out

Heeding appeals by Speaker Rayburn and Secretary Morgenthau, the House Coinage Committee yesterday reversed a previous vote and killed a provision depriving President Roosevelt of his power to devalue the dollar.

Rayburn requested Democratic committeemen to turn out en masse and "vote right," at a specially called meeting to reconsider action taken Tuesday. The Treasury Secretary warned that the proposal would "nullify completely the power to devalue the dollar"—a power he said the Administration has no present intention of using.

As a result, the amendment of Representative Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota, to put a $35-an-ounce top price on the purchase of foreign gold was knocked out of a bill to extend for two years beyond June 30 the devaluation powers and the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Acting Chairman Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, said the vote was 13 to 6 and "a straight party division." The amendment was accepted Tuesday by a 9 to 7 vote, with two Democrats joining seven Republicans.

Present law permits purchase of foreign gold at a maximum of $41 an ounce and Andresen said that his amendment, by prohibiting purchases at a figure higher than the present $35, would thereby forestall any further devaluation of the dollar.

He said he would sponsor his amendment in the House and, in addition, would propose that the $1,800,000,000 which he said "is now dormant in the stabilization fund" be diverted to help pay for the national defense program.

When the Coinage Committee assembled to "reconsider" the vote on the Andresen proposal, Cochran announced he had received a memorandum from Morgenthau. It asserted:

"Obviously the Administration has no present intent whatsoever to devalue the gold content of the dollar. But certainly this is not the time to remove flexible powers from the Executive when the executives of all other nations possess virtually complete powers over the domestic and external monetary affairs of their countries."

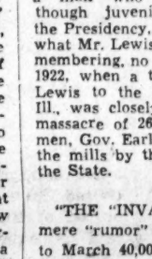
The Johnstown Strike

IN YESTERDAY'S essay on the fallacy of Senator Robert M. La Follette I made a slight mistake, saying that John L. Lewis, at the time of the steel strike at Johnstown, Pa., wired President Roosevelt warning him of an invasion of the town by 40,000 of his mine workers and attempting to disown responsibility for violence that might occur.

Lewis did not wire President Roosevelt to that effect, but telephoned Frances Perkins, the Secretary of Labor, and Gov. Davey, of Ohio, that "somewhere in this land there should be authority to prevent the contemplated butchery of our people in these mills tomorrow." He was speaking of the struck steel plants in Ohio, where his C. I. O. pickets were trying to prevent other men from going to work, and what he plainly meant was that there would be butchery if the workers tried to go to their jobs. He wanted the mills closed by the powers of Government where pickets and the Communist revolutionaries had failed to achieve that effect for him.



PEGLER

HOWEVER, Senator La Follette's report on the situation in Johnstown employs quotation marks around the "rumored invasion" of the troubled city by Lewis' coal miners, and what I want to show is that this was not an imaginary danger but an actual one.

Russell Porter, the New York Times reporter on the scene in Johnstown, wrote that "Mr. Fagan (the president of District 2 of the mine workers) said 40,000 was a conservative estimate of the miners who would come from the western and central Pennsylvania coal fields to attend a mass meeting of the C. I. O. steel strikers tomorrow," at which Philip Murray, the chairman of the steel workers' organizing committee, would be the principal speaker.

In the face of this threat Gov. Earle, the New Deal's own boy in Pennsylvania at the time and a man who had momentary though juvenile aspirations to the Presidency, did for Lewis just what Mr. Lewis wanted done. Remembering, no doubt, the time, in 1922, when a telegram from Mr. Lewis to the miners at Herrin, Ill., was closely followed by the massacre of 26 unarmed, captive men, Gov. Earle obligingly closed the mills by the armed forces of the State.

"THE "INVASION" was not a mere "rumor" but an actual plan to March 40,000 massed partisans into a scene of contention already marked by some bloodshed, and Lewis was permitted to save his face and escape moral responsibility for anything that might have happened when the Governor surrendered to his union.

The men who had been working and who apparently wanted to continue to work obviously were not planning to attack 40,000 coal miners, plus the steel strikers who were out of the plants, and the ideological desperadoes who had sneaked into the situation with or without the welcome and indorsement of the C. I. O.

If civil war had broken out, followed, as in Herrin, by massacre, it would have been a mistake to seek the aggressor on the side of the nonstrikers. As to whether the C. I. O. would have dared to assume the responsibility for this meeting in these circumstances, we can't ever know. Gov. Earle cracked down on the victim of the implied menace and the situation dissolved.

IN THE HERRIN case Lewis' telegram to his miners told them they would be justified in regarding the nonstrikers, who, incidentally, were members of another union, "in the same light as they do any other common strikebreaker."

After the massacre Lewis deplored the bloodshed, denied that his first telegram could have instigated it and said the ranks of his mine workers had been "infested with thousands of detectives and secret service operatives whose employment by the coal companies depends on their ability to provoke violence and disturb public tranquillity." This may have been true, but the community was intensely partisan to Lewis' union, and if Lewis had legal evidence to support his charge, it is strange that not a single murderer of the 26 men ever was punished.

Of course, this is old material, but it all bears on my contention that the "rumored invasion" of Johnstown by 40,000 men was no myth and, in a Congressional document, deserves presentation without the discrediting suggestion of quotation marks.

Iraq And Egypt

SINCE THE Kremlin's abrupt recognition of the pro-Nazi government of Iraq, it is a foregone conclusion here that Soviet Russia will become a full-fledged member of the Axis, in fact and probably in name. A few more gestures of independence of Germany may be made, partly to improve Soviet bargaining power and partly for the sake of the obstinate Soviet sympathizers in the rest of the world. But the end is expected to be joint Russo-German pressure on Turkey to give passage to Hitler's armies towards the Iraqi oil at Kirkuk, while Stalin's men cross the Iranian border and take Persia for their own.

ALSOP

Reports from the Balkans indicate that the German expeditionary force there is already preparing for such an adventure. German emissaries are already "softening up" the Arab world. In French Syria, where General Dentz, in command of the French forces, is ardently in favor of collaboration with Germany, three German agents and an Arab leader are spreading a web of intrigue over the Middle East.

THESE MEN are Dr. Fritz Grobba, former German Minister to Iraq; Baron Max Von Oppenheim, an old archaeologist who knows the desert Sheikhs better than any other man and worked among them for Germany in the last war; Von Hoenting, another agitator of similar background; and Sheikh Ajil al-Yamir, head of the powerful Shammar tribe, the most admired Arab chieftain after King Ibn Saud of Arabia, and a man suffering from resentment at supposed ill-treatment by Iraq's former Brtish-controlled administration. Then too, in Bagdad, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem has declared openly for the Germans, and German agents are known to be influential at Kabul in Afghanistan.

Fortunately, for the British, the coup d' etat of the Iraqui Quisling, Rashid Ali al-Gailani, was set off prematurely by the arrival of substantial British forces. The situation in Ifaq is being brought under control. But if Russia helps to persuade Turkey to give transit to a German army, while simultaneously invading Persia, it is difficult to see how Britain can hold the Middle East.

ON THE OTHER side of the picture is better news from Egypt. Not long ago, few of the best informed men here gave General Wavell much chance against the invading German force. Now, however, the quoted odds are changing. Suez and Alexandria may be held.

If Suez and Alexandria are held, and if this country moves promptly enough to afford adequate shipping protection, the threat in the Middle East will be virtually neutralized. Seizing the Middle East will have two advantages to the Germans. First, they will deprive the British fleet of the fuel now obtained from Iraq through the pipe-line from Kirkuk to Haifa in Palestine. But serious though this would be if shipping protection is not afforded, the British Mediterranean fleet can still be supplied with oil from elsewhere.

THE SECOND advantage will be to get oil themselves. But the Germans cannot use the oil of the Middle East so long as the British hold Egypt. This is inherent in the geography of the problem. The main Middle Eastern oil sources are three in numbers: the wells on the Island of Bahrein; the Persian wells, and the Iraqi wells at Kirkuk. However, both the wells at Bahrein and the Persian wells send their oil out to the world from ports on the Persian Gulf. There is no conceivable way by which the Germans, without command of the oceans, could transport this oil to western Europe. As for the Iraqi wells, their pipe line, running from Kirkuk to Haifa, depends for its usefulness on six pumping stations, each using the heaviest and most complex American machinery, all easy to sabotage, and if sabotage fails, all open to air attack. And even if the Kirkuk-Haifa pipe line continues to operate, so long as the British fleet remains in the Mediterranean, the Iraqi oil cannot travel from Haifa to Europe.

THERE IS NO use blinking the fact that if these hopes prove false, and Egypt and the Middle East fall into German hands, the war picture will once more have darkened terrifyingly. Although the Germans lack tankers, and would therefore still have to wait a long time for oil, even after sweeping the entire Mediterranean, there is no doubt that victory in the Mediterranean would ultimately solve most of their problems of supply. With their problems of supply solved, they could settle down to a long, grinding war of attrition, in which this country and Britain would have none of their present potential advantages.

KINTNER

But when this fact is faced, another should also be faced: that earlier active aid for Britain from this country might well have prevented the present dangers in the Mediterranean, and that saving the Mediterranean situation probably depends on the prompt offer of active aid now.

Communist Round-up Urged

By the Associated Press

Representative Thomas (Republican), New Jersey, called on President Roosevelt in a telegram yesterday to order a round-up, on treason charges, of all Communist labor leaders "formenting discord in the ranks of labor."

Thomas, a member of the House committee investigating un-American activities, said the committee's records contained the names of many such leaders.

"I am in a position to tell you unequivocally that a considerable number of the strikes that have harassed our national defense," Thomas added, "are inspired by subversive groups seeking in every way to undermine our Republican form of government."

Thomas also proposed that the Administration sponsor legislation to require submission to the new National Defense Mediation Board of all labor-management disputes and to the National Labor Relations Board of all jurisdictional disputes in defense industries.

"If these things are not done promptly," Thomas said, "we risk the same fate that overtook France."

Representative Starnes (Democrat), Alabama, another member of the committee, told the House he would present facts soon to show that the C. I. O. leadership was "guilty of obstructing the progress of national defense and that this obstruction is nothing more nor less than treasonable aid to Adolf Hitler."

Discussing the recent strike at the J. Sklar Manufacturing Company, Woodside, Long Island, N. Y., which makes surgical equipment for the Army, Starnes said it was the result of a "Communist maneuver" which he termed "conspirative, premeditated and provocative in the fullest sense."

'Draftettes' Convoyed to Camps

IN ARMY BUSES WITH CUSHIONED SEATS, THE GIRLS ARE OFF FOR NEARBY TRAINING CAMPS

A record number of nearly 300 "draftettes," Government girls who have volunteered to dance with selectees at nearby Army camps, set off last night in two convoys for Fort Meade and Fort Belvoir, Va., from the District Building.

About 185 of the girls rode to Belvoir in five buses with cushioned seats, chiding other dancers going to Meade. The latter rode in standard Army lorries with hard wooden seats.

The Meade-bound girls clambered aboard happily, however, claiming the Maryland soldiers "are better dancers than the boys at Belvoir."

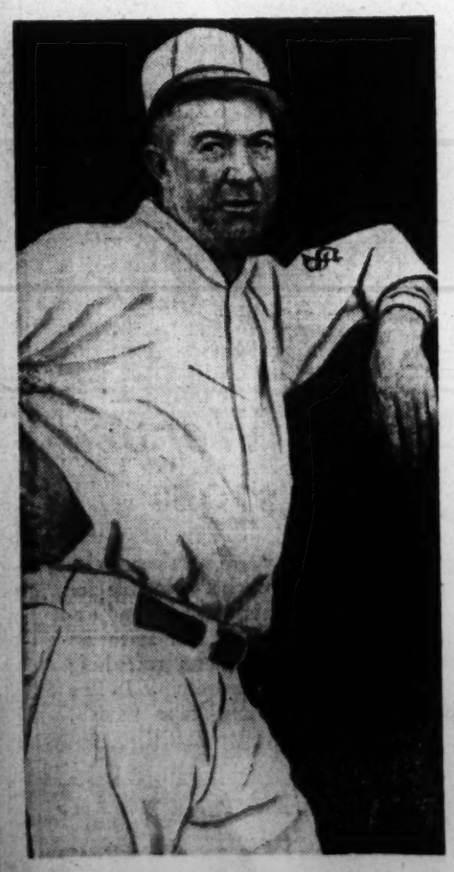
Bill Cunningham's Column

Facts Behind Plight of Pete Alexander



IN 1928—Alexander wore the Cardinals' uniform

By Bill Cunningham

One of New York's better and better-intentioned sports editors is currently sponsoring a campaign intended to be Nation-wide in scope and consecrated to the cause of raising a stake for Grover Cleveland Alexander, the great, but careless, National League pitcher of the diamond's brilliant day-before-yesterday.

Fans and ball players are being invited to contribute and what follows isn't set down as any effort to cool the cause off in the slightest. But because of the fashion in which the publicity concerning the project is being batted around in the national outfield, the good name and good will of baseball need a little protecting.

The picture being unconsciously painted for the fan who reads at, or on, the gallop is that baseball hungrily wrung dry this great star of another time, then flung him aside when the good was all out of his arm and isn't in the slightest concerned with whether he lives or he dies.

That isn't the way it was, or is.

This is a hard sort of story to write, for the trick is to straighten out a fact without hurting an individual. I'd be the last to want to add to the woes of the former star, who's had 'em and still has 'em, but the truth of the matter is that he's been his own worst enemy and has mostly himself to blame for his thorny path.

Baseball as such had nothing to do with it, and it's further responsibility is debatable.

He had a long, a successful and a well-paid life in baseball. But he's one of those who rate the epitaph, "He Was a Great Guy While He Had It." This is no Sunday school class, and I'm not here to preach, but there's a powerful lesson for young fellows in the tragedy of a personal career such as that of this truly wonderful pitcher. If he'd played the all-important game of life as he played the less essential one of baseball, the end of the story wouldn't be the first paragraph of this column you're reading.

Old Alex and his famed defiance of all training rules and common sense were considered hilarious copy once by the same scribes who now write of him sadly—maybe even contritely. One of the favorite columns of the wide-open '20s was some new telling of the standard legend of an unbelievable World Series episode.

As the story was usually written, Alex had hurled and won the last game he figured to pitch in the series—it was the Cards vs. the Yanks in 1926—and thus thought he was through for the season and entitled to celebrate. So he spent practically the entire night in some gilded speak of that era pouring down successive beakers of the colored sheep-dip sold in such baboon farms as drinking-likker.

Next day, so the story invariably went, Manager Frankie Frisch ordered the trainer to get the elderly pitcher up and out to the ball park if it took the National Guard. Getting into his room was like a chapter out of "Alias Jimmy Valentine," and then great stress was laid upon the slowness with which the doddering pitcher made any progress in the bath room. Investigation by the impatient, but thoroughly diplomatic, trainer finally disclosed that the disturbed sleeper was working on a quart he had cunningly cached under an apparently discarded bath towel.

The soldier was practically dead before the trainer caught wise.

You probably know the rest of the story. The game and the series finally worked down in the seventh inning to the tightest climax even a fiction writer could dream. The issue hung on three pitches. The bases were filled and Lazzeri was up. The Cardinal corps was exhausted, and, while the yammering thousands rose to meet him in salute, entirely unaware of the incidental drama, the completely saturated veteran walked unsteadily to the hill on Frisch's doubly desperate hunch and burned over the pitches, probably through sheer instinct, that struck out Lazzeri and saved the game.

Old Alex later denied all the liquor part in a magazine article, but the article came years later and the other version had enjoyed too wide a circulation. Some of the purveyors now probably wish they hadn't written it so blithely as one of baseball's most humorous episodes. There's nothing very humorous about an old fellow who's broke.

Nor is there anything very steady about a drinking employe. There isn't very much about that type of ball player, no matter how brilliant he may be, and no matter how his personal habits may be winked at at the time because he is so brilliant, that persuades a ball club to keep him on as a coach or a manager.

Ball clubs, in common with all other units of men, need discipline, and that means personal discipline as well. There are good jobs in baseball and clean veterans get 'em.

I can't prove that Old Alex would have been set if he'd been thoroughly abstemious through all his baseball days, but I do know that a lot of players who had less, and who made less, came through the grind all right and went on from there. And I do know that baseball isn't to blame for the old fellow's current fix.

I'm not trying to say what is, nor to throw anying in the way of anybody's helping him. Here's hoping Old Pete will be generously taken care of, but that the record will be kept straight as to what the situation consists of.

'Jekyll-Hyde' Motif Advised In Accessories

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

Be a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde with the accessories you wear with your cottons this summer. First requirements are a basic suit or casual dress. Add to them a chic bag—preferably kid or a washable cotton fabric in dark leather, pastels or white. For your gloves, either mix or match them, but they should be practical and of good quality kid, doeskin or fabric. The hat should be a big, shadowy-brimmed one. Straws are the most practical to ward off summer suns.

Now that you have selected smart looking accessories to carry you through dressy affairs this summer, it is time to be frivolous. This is where the other "you" comes into the picture. To the same basic outfits you can add different kinds of gay bags, playful gloves and tricky little hats. It is great sport to have fun with accessories.

A Few to Try Out

Try these:

A washable crochet cotton hat to wear for tea on the terrace or a penthouse party.

Colorful floral printed turbans—wrap them yourselves in one of the various new ways. They will stay secure, too. Instead of knotting the loose ends after the turban is wound, knot them before.

Cotton ball blossom necklaces strung on rope or braided cotton strands to make you look ready for fun at playtime.

Colorful cotton gloves—a different color for every dress, or matching stripes in your little plaid seersucker suit. And more gloves, too—airy string ones, lace and crocheted ones with contrasting color stitching.

To Keep the Hair in Place

Lace, crochet or woven snoods to keep your hair in place while rumble-seat-riding.

Big, man-sized printed cotton hankies in bandana red. Wear several—one around your head, one round your neck and tuck one in the pocket of your play suit.

Cotton eyelet embroidery edging the neck and sleeves of your "best" dress, underneath the brim of your dark straw sailor or peeking out from under your dress on a cotton petticoat.

Quaker Styles

Just a thought about the Quaker costume which we popularly think of as having been discarded. Wonder whether or not the situation actually is that the rest of us have adopted the Quaker ideas in clothing. Certainly the men of today dress far more according to the simple theories of the Friends than according to the elegant tastes of the fashionable men in earlier American days. Even women today dress more nearly like Quakers than like stylish ladies of other times.

Dress Up Your Summer Cottons

Summer is the time to have fun with your accessories. Below is an example of how a summer suit, made of the smartest of the season's fabrics—cotton chambray—may be dressed up to go places. The black kid bag is highlighted by patent leather trimming. The white straw, heart-shaped bonnet has polka dots on it. Long fabric gloves cover the suit sleeves. These are also attractive for wear with short-sleeve cottons

For light summer cottons or dark summer voiles, this face-framing navy blue straw worn by Priscilla Lane is just right. The brim is edged with a bias fold of crisp pique, while the headband and veil are of navy blue. The smartest summer hats will be straws that cover a lot of territory

Frozen Cheese and Watercress Make Piquant Salad

When we hear watercress mentioned many of us hark back in memory to youth when we gathered it along brooks. I can remember when as a child, I went with a playmate and my sister to gather violets by a little creek. I was horrified when I saw our playmate pick and eat some "green stuff" she found growing in the water. That is the way I discovered watercress.

But the ancient Greeks discovered ages ago that it was a beneficial food. Their proverb, "Eat cress and get more wit," grew out of the belief that when this herb was eaten with vinegar a deranged mind would be cured.

We eat this piquant herb today because it contains vitamins A, B, C and G, and a source of iron and calcium. And watercress, like every other green vegetable, should be young and fresh to be good. When you buy it, snap a leaf to see if it is crisp. Be sure the watercress you buy has no yellow or wilted leaves. When you get it home, untie the bunch and swish the leaves around in cold water. Wrap the cress in a damp, clean towel, and store in refrigerator.

Watercress is known to many as a garnish, but it is often used as part of a salad. When Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth visited the White House in 1939, frozen cheese and cress salad was served to them at a dinner. With warm weather likely to descend upon us any time, we should be thinking about appropriate, healthful salads, so here is the recipe for making the frozen cheese and cress salad:

Frozen Cheese and Cress Salad

Soak 1 teaspoon gelatin in a small amount of cold water. Add 1 cup hot water, ½ teaspoon salt and strain. Set aside to barely solidify. Then beat until fluffy. Fold in ½ pound cream cheese that has been creamed. Add 1 small tin pimientos cut in bits and lastly the cream. Put into molds to set. Serve on a bed of water cress.

Hooked Rug Easily Made

A LOVELY Colonial rug adds a bit of old-fashioned charm to your room! You can easily weave one yourself, from cast-off garments—and you'll feel very clever, finding such a delightful use for odds and ends!

Our rug combines dark blue, powder blue, white and figured cottons. Finished, it is 21½ by 32 inches with a 2-inch fringe at each end.

Your loom is a simple frame of four strips of wood fastened together. Beginning 1½ inches from the left side, drive 44 nails ½-inch apart into the top strip. Repeat on the bottom strip. Now wind twine back and forth from bottom to top nails to form a warp, but wind so there'll be three threads on the first and last nails.

Your weaving is a simple over-and-under process. First weave 2 inches of filler (rag removed later to leave ends of warp for fringe) and weave eight rows of twine for "headin'."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Once-Promising Scientist Is Now Alcoholic Addict, Living on Son-in-Law's Bounty While Squandering His Earnings; Wife Asks What to Do About Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Many years ago I married a fine young man who was smart, had a fine disposition, and was well liked and successful as a scientist. Our three children were given many advantages and today they are adults of fine character. But in the meantime, my husband has become a chronic alcholic. He has been making his home with our married daughter—who married a widower with two adolescent sons.

My husband makes a tiny income, which he squanders—contributing nothing to my support or to his own maintenance. It is only natural that everyone in the household objects to his habitual intoxication. They urge me either to get a legal separation from him, or to consent to their evicting him from the house by court order. My daughter is willing, and has offered, to pay for his board elsewhere, and to provide him with clothes. But he refuses to leave.

He refuses, also, to cooperate with us by going to a hospital for treatment. In fact, he balks at any plan we make for his good. He refuses to let us manage his money—which we only want to do because he can't resist spending for liquor any money in his possession. He will not live elsewhere because he says he couldn't continue in business if he had to pay room rent. He says, "All my profit would be eaten up in overhead." But we tell him we would rather he gave up the business altogether; that he would be better off without money, when all of it goes for alcohol.

We are at our wits' end. He will not talk with a doctor, a minister or a psychologist. We have consulted a lawyer, but he informs us that there is no law in this state (Florida), which provides for the appointment of a guardian in such a case. In the lawyer's opinion, we are powerless to change the situation—that is, by legal means. Can you tell us what to do? F. W. B.

"Old Man of the Sea" Should Be Unhorsed

DEAR F. W. B.: If your husband's presence in your daughter's household is likely to ruin her marriage, as well it might—since he is at once an offensive parasite feeding on her husband's bounty, and an unwholesome (as well as humiliating) associate for her adolescent step-sons—it seems to me you should summon the moral courage to take the lead in prying him loose, as it were, from her shoulders. Just now, he is saddled there like a veritable "Old Man of the Sea"—largely, I gather, because of your duddy-fuddy indecisiveness; your reluctance to stand up to him in defense of your daughter's right to make a decent sort of life for herself, free of soggy-minded parental imposition.

I imagine your daughter puts up with him mostly out of sympathy for you; and that her husband, in turn, is striving valiantly to carry her gratuitously assumed burdens along with his own—which reflects great credit on his character, and yet at the same time suggests that, if tried too far, he might one day revolt and wash his hands of the lot of you. Remember the adage: "Beware of the wrath of a patient man."

No doubt you are so enmeshed in sweetly sorrowful memories of a better day—when you were the bustling and respected wife of a promising, upright young scientist—that you think it impossible to have don with that Nevermore Era, and deal forcefully with the painful issues implicit in the discouraging impasse to which you have come. But I would say that "new occasions teach new duties," and that you have here a duty to your daughter which takes precedence over any sentimental attachment you may feel toward your husband, for old times' sake.

It appears that you represent the real stumbling block in your daughter's (and her husband's) efforts to take air-clearing action regarding your husband. In balking at legal separation, in withholding consent to their "evicting him from the house by court order," you tie their hands. Apparently their compassionate sense of responsibility to you, the worthier parent, causes them to feel that so long as they have a home, and you need one, their doors are open. And I daresay you accomodate yourself helpfully to the household. But your husband takes selfish advantage of their charitable attitude—firstly, by assuming that where you are, he has every right to be; and secondly, by assuming that he can lead a wastrel's existence at their financial, social and nervous expense.

However, if your husband fails to provide you with a home, and you find shelter elsewhere—that is your windfall, not his. And you should not expect others to pay the whole price entailed by your sentimental willingness to suffer him. Since he refuses to cooperate with the family's eager, united efforts to help him (for your sake) help himself, you should firmly inform him that everybody's patience is exhausted and (a) either he does something, now, about getting a grip on himself; or (b) you institute suit for legal separation, on grounds of habitual intoxication, non-support, or whatever—in order to release your son-in-law of any feeling that he must "carry him" because of you. If he lets the ultimatum ride, thinking you are merely bluffing, let him learn by due process of law that you mean what you say. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

It's About Time

Boys in Army Today Get Food As Good as Mother Served

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOUR son is in the Army, you needn't have th slightest worry as to whether he is getting enough to eat. Surveys show that the trainees are better fed than 60 per cent of the civilians and that they are thriving on camp fare.

The huge scale plan by which 1,400,000 men are well fed daily was outlined by Mary I. Barber, president of the American Dietetics Association and newly appointed food consultant to the Quartermasters Corps, in a recent talk before the Home Economics Women in Business in New York.

Each soldier's fare consists of 5 pounds of balanced rations daily and included: Meat for two and sometimes three meals, plenty of canned and fresh fruits and vegetables, milk, eggs and cereals. In all, there are 39 items.

And how those boys eat! All a fellow has to do to get a second serving is hold up his empty plate. They say it isn't so bad to be broke, a state of finances which prevails generally about a week after payday, "because you know you can get three square meals with seconds."

Yet Some Complain

Of course, there are complaints. If you know anything about cooking for a large family, you have some idea of how hard it would be to please everyone in the Army. The family cook can cater to the individual while the Army chef can't even cater to the minority. Your Tom may want his beef rare, but he will get it well-done—that's the way most of the boys like it.

When compared with what a soldier's meal used to be, every mess is a banquet. The vast improvement in diet was illustrated by six soldiers from Fort Slocum, dressed in the uniforms of the Revolutionary, 1812, Mexican, Civil, Spanish-American and World wars, and carrying the rations of those periods.

To Miss Barber's questions they replied variously that they "went hungry," "foraged for food" or "did a little scouting." In the main, their fare consisted of hard tack, bully beef and beans. Fresh vegetables did not appear in the menus until the Spanish-American War. The World War soldier, asked whether he got enough to eat, said "Almost." Today's trainee averages ten ounces more food per day than the doughboy.

You Can Help

And yet the boys hanker for home cooking. In case you are wondering what to send, here are three suggestions: Home-made candy, cookies and salted nuts.

But don't imagine they are going hungry. No one could ask for a more capable overseer of the Army menus than Mary I. Barber. She has been "loaned" to the Office of Production Management in Washington by the Kellogg Food Co., at Battle Creek, Mich.

Defense Aides Attend Pattersons' Party

By Dudley Harmon.

Several important defense figures, usually not present when the afternoon cocktails are being handed around, took refuge from bottlenecks and priorities yesterday to attend a party. Hosts were the Undersecretary of War and Mrs. Robert Patterson, who entertained a few friends in the garden behind their home in Georgetown. Even Judge Patterson said it was the first afternoon party he'd been to since taking his post down here.

The Army Chief of Staff, Gen. George C. Marshall, dropped by for a half-hour's chat. One feminine guest rushed up to a familiar looking face and greeted the person like a long lost friend. It turned out to be someone she'd never met before but just seen in the newsreels—Edward Stettinius, jr. Mrs. Stettinius accompanied him, wearing a navy blue and white outfit.

Neither bottlenecks nor priorities were mentioned in yesterday's conversation—instead, it was just Hess, Hess, and more Hess. Everybody crowded around Walter Lippmann to get his opinion on the weird happening. Mr. Lippmann has some definite and interesting ideas on the subject, but far be it from us to scoop him on them. Mrs. Lippmann, who was with him, will go to Canada next week to talk on the work Washington women are doing in the Red Cross.

Officer Makes Introductions

Parties given by Army officials always have a bit more color than the common, or garden variety. Yesterday an officer in uniform was present to announce the guests. On the back porch which leads into the garden, were placed several flags. Mrs. Patterson had provided two kinds of punch—men's and "girls'" punch. There were also tea and coffee, which Mrs. George Rublee, Mrs. Julius Amberg, whose husband is special assistant to Judge Patterson; Miss Janet Fish, Mrs. Richard Willmer, and several other women dispensed.

The Librarian of Congress and Mrs. Archibald MacLeish came in late and the former was being congratulated by fans who had heard him introduce the famous writers at Book Night last week. Mrs. MacLeish has rented their home in Georgetown to William Burden and will spend the summer at her farm in Massachusetts. Her husband will share bachelor quarters with Harvey Bundy, recently named special assistant to the Secretary of State.

Mrs. Robert A. Lovett, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, was among the tea-pouring contingent. She wore a black dress with pink trimming to match her hat. The deputy chief of staff, Gen. William Bryden; Gen. and Mrs. Emory Adams and Gen. Allen Gullion were among the Army contingent present. Also from Army circles were Maj. and Mrs. Harry Reynolds, of Boston, who have taken the home of Amory Lawrence in Georgetown.

Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth was joined by Representative Wigglesworth after his duties at the House were over. The former wore with her black dress a tiny lace white hat which was reminiscent of the Valentines you used to cut out. Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse motored in from Wolf Trap Farm to attend the party.

Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and Mrs. Henry Stimson were there; also Mrs. Lelia Bathon, Frank Hammond and a few others.

Many Attend Overcoat Tea

While the Patterson party was going on, many arrived staggering under armsful of overcoats at the "Keep the Moths Away" tea given at the home of Mrs. George Maurice Morris. Miss Suzanne Rosenberg, who took tickets at the door, says that anybody who could not cope with carrying them may call National 5100 and they will be sent for. All are shipped to England.

After dropping their overcoats, everybody wandered about Mrs. Morris' home, which was brought, brick by brick, from Massachusetts. Every piece of furniture is in keeping with the colonial residence, and the only electric lights are in the library. Mrs. Ernest Wagner was admiring the library curtains, which were brought from Knoll, the famous Sackville-West place in England. With Mrs. Wagner at the tea was her sister, Mrs. George T. Pettengill.

On the terrace overlooking the Morris garden, Mrs. Chauncey Parker, jr., poured tea. Among those she served were Lady Broderick, Mrs. Hennen Jennings and many from the British Embassy.

Miss Eanes Will Be Wed

Mr. and Mrs. David D. Eanes, of Richmond, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Eanes, to Samuel W. H. Meloy, son of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Meloy, of Washington and Upper Marlboro, Md.

Miss Eanes is a graduate of Collegiate School for Girls and attended the Mary Washington College and the University of Maryland, where she was pledged to Alpha Omicron Pi sorority.

Mr. Meloy is a graduate of the University of Maryland and National University Law School. He is a member of Theta Chi fraternity.

Mrs. E. F. Morgan Joins Husband Here

Former Gov. E. F. Morgan of West Virginia has been joined at the Mayflower by Mrs. Morgan, who has been spending some time in West Virginia. Their son, Lieut. A. Morgan, has been called from his law practice in Charleston, W. Va., for defense work in the legal division of the administrative branch of the War Department here.

Three Little Maids From the Argentine

Underwood & Underwood

—daughters of the Foreign Minister of Argentina and Senora de Ruiz Guinazu, these South American senoritas find life a whirlwind of parties these days. They are included in many of the fetes being given in honor of their parents' visit to this country, and are having parties given for them also. Mr. and Mrs. Randall Hagner, jr., entertained for them on Tuesday evening at the Chevy Chase Club; today they will attend the luncheon to be given by Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins and tomorrow they will go to Mrs. Adolf Berle's luncheon. They are staying at famous Anderson House while here.

Miss Morgan Is Entertained At French Embassy

Miss Anne Morgan was in town yesterday from New York and found time to sandwich in a luncheon at the French Embassy and a family dinner with her niece, Mrs. Arthur Woods.

The French Ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, isn't doing any big scale entertaining these days, so yesterday's luncheon was a small one. Besides Miss Morgan, those present were the embassy Counselors, Col. Bertrand Vigne and M. Georges-Picot, Mme. Georges-Picot and Capt. and Mrs. Charles Brousse, M. and Mme. Georges-Picot have been staying at the embassy since their arrival a few weeks ago from Europe but will move into an apartment at the Wardman Park very soon.

Janet Gorham's Troth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gorham, of New York, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Janet Brinsmade Gorham, to W. Stratton Anderson, jr., vice consul, United States Foreign Service.

The news was made known recently at a garden party at the Gorham home in Johannesburg, South Africa, shortly before Mr. Anderson was transferred from Johannesburg to his new post at Lazos, Nigeria. Mr. Anderson is the son of Admiral and Mrs. Walter S. Anderson.

Barbara Kibbey Sets Wedding Saturday

The wedding of Miss Barbara Clarkson Kibbey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Worthington Kibbey, and George William Woltz, son of Mrs. Edna Woltz, will take place Saturday at St. Paul's Lutheran Church at 8 p. m. The wedding was postponed from April 19 due to the illness of the bride. The Rev. Dr. Henry Snyder will officiate.

The reception will follow the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents on Emerson Street.

Mrs. Francis F. Lincoln is general chairman of the event, and Mrs. William Van Benschoten is in charge of tickets. Mrs. Houghteling will be assisted by Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Emory Scott Land, Miss Virginia Hunt, Miss Clara Herbert, Miss Katherine Fite, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mrs. William Mackall and Miss Dorothy Tirrell.

Locks Honeymoon In Miami, Havana

Mr. and Mrs. James Leonard Lock, who were married last Saturday, are honeymooning in Miami and Havana. Mrs. Lock is the former Miss Virginia Ann Davis, daugther of Mr. and Mrs. Guy L. Davis, of Washington, and Mr. Lock is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lock, also of this city.

The couple were married at St. Anthony's Church, the Rev. John Spence officiating. The bride wore a powder blue frock with a silver fox jacket and a large blue picture hat. A shoulder corsage of orchids completed her costume. Her only attendant was Miss Katharine V. Nally, of Boston, who wore an ensemble of navy blue with a corsage of roses. Thomas Lock was best man for his brother.

A wedding breakfast for the bridal couple and immediate families followed the ceremony. Mrs. Lock is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy and attended Maryland University. Mr. Lock is a graduate of St. John's College.

Bridal Couple Feted at Musicale

Dr. J. de S. Coutinho entertained at a musicale last night in honor of Miss Grace Marie Boland and Andre Christophe Simonpietri, whose marriage will take place May 24 at St. Matthew's Cathedral.

The program included a violin, vocal and piano trio with Walter Bohan, Fleurette Jeffrie and Mildred Deane; South American songs by Winifred Houghton, and Spanish guitar solos by Sophocles Papas. About 50 friends of the couple attended.

Simplicity to Rule de Mohrenschildt, Hastie Wedding

Even weddings are influenced these days by unsettled world conditions—that of Miss Fernand de Mohrenschildt and Drayton Hastie, for example, will be of the utmost simplicity. The prospective bridegroom receives only a weekend leave from Camp Stewart, where he is with the 207th Coast Artillery.

The future bride, who is the granddaughter of the late Senator William G. McAdoo, has selected May 23 as the date of the ceremony. It will take place in the apartment of her mother, Mrs. McAdoo Taylor, of New York. The bride will be unattended and Mr. Hastie will have as his only attendant his brother, Norwood, jr.

Miss de Mohrenschildt is the daughter of the late Ferdinand de Mohrenschildt, who at the time of his death, was second secretary of the Imperial Russian Embassy in Washington. Mr. Hastie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Hastie, of Charleston, S. C.

Frances Burke's Troth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Martin H. Burke, of Bar Harbor, Maine, announce the engagement of their daughter, Frances Janet, of Washington and Bar Harbor, to Leland M. Alden, of this city.

Miss Burke is descended from one of the earliest families to settle in Maine. She is the great-great-granddaughter of Deacon Jonathan Stevens, who fought in the Revolution, and the great-granddaughter of Samuel Stevens, a well-known Democratic figure in Maine. She is a member of the Endion Club of Washington.

Mr. Alden is the son of Dr. William C. Alden and the late Mrs. Bess Alden and is a direct descendant of John Alden and John Quincy Adams. He is a graduate of George Washington University and a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon and is with the firm of Auchincloss, Parker and Redpath.

The wedding will take place in October.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

MR. AND MRS. Robert T. Pell, whose attractive apartment on Massachusetts Avenue is a center for much informal hospitality, asked a few friends for cocktails the other afternoon to meet Humphrey Clark, newest addition to the British Embassy staff. Mr. Clark is a friend of John Pell and his very chic wife, the former Pyrma Tilton, and arrived in Washington with letters from them. John Pell is, of course, Robert Pell's brother and is a solid citizen of New York and Long Island. But I never think of him without remembering stories of his twenty-first birthday party, which took place in Paris in the "good old days" and set a record even for the City of Light. The party began in Montmartre and ended in Amsterdam and for weeks all the best restaurants in Paris displayed giant bottles of a well-known headache remedy which, they would tell you, were the property of "Monsieur Pell."

TO GET BACK to the much more prosaic party of the Robert Pells. Another new British diplomat present was Windham White, a First Secretary. Arthur Krock was there without his wife, who spends most of her time these days getting things in order at their new place in the country, and Stephen Morris dropped in on his way home from the State Department. Lady Margaret Walker arrived looking very trim all in navy blue, and the Countess di San Martino had chosen the smartest little white-visored hat to wear with her black and white tailleur. Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., wore a print of Alice blue and white and had a new hair-do which is most becoming, and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold was pretty in a frock that combined a black bodice with a flowered skirt.

Mrs. Hoyer Millar, who is everyone's favorite, was being told, "It is so comforting to see your husband walking down from his work at the British Embassy with an air that says everything is all right." "Yes," said the irrepressible lady, "it's very much like the Rock of Gibraltar going for a walk."

THE GREATEST tribute to Mrs. Roosevelt's personal popularity which I have yet heard was paid her unconsciously by one of the White House aides at the garden party the other afternoon. He had stopped momentarily to chat with pretty Edythe Ann Corbin while shepherding the long lines of guests waiting to shake hands with the First Lady. After a brief chat he said, "Excuse me, I must watch that people don't get back in line to shake hands with Mrs. Roosevelt a second time. They do that, you know, because they like her so much."

Looking down the vista from the lawn of the White House to the round dome of the Jefferson Memorial flanked, in perspective, by the Washington Monument, someone remarked that Washington now had its own Trylon and Perisphere and permanently.

DROPPING BY Mrs. Anthony Coleby's apartment for a cocktail the other afternoon were several old friends and one or two new ones. Among the latter were Maj. Ronald McCrindle and David Eccles. Maj. McCrindle came by for a moment with John Foster on the way home from the British Embassy. Maj. McCrindle and his wife—she is Susan Ertz, the well-known author, are staying with Countess de Limur for a few days.

David Eccles is visiting Col. and Mrs. William Donovan. He has already made a number of friends in Washington and seems to prove that a sense of humor makes the whole world kin. Mrs. Chauncey Parker, smart in a suit and frilly blouse topped by a pert straw sailor, was also present. [illegible] were Lieut. Peter Otway-Smithers, Denys Smith and several others.

Mrs. Hutton Elected To Head P. E. O. Here

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

Mrs. T. A. Hutton, of Chapter A, was elected as president of the District State Chapter of the P. E. O. Sisterhood yesterday at the closing session of its annual convention at the Shoreham Hotel. She succeeds Miss S. Elizabeth Reynolds, of Chapter D.

Mrs. M. H. Fohrman, of Chapter K, was elected first vice president; Miss Jane Mackay Anderson, Chapter J, second vice president; Mrs. Ward M. Buckles, of Chapter M, organizer; Miss Jessie Elting, of Chapter B, recording secretary; Miss Alma Barry, Chapter O, corresponding secretary; Mrs. F. C. Welck, Chapter E, treasurer.

The officers were installed by Mrs. Blanche D. Walker, of Helena, Mont., vice president of the supreme chapter. The past state president's pin was presented to the retiring president by the incoming one.

The chapter also elected six delegates, in addition to the president and organizer, to attend the supreme convention in Vancouver, British Columbia, in October. They are Mrs. Clyde Schuebel, Chapter A; Mrs. E. Loretta Newby, Chapter D; Mrs. T. Bruce King, Chapter G; Mrs. W. Glenn Jones, Chapter J; Mrs. Housden L. Marshall, Chapter M; Miss Gladys Gunderson, Chapter P.

Senator Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin, was the guest speaker at the morning session. He urged the women to continue their leadership, their level-headedness and their teachings, designed to overcome intolerance, injustice, hatred and lack of faith.

"Your great objectives: Faith, love, purity, justice, truth, tolerance, and growth of mind and spirit have taught you something about the symphony of life," he said. "You have learned that exultation comes from extending the helping hand to those who need encouragement, not simply to P. E. O.'s or people who go to your church—but to your neighbor, your neighbor's child, your community, your State, your Nation.

"The greater the challenge (and it is a great one now to you and me) the greater the responsibility to be fit to meet it. In a real sense we are living in a great period—a challenging hour," said Senator Wiley. "Some cannot tell whether it is a sunset or a dawn. Yet my faith tells me that the dawn is up ahead."

With a thought to the rapidly changing conditions of the present, the state chapter made provision for inviting the supreme chapter to meet in Washington in 1945 in case the invitation for it to meet here in 1942 could not be accepted because of war conditions.

Army-Navy Unit Largest In the D. A. R.

The Army and Navy Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, with 610 members, is now the largest in the national society, it has been announced. Mrs. Hubert E. Paddock, wife of Commander Paddock, U. S. N., is regent, and Mrs. George W. McIver, wife of Gen. McIver, retired, is the registrar, to whom much credit is given for the chapter's increase in membership.

This year 46 new members have been added. Because of its large membership, Army and Navy Chapter now is represented by six delegates instead of the customary one delegate at the annual Continental Congress of the national organization. Those elected for next year are Mrs. Oliver L. Spaulding, Mrs. Charles W. Kutz, Mrs. Albert Knox, Mrs. Townsend Whelen, Miss Edith Hepburn and Mrs. William F. Morrison. The ten alternates are Mrs. Donald R. Osborn, Mrs. Rex H. Rhodes, Mrs. Edward B. Gibson, Miss Mildred Paddock, Miss Aileen Wrightson, Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire, Mrs. David J. Rubough, Mrs. Ellen Mae Bloedorn, Mrs. Benton W. Decker and Miss Sophie P. Casey.

Members of the board of management elected at this month's meeting are Mrs. Stanley D. Embick, Mrs. J. T. Tompkins and Mrs. P. Stanley Bond.

The chapter this summer will send 14 children to camp, 6 girls to Holiday House and 8 boys to Camp Reeder.

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor opened her home, Wild Acres, near Bethesda, on Monday for the final meeting and annual election of officers of Capt. Molly Pitcher Chapter, D. A. R. The following officers were elected:

Mrs. Fred D. Gwynn, regent; Mrs. Henry C. Morris, vice regent; Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, recording secretary; Miss Bertha Marsh, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax, chaplain; Mrs. Stuart W. Walker, historian; Mrs. Threodore S. Palmer, registrar, and Mrs. Fred W. Holt, delegate.

The retiring regent, Mrs. R. Winston Holt, presided and presented Mrs. Grosvenor's house guest, Mrs. Henry Howard, president of the American Merchant Marine Library, who spoke of the work of her organization, which provides books for seamen.

Gov. Price Visits Mount Vernon With Va. Board

The annual visit to Mount Vernon of the Virginia Board of Visitors, accompanied by the Governor of Virginia and Mrs. Price, took place yesterday afternoon.

Members of the board who attended included Norman Call, of Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Chauvenet, of Esmont; Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Price, of Harrisonburg; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jeffreys, of Chase City. The Governor was attended by his aide, Col. Kemper, and Mrs. Kemper.

Gardner Boothe, of Alexandria, a member of the advisory committee, also was present. William H. Smoot, of Alexandria, who for many years has been a member of the board, was unable to attend this year.

Credit Women, Bosses to Hear Dr. N. H. Engle

Dr. Nathanael H. Engle, assistant of the chief of Economic Section of National Defense, will address the third annual bosses' breakfast of the Credit Women's Breakfast Club this morning. The breakfast will be held at the Willard Hotel at 7:45 a. m. Dr. Engle is eminent in credit circles in Washington, having been formerly connected with the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce for some years. His topic will be "National Defense and Retail Credit," a subject of interest to credit women and their bosses, who comprise store owners, credit and collection managers and comptrollers.

The president of the club, Mrs. Martha Bean Gleason, will conduct the meeting. Mrs. Alma Hogan and Miss Rose Porte were in charge of arrangements for the special meeting.

The club was organized in March, 1938, for the purpose of promoting credit and collection procedure and so that women engaged in these departments of various retail stores might become better acquainted and discuss their mutual problems.

It has a membership of 65 women, representing 49 local retail stores.

Chevy Chase Installs Officers

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams (left), new president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, leaving the clubhouse following the meeting yesterday with Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby, outgoing president

The Women's Club of Chevy Chase, at its final business meeting of the season yesterday, installed its new officers, headed by Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, who succeeds Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby as president. The women also voted to form a club unit of the Montgomery County Chapter, American Red Cross, thus expanding their work for war relief during the summer months. Work is now done weekly at the clubhouse on Connecticut Avenue.

Mrs. Adams, in her initial address after she accepted the presidency, said that emphasis during her administration would be on the old-fashioned virtues of charity and tolerance and on widening the horizons of club activity beyond welfare of the community to welfare of the Nation.

Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, offered the invocation and William F. Raymond was soloist of the afternoon, accompanied by Mrs. Warren W. Grimes.

Officers in addition to Mrs. Adams who were installed included, Mrs. George A. Finch, first vice president; Mrs. Edgar F. Fowler, second vice president; Mrs. Ralph Bonnett, recording secretary; Mrs. C. M. Jansky, Jr., corresponding secretary; Mrs. Roy Jorolemon, treasurer, and Mrs. Diller B. Goff, assistant treasurer.

French Envoy Greets Alliance

Gaston Henry-Haye, French Ambassador, yesterday afternoon received members of the Alliance Francaise at the annual reception given at the Embassy by the Ambassador as honorary head of the organization.

Many of the members and other friends of France in the company recalled the reception last season which took place in the quiet garden while bombs fell on Paris for the first time. On that occasion, the former Ambassador, Count Rene Saint Quentin, presented to Lynch Luquer, president of the Alliance Francaise in Washington, a medal of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his contribution to American-French friendship and understanding.

The guests yesterday were received on the terrace by the Ambassador. Other members of the Embassy staff also assisted in welcoming the guests.

Among those present were Mrs. Charles Alden, Lady Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, who lived many years in France; Mrs. Carlos Delmar, Mme. Lucet, Mme. Jacquin, and Mme. Bimont, who is secretary of the alliance in Washington.

Tea to Be Given At Service Club

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the Woman's National Democratic Club, will head the receiving line of hostesses at the silver offering tea which the club's defense project committee is holding at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club at 1015 L Street Northwest, on Monday afternoon, from 4:30 until 6 o'clock. Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Shears are members of the defense project committee, as are Mrs. Robert Jackson and Mrs. Frank C. Walker. The two latter Cabinet wives, with Mrs. Paul McNutt will be assisting hostesses.

Proceeds of the silver offering go to assist the Woman's Army and Navy League in paying for the costs of enlarging the canteen, dormitories and recreation facilities of the club, which cares for the thousands of service men from nearby Virginia and Maryland camps when they come to Washington on leave. An overall sum of $30,000 is being sought for both construction and maintenance. Funds for maintenance are necessary, as the nominal charges made the enlisted men do not pay the full cost of upkeep.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

AN INVITATION in verse has been sent to members of the board of the Council of Church Women, asking them to a buffet supper Saturday night at the home of the executive secretary of the council, Etta Mai Russell, 478 N Street Southwest.

Miss Russell, who with Marguerite Griffin, moved over into Southwest Washington three years ago, making an artistic home out of an old store building, invites a group of friends in for a supper party each spring at the time of the May festival of the Barney Neighborhood House. In the afternoon they watch the winding of the Maypoles in the street before the house and later are served supper.

MAIDS OF ATHENS—The Maids of Athens, girls of Greek descent who are members of the Y. W. C. A., received a letter—read at their meeting this week—from Mme. Diamantopoulos, wife of the Minister of Greece, complimenting them on their continued assistance in Greek war relief work.

New members added to the club include: Florence Argyropoulos, Cleo Psira, Angie Louizakes, Voula Kyminghan, Victoria Levathes, Sophie and Ethel Cotsoni, Antoinette and Ethel Charuhas, Marion Lalios, Dee Panagos, Georgia Gianarakos, Frances Papageorge, Elaine Poulos and Angie Kimer.

Constance Economou was awarded a prize for the highest bowling score by the chairman of the athletic committee, Constance Demas. Doris Vassas was presented with the Pallas Athena pin by the membership chairman, Mary Catsoni, for winning the membership drive contest.

MRS. MACKEY HOSTESS—Mrs. G. B. Mackey, of Roanoke, Va., last evening entertained the Potomac Chapter of D. A. R. at the chapter house, 1732 Massachusetts Avenue. Mrs. Nathaniel P. Davis, State vice regent of England, was the honor guest. Speakers on the program were Mrs. J. Edwin Lawton, State chairman of the District room, Continental Hall, and Miss Ethel Martin, chairman of motion pictures for the District, D. A. R.

Croat President, Aides Face Assassination, Komitaji Says

Former Leaders Who 'Betrayed' Country Also on Death List

By Ray Brock

Copyright by New York Times

Budapest, May 14.—Ante Pavelic, the president of "Independent Croatia," who plotted the 1934 assassination of King Alexander and who directed the Croat April revolution which exposed the Yugoslav army's flank and rear and led to the Yugoslav defeat, will die by assassination, this correspondent last week was informed in Serbia by Serbian and Montenegrin Komitaji chieftains.

Pavelic's name heads the death list, which includes that of Slavko Kvaternik, whom Pavelic appointed Croat Premier; former Yugoslav Premier Dragisha Cvetkovic; former Yugoslav Foreign Minister Alexander Cincar-Markovic, and more than 14 Croat Eustachi leaders in Zagreb, Osijek, Sarajevo and Mostar, according to the Komitajis.

German Gestapo (secret police), advised by Moslem spies of a plot to assassinate Cvetkovic and Cincar-Markovic during their visits to Sarajevo in late April and in early May, spiked a carefully planned shooting which had been worked out to the smallest detail, a Montenegrin Komitaji informed this correspondent. Wholesale arrests were begun a week before the arrival of Cvetkovic and Cincar-Markovic at Sarajevo and two of the men assigned to do the shooting were caught in the round-up and imprisoned, he said. Both men have since been released.

"The Gypsy Cvetkovic) and Cincar-Markovic should have been destroyed March 27," said the Komitaji chieftain, "but Simovic was too soft-hearted or too hopeful of uniting the opposition. The coup was so successful—the only man killed was a gendarme in the radio station, you know—that Simovic (Gen. Dusan Simovic) left Cvetkovic and Cincar-Markovic with their promises to disappear from politics. I think if there is any criticism of Simovic it must be that he was too much the gentleman and too little the army general at that time.

"Nedic (Ex-War Minister Gen. Milan Nedic) wanted to destroy both Cvetkovic and Cincar-Markovic in November," the Komitaji chieftain added. "But Simovic counseled caution and held out for delay, and Air Force Gen. Boro Mirkovic (who plotted the details of the March 27 coup) had not been prepared to plan to unseat the Cvetkovic government.

"I can tell you that the coup was ready in the third week of February, but Simovic still held out, hoping that we, the Komitajis, or the people themselves would do the job the army finally had to do. Kosta (Kosta Peckanatz, the aging Komitaji generalissimo) already had ordered the assassination of both Cvetkovic and Cincar-Markovic upon their return from Vienna when he was told that Simovic was ready to act.

During this interview the Montenegrin Komitaji leader derided "Komitaji" Ruth Mitchell, the sister of former United States Air Brig. Gen. William Mitchell. "The woman was a nuisance," he said.

"She bothered Pechanatz and the Kragujevach captain and me for weeks, pleading for Komitaji insignia and she finally bought a knife and pistols and her chubari (fur hat) and announced that she had joined us. We later learned that she had been informing a British journalist and some of the American diplomatic officials of her plan, and that she secured publicity for herself in the British and American newspapers. She was never a Komitaji and if she had been I am quite sure she would have been worse than useless."

This correspondent encountered Ruth Mitchell during the days before the German invasion. The Reddish-haired freckle-faced sister of the former United States Army Air Chief was attired in black riding pants and black boots, a black chubari with the Komitaji skull and crossbones insignia and carried a knife on one hip. She appeared at the American legation after the first bombing, Sunday, April 6, pleading for transportation out of burning Belgrade to the provinces.

Refused transportation with the American Legation Secretary, Robert MacAtee and a group of American journalists, Miss Mitchell found a ride aboard an Army lorry and turned up at various points along the route taken by the Yugoslav government. When last seen, she was wearing a sport dress in Dubrovnik and seeking a renewal of her expired American citizenship and American passport for return to the United States.

Meanwhile, the Belgrade Komitajis, in whose company Miss Mitchell had announced she was assigned "for certain death," were policing the capital, fighting Fifth Columnists and trying to bring order out of chaos of the bomb-wrecked city, where the gas, light, power and water systems were interrupted, where flames and choking fumes and the stench of bodies made the city proper almost uninhabitable for almost five days.

Alaska Survey Payment Barred Over Communism

By International News Service

The House yesterday barred payment of any Interior Department funds to an alleged Communist sympathizer appointed a month ago, then passed the $177,019,078 annual supply bill for the department without reducing Secretary Ickes' requests.

An amendment proposed by Representative Taber (Republican), of Ne wYork, was approved, prohibiting any of the funds appropriated from being paid to Dr. Ruth Gruber, who was appointed April 17 as a field representative to go to Alaska and make a social and economic survey. The vote was 64 to 49.

Representative Mason (Republican), of Illinois, read excerpts from a book written by Dr. Gruber, entitled, "I Went to the Soviet Arctic," and charged the book is "full of Communistic innuendoes."

American Church Union Will Hold Parley Here Today

More than 500 persons are expected to attend the spring conference of the American Church Union, Washington - Baltimore - Richmond area, today at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, on Twenty-third Street near Washington Circle Northwest.

The Rev. Albert J. Dubois regional chairman of the A. C. U. pointed out yesterday that its Forward-in-Power theme would follow out the plan of the Forward in Service movement urged by the Right Rev. Henry Saint George Tucker. Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church.

"We believe that our first step," said Father Dubois, "is to turn to the Prayer Book, examine its foundation principles, and build a rule of life on that foundation to the end that we may have the power to go on and serve both wisely and constructively." He is rector of St. Agnes Church, 46 Q Street Northwest.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Merging of Maritime Agencies Is Discussed

Reorganization of the Federal agencies dealing with maritime matters is being talked about in New Deal circles. Fact is, a study of each agency in the maritime picture is reliably reported to be under way. It's understood that the British Ministry of Shipping is being studied as a possible model for a new agency with authority over all maritime matters. However, there appears to be some difference of opinion. One group wants to take the construction activities out of the Maritime Committee and set them up in a separate agency. The commission is loaded down with the emergency shipping program.

It also has been proposed to set up under a single head—probably a new Cabinet officer—all maritime functions. This would mean abolition of the five-man Maritime Commission and the merging of the commission with the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, the Maritime Labor Board, and authority over foreign seamen vested in the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Legislation would be required to tamper with the Maritime Commission either in the form of a new reorganization bill which would give the President authority to shift Federal agencies, or specific legislation dealing with the maritime agencies. The President said months ago that he would ask Congress to give him broad powers to reorganize Federal agencies but he hasn't yet requested the authority.

Bituminous Coal officials scraped the bottom of the money barrel yesterday and found enough to pay all their employes today. They had told members of Congress that they had insufficient funds to meet the May 15 pay roll. The Consumers' Division found enough money to pay about 45 of its 55 employes. Those who won't be paid today are high-paid employes who don't have pressing bills to meet. Deficiency appropriations for both agencies are pending in the Senate . . . C. R. Larrabee has been appointed acting chief of the trial examiners' section of the Bituminous Coal Division. He replaces T. G. Lewis who resigned to practice law.

Fight to Lure Janitors

Public building officials are worried over cleaning up Federal buildings the night of the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer fight. The number of colored custodial employes who have put in leave slips for that night is tremendous . . . UFWA signed up 247 members the first week of its organizing drive here. The union has 202 volunteer organizers who meet every Monday to make reports. The volunteers distribute thousands of leaflets to other employes on the union's pay-raise campaign and fight for rent-control legislation.

Burton L. Hunter will become chief budget examiner of the Budget Bureau tomorrow. He has been general manager of the Los Angeles Civil Service Commission for two years . . . Dr. Henry G. Knight, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry and Engineering, will be awarded a medal by Vice President Wallace Saturday night on behalf of the American Institute of Chemists for his work in improving agriculture.

Work on proposed executive orders to set up a home defense agency and an economic warfare agency has been completed and they are said to be at the White House awaiting the President's signature. Mayor LaGuardia appears to be the hot favorite to head the home defense agency . . . Robert S. Regar, of the Post-office Department, has been elected treasurer of the Federal Employes' Council . . . More and more Census punch-card operators are being laid low by sore arms . . .

Civil Service Commission is so desperate to fill employment calls that last weekend it ordered its district managers to put 400 stenographers and typists on trains, buses and planes headed for Washington. Each manager was given a quota to round up and it looks as though the drive will be successful as the people are already reporting for work. Most of the people were on district registers.

Heat Waves Via Radio

Heat waves, not short waves, emanated from the police radio in the Rockville (Md.) substation yesterday.

Desk Clerk Lawrence Best sniffed the smoke and turned to see the radio in flames. He carried it outside and doused it with water. A wiring defect was blamed.

Error and Home Run

University of Maryland students, seeing a large crowd gathered about a car on the campus yesterday, hurried to what they thought was the scene of an accident, but "got the bird" instead.

Inside the crowd was G. Wilson Kellough, a Baltimore druggist, releasing 46 homing pigeons for a training flight back to Baltimore.

Stokowski Leads His Second Youth Orchestra In Concert Here Opening Continental Tour

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Leopold Stokowski conducts the second All-America Youth Orchestra in Constitution Hall on Wednesday night. Program: Toccata and Fugue in D minor (Bach), Symphony in C minor (Beethoven), "Ancient Desert Drone" (Henry Cowell), "Liebesgesang" from "Tristan und Isolde" (Wagner).

Bearing the same name as its predecessor which toured South America last summer, but differing considerably in personnel, the second All-American Youth Orchestra played in Constitution Hall last evening at the beginning of a tour of the United States, Canada and Mexico under the direction of Leopold Stokowski. There are 47 new members in the organization, which represents 21 States, and three of them—Lloyd Geisler, Robert Marsteller and Sanford Schonbach—hail from the District of Columbia. Fresh from its preparatory rehearsals in Atlantic City, the orchestra cannot be justly criticized for not performing as smoothly as did its first incarnation at the close of the tour, but it offers an admirable exhibit of the talent of native young people.

BROWN

Already the new ensemble shows the characteristic style of Stokowski, not only in the seating arrangement with the woodwinds, brasses and percussion to the fore, but also in the treatment of phrasing and dynamics. Already there is apparent a remarkable responsiveness to the will of the director and a fine spirit of cooperation among the members. Like Kipling's ship, the orchestra is in the process of finding itself, and the process was interesting to observe. One could almost feel the strain of attention and the striving for adjustment. What has been achieved in a short time is highly praiseworthy.

There was rich sonority in the stirring performance of Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor which opened the concert, and there was technical excellence in it as well. One was particularly struck by the fluency of the crescendos and by the sharpness of attack on the entrance of phrases. The reading had vitality and urgent force, and the climaxes were resplendent in tone.

If the performance of Beethoven's C minor symphony seemed somewhat spotty and untraditional in tempi, that was probably the result of Mr. Stokowski's insistence upon vivid contrasts in dynamics and rhythms. There were so many bright splashes of color that the composition seemed at times pointillist in effect, as though Beethoven had foreshadowed impressionism in music. If brilliance was the quality sought, it was certainly attained.

Henry Cowell's "Ancient Desert Drone" proved to be a deftly scored and very interesting work quite free from the tone-clusters of the Californian composer. The harmonies are all orthodox, and the instrumentation has the utmost clarity, while the atmospheric exoticism is successfully projected without any recourse to trite devices.

The program closed with a glowing performance of the "Liebesgesang" from "Tristan und Isolde," which had abundance of emotional force. The audience was demonstrative in approval, so much so that Debussy's "Prelude a l'Apres-midi d'un Faune" was added as an extra number and done with great delicacy.

At the intermission, Mr. Stokowski addressed the auditors, thanking them for their hearty welcome, and briefly outlining the ideals of the organization. The only disappointment of the evening was the presence of but one American composition on the program. An All-American group could very fittingly play all-American concerts, and this ideal should be added to the others.

Hospital Pays $28,901 Back to D. C.

St. Elizabeths Records To Be Checked Oftener; Officials Explain Mixup

An unexpected $28,901 windfall came the District government's way yesterday, and in its wake a batch of explanations which somewhat clarified a complicated situation.

It all broke in the office of A. R. Pilkerton, District Auditor, when he announced receipt of a rebate check for the amount, representing St. Elizabeths Hospital bills which the District had paid for 12 patients long since deceased or discharged.

According to M. Sanger, administrative assistant at St. Elizabeths, the error was discovered last July when a new card-filing system was being installed. The laborious task of making adjustments was begun at once, he said.

In his report to the Commissioners, Pilkerton said the overcharging came about because the Board of Public Welfare "has not personally checked the admission or discharge records of the hospital with the individual monthly billings at the hospital for a number of years."

Actually, the District paid $35,836 to the mental diseases hospital by mistake. However, examination of the records revealed that the city government was never billed for a legitimate debt of $6,935, representing services rendered two other patients, therefore that sum was deducted when the rebate check was sent.

Some of the 12 patients involved in the overcharge affair died or were discharged as far back as March, 1932. Pilkerton told the commissioners that a conference he had with Paul Kirby, assistant welfare director, resulted in an understanding that semi-annual checks will be made on St. Elizabeth's Hospital records.

The District pays, at the rate of $1.80 a day, for care of persons admitted to the institution as municipal patients. When such patients receive visiting privileges and leave the hospital for one or more days, $1.80 is deducted from the bill for each day of their absence. The mixup came from check-in and check-out slips, admitted by St. Elizabeths and which were not detected by the Board of Public Welfare.

80 Years of Practice

A GAME OF SKAT—Dr. Carl S. Keyser (left), Dr. Frederick H. Morhart and Christian Heurich (right), playing a game of skat, a little-known German game at which the venerable brewer has had more than 80 years' experience

A Heurich doctor in the house? Indeed, there were two of them under Christian Heurich's roof last night, both trying fiercely not to heal their host—there's nothing the matter with the 98-year-old patriarch—but to beat him at skat.

Skat? That's an old, little known German game, played with 32 cards, at which the venerable brewer has had more than 80 years' experience, the last 30 years of them with Dr. Frederick H. Morhart and Dr. Carl S. Keyser as his opponents.

The skat sessions are held each Wednesday and Sunday night at the senior Heurich's Victorian residence, 1307 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest. As he plays skat, his alert mind keeps track of cards that have been played. It is a habit that pays off in games won. The payoff is in satisfaction and pride. Not a penny ever changes hands.

The head of the local brewing company bearing his name willingly talked skat yesterday, once he got over the surprise of an interviewer's bursting into the house and was satisfied that the visitor had a sympathetic ear.

Likes to Discuss Skat

"Sometimes you find something and sometimes you don't," he said, with an impish grin, referring to that stage of the game when the player turns up the two cards which have been lying face down on the table.

A glance at the record would indicate that Mr. Heurich generally "finds something." The record is the year-to-year summary of skat games in which he has played, showing that Dr. Morhart and Dr. Keyser and Mrs. Heurich and Christian Heurich, jr., as well as the former partners who have passed away, found him a pretty tough customer.

He keeps the point totals in his own hand, in red ink and black ink. Proudly he turns to the five-year "settlement sheet," for the period ended last April 4, which shows that his aggregate point total was 266,358, compared with 253,104 for Dr. Morhart and 209,872 for Dr. Keyser.

Has Lost 3 in Row

What's bothering Mr. Heurich now, though, is that he's been beaten off at the last three skat sessions in a row. Dr. Keyser, his brother-in-law, and Dr. Morhart seem to be catching up with the old master.

When the Heurichs move out to their country home near Hyattsville for the summer, the skat games will move with them.

There is no kibitzing in the Heurich games. There is a strict rule on that. The only time when thoughts may rove from the cards is when a player lifts his tankard.

"I put away two bottles at each sitting," said the host.

Bondy Quits As Welfare Chief of D. C.

Responsible Position In Red Cross War Service Work Awaits Executive

Robert E. Bondy has resigned as District director of public welfare to take an executive post with the American Red Cross, which he served for more than 20 years before entering the District government's service, The Post learned last night.

BONDY

Bondy declined to comment on the matter, but it was established that the District Commissioners have received his resignation and probably will accept it shortly.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, said he had offered Bondy a "responsible position" in the organization's war service work, of which he was once national director. Davis said Bondy had not yet formally accepted.

Bondy was national disaster relief director of the Red Cross when he became District welfare director September 16, 1939.

In the Mississippi Valley flood of 1927 he was director of reconstruction. In 1930-31 he directed drought relief in Southeastern States. For a number of years he was manager of the Eastern Area of the Red Cross, supervising activities in States east of the Mississippi. He became disaster relief director November 1, 1931.

Born in Minnesota 45 years ago, Bondy was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1917, served as a private in the Army during the closing months of the World War and came to Washington in 1920.

Film Executive Denies Love Theft

Samuel A. Galanty, Columbia Pictures Corporation executive, denied yesterday that he stole the love of 25-year-old Kathryn Lampkin from her band leader husband, Philip Lampkin, 35.

The husband sued Galanty in the District Court Tuesday for $100,000, claiming the movie distribution executive started out in 1939 to win away his bride of four years.

The answer said Lampkin failed to state "a valid cause of action" and "denied each of the allegations of the complaint."

J. H. R. Cromwell's Daughter Elopes, Wed to Student

Eighteen-year-old Christine Cromwell, debutante daughter of James H. R. Cromwell, former Minister to Canada, yesterday became the bride of Frederick Putnam White, Brown University student, following an elopement.

The bride, who studied here at National Park Seminary and was presented to society last year by her aunt, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, met her bridegroom last winter in Palm Beach, according to her grandmother, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury.

Mrs. White is the daughter of Cromwell and Mrs. Timothy Godde, the former Delphine Dodge. Cromwell's present wife is the former Doris Duke, the heiress.

Rep. Boland in Hospital Ill With the Grippe

Representative Patrick J. Boland (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, was in Doctor's Hospital last night suffering from what his doctor termed "a bad infection of la grippe." The majority whip was stricken three days ago, it was said, and went to the hospital from his Mayflower Hotel residence yesterday.

Citizens Hold A Dinner Dance At Chevy Chase

The Citizens Association of Chevy Chase, D. C., held its first annual dinner dance and card party last night at the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase.

No speeches were on the dinner program, which included presentation of certificates to Clayton B. Aldrich of Peoples Drug Stores and Teddy Hendricks of Safeway Stores as "Community Builders" from Chain Store Age magazine. About 250 attended the dinner, with others joining the crowd for the dance and card party. Donald Carpenter was general chairman of the event.

Among the honor guests were Henry L. Colman, president of the Northwest Council; Mrs. Leslie Wright, past president of Forest Hills Citizens Association; J. M. Maxwell, president of American University Citizens Association.

100 Old Timers Sing Together At 'Y' Reunion

One hundred "old timers" of the Y. M. C. A. last night recalled happenings of past years, sang together and were addressed by Earl Godwin, radio news commentator, at their annual reunion dinner held in the Central Young Men's Christian Association, 1736 G Street Northwest.

First honors for length of membership last night were held by J. Harvey Wattles, 1661 Crescent Place Northwest, who has belonged for 61 years.

Gold cards were presented to G. A. Bonnet and Grant Leet, who have just become 50-year members, and similar cards were designated to be sent to three other 50-year members not at the dinner. They are C. A. Aspinwall, E. W. Davis and F. E. Tasker. Likewise, silver cards were listed to be presented to 17 who have been members for 25 years.

Citizens Back Recreation Board Plan

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association last night indorsed the proposed establishment of a nine-man District recreation board.

John L. Fowler, president, was instructed to appoint a committee to cooperate with national defense authorities in making community surveys and other activities.

Harry Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, addressed the organization on the cost of proposed highway and recreational improvements. He warned the citizens to make sure funds would be available for more ordinary governmental services before indorsing too large an improvement program.

Michigan Park

The Michigan Park Citizens Association gave its approval last night to the proposed creation of a nine-man board to supervise the District's recreational facilities and activities.

After a lengthy discussion, opposition was voted by the association to proposed rezoning of property at Twelfth and Randolph Streets Northeast as a site for a self-service grocery.

The citizens contributed $25 to the Elks Boys Club Band.

Advertising Club Speaker

Harford Powel, information director of the Treasury Department's bond and stamp campaign, will be guest speaker before the Advertising Club of Washington today at 12:30 o'clock in the Raleigh Hotel.

Work to Start Soon on Girls' Dormitory

Construction of a $400,000 250-unit dormitory for single Washington girls employed by the Government will begin about June 1 on the site of the old White Court Apartments, 2131 O Street Northwest, it was learned last night.

To be operated along hotel lines, complete with telephones in each room, the project is on the property of Ralph S. and Harry P. Scott, local boardinghouse owners, who now own and operate 20 of the homes in downtown Washington.

The large dormitory-hotel, expected to be completed October 1, is part of a plan to erect several large dormitories for Washington girls, recently announced by Defense Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer.

This and similar projects are understood to have the approval of Mrs. Roosevelt, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation mortgage company will lend approximately $25,000 for the construction, it was said last night.

The Philip M. Julien Co., local architects, has completed sketches of the unit, it was said, and the contract for construction is expected to be let shortly.

'Fantasia' Enlists High Degree of Public Favor

Unique Film, at National, Affords Unique Experience in Exercise of Eye and Ear; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WHATEVER DOUBT may have existed as to Washington's reception of the Walt Disney-Leopold Stokowski "Fantasia," now at the National, has been dispelled by the box-office reaction to the first local showing of this screen innovation since its benefit premiere on Monday night. On its first presentation to the general public at regular prices on Tuesday night, "Fantasia" was virtually sold out. Long queues of eager patrons have been the rule at the ticket wicket ever since the pasteboards went on sale.

BELL

All of this, of course, is as it should be. "Fantasia" is an experience the like of which no theatergoer ever has undergone in the whole span of his screen-gazing. It would be ridiculous to say that everyone who sees it will be enthralled by everything that unfolds itself upon the silver sheet and over the multiple sound tracks. It is in no sense stretching the fact, however, to make plain that during the two-hours-plus of "Fantasia" every member of the audience, at one time or another, must encounter something infinitely to his liking and easily worth the price he has paid for his seat.

There is that "Dance of the Mushrooms," for instance. Never until Monday night had we ever looked upon the succulent garnishment of a porterhouse steak as an exponent of the classic arts. After "Fantasia," it will be a ticklish business trying to devour a mushroom. It would be almost like sitting down to a meal of Pavlowa! Especially in the case of that quaint little tad who furnishes the comedy of the interval. He is a fabulous fellow.

And when we get around to "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" and Beethoven's "Pastoral," there on the screen is Disney at his incomparably imaginative best, for the eye, and some of the most glorious music ever written, pouring into the ear. "Night on Bald Mountain" may chill the marrow a bit, but it still remains an extraordinary revelation of interpretative and technical achievement.

The Capitol Fills Up Its Month

With Ernst Lubitsch's comedy about love, "That Uncertain Feeling," opening this morning, Loew's Capitol Theater makes known also the later attractions that will occupy its screen during May. On Thursday, May 22, Jimmy Roosevelt's production of "Pot o' Gold" will come along, with James Stewart, Paulette Goddard and Horace Heidt and his orchestra in the top spots. On May 29, the attraction will be "A Woman's Face," the widely discussed Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, in which Joan Crawford is the star and Melvyn Douglas her leading man. Miss Crawford reputedly soars in this one and makes up a tremendous amount of lost yardage.

If you are interested in short shots of "spot" excitement, the current issue of the Paramount News will show you the running of the Kentucky Derby and pictures of Rudolph Hess, the No. 3 Nazi, whose inexplicable flight from Germany to Scotland has set the world's ears flapping and tongues wagging.

Where-It-Is-Due Note

Thanks, Mr. Weatherman.

Paints With Sand

Lucile Fairbanks' new hobby is "painting" pictures with different colored sand from the Painted Desert.

After All, Miss Oberon, It's Impolite to Point!

BURGESS MEREDITH, MERLE OBERON, MELVYN DOUGLAS to be seen in the three stellar roles in "That Uncertain Feeling," opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. This is a United Artists production, directed by Ernst Lubitsch, possessor of that indefinable something or other known to the trade as the "touch." It promises to be another of his sprightliest comedies

In Hollywood

Hollywood, May 14.

For the first time in years I found Hobart Bosworth, that grand old trouper, playing a part in a picture—"Bullets for O'Hara."

HOPPER

He was happy as a boy, and showed me a photograph he had just received of the old clipper ship Sovereign of the Seas, by Tom Manners. Bosworth sailed on the Sovereign when he and the ship were both 12 years old, and spent his thirteenth birthday in a storm off Cape Horn. Bosworth, who made two versions of "The Sea Wolf," couldn't get a part in the last one. But when the company made a personal appearance jaunt up north, he was taken along, and got such a big hand and so much attention that Warners put him under contract.

On tha. same "O'Hara" set, Roger Pryor, who's playing the lead, was reminiscing about his father. He and Sousa were the two greatest band leaders in America. Pryor, sr., is living quietly on a farm in New Jersey, but has wonderful jewelled mementos from all the crowned heads of Europe. Roger is planning a personal appearance tour of our Army camps back East.

They tell me Nils Asther has given a beautiful performance in "Forced Landing," and is getting more offers than our present leading men . . . The Jack Oakies are shopping for a newborn baby.

ᔓᔕ

Lucille Ball gets the feminine lead opposite Charles Laughton in "Through the Thin Wall." Atta girl, Lucille! . . . Luise Rainer's friends are delighted that she's back in town, and we're hoping she'll do "Shanghai Gesture." Warners also want her for a picture.

Joel McCrea and Roland Brown have formed a new picture company, and the first picture they produce will be "Thieves Like Us." Now Joel is trying to arrange his schedule so he can also act in it.

ᔓᔕ

"Major Barbara," the British picture made while London was being bombed, is really democracy at work. George Bernard Shaw's cracks at his own government are so prolific and amusing I'm surprised the picture ever passed the censor board. But it proves again that England can take it.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, May 14.

PRAYER: Ever since Fritz Kuhn went to prison, he has refused to attend any of the chapel services. Last month, in Dannemora, Kuhn finally decided to attend . . . The burly convict, who is imprisoned for stealing from the German-American Bund which he headed, was late in arriving . . . And as he walked down the aisle to his seat, the minister noticed him, and immediately altered his sermon—to one singing the praises of free democracies.

LYONS

HOSPITALITY: Eleanor Roosevelt befriended a young New York couple who had occasion to come to Washington. The husband's business required his presence there for two days, and he brought his wife and baby with him . . . Mrs. Roosevelt knew that the couple's finances were limited—and so she invited them to stay at the White House. That evening they had to attend to business, somewhere in Washington. "You go right ahead," Mrs. Roosevelt urged. "Don't worry about the baby" . . . And so the wife of the President stayed home—minding their baby.

ENTERPRISE: Salvador Dali, the surrealist painter, visited the Boachcomber and watched Carmen Amaya, the flamenco dancer . . . "If I could talk to her, I could do wonders with Amaya," Dali declared. "I'd change her costume, and design one especially for her. Instead of that large family accompanying her onstage, I'd just have two guitarists. I could do wonders with her—if I could only talk to her" . . . Dali then was told that Amaya's salary now is $3,000 a week—and that she soon will leave for Hollywood, with a lucrative film contract. . . . "In that case," Dali sighed, "I can't talk to her."

PETITION: Alexander Woolcott told this story to Col. Frank Knox and some other guests, at the Chicago home of Lloyd Lewis, the newspaperman who wrote the famous Sherman biography . . . At a party attended by Lewis and Woollcott, Alec sat next to a tall silver-haired man. "Lewis certainly can write," Woollcott told him. "He's the only man who should write a biography of Lincoln. I wish somebody'd get up a petition on that" . . . "I'd sign it, too," said the tall, silver-haired man—whose Lincoln biography won the Pulitzer Prize. "I'd sign my full name—Carl Sandburg."

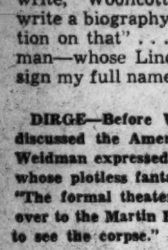
DIRGE—Before William Saroyan left for his native California he discussed the American theater with Jerome Weidman, the novelist. Weidman expressed admiration for "Watch on the Rhine" . . . Saroyan, whose plotless fantasies have intrigued the drama reviewers, insisted: "The formal theater is dead" . . . "If that's true," said Weidman, "go over to the Martin Beck Theater—and watch the lines of people waiting to see the corpse."

INTELLECT: King Carol, in coming to the Americas, is following the paths set by seven young men he once rated as among the most brilliant in Rumania . . . Two years ago Bruce Lockhart, the author of "British Agent," told me a story related to him by King Carol: It concerned 14 of the brightest young men in his country, selected by the King for training in the government service. Carol sent seven of them to England, and seven to America—to study the economic and political systems there. "The seven who went to England were very smart," Carol told Lockhart, "and they all now have important posts in Bucharest" . . . "What about the seven you sent to America?" asked Lockhart . . . "They were even smarter," said Carol. "They stayed there."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots
Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 14 (INS).—When Darryl Zanuck talked with Alice Faye after her marriage to Phil Harris and she told him of her happiness, the scolding he had in store for her was forgotten. He and all the studio crowd had tried to persuade Alice to wait to marry Phil Harris until September—but when has anybody in love ever been sensible? So now, Darryl, being a good businessman, has decided to make Alice's bridegroom an offer to appear in her next musical, "Great Guns," to be produced by William Le Baron.



PARSONS

In addition to the telephone calls from Alice, I received a wire signed "Alice Harris." Earlier in the day I heard that Alice was going to elope and printed it in my column but said the studio was trying to talk her out of it. The bride and groom celebrated their elopement tonight at the Charley Foy night club in the valley, where they first met.

No story has ever interested Hollywood as much as the sensational escape of Rudolph Hess from Germany into Scotland. When I tried to talk Hollywood news today everyone changed the subject to the amazing flight—the most dramatic event of this or any other war. But perhaps the most excited studio in town was Warners where, with only three days more of shooting on "Underground," they're practically tearing up the script to add the Hess escape.

I am sure you will all be interested to hear that Ralph Holmes, young brother of Phillips Holmes, and son of the famous actor, Taylor Holmes, is being tested for the role of Rudolph Valentino at the Edward Small studios. Unlike Phillips, Ralph is dark and today when I talked with Eddie Small he said young Holmes is the Valentino he had been looking for so long.

Amusing is the story told about J. P. Marquand's first day on the M.-G.-M. lot. Marquand, author of the best seller, "H. M. Pulham, Esquire," was brought to Hollywood to adapt his own movie. The photographers were told to make some still pictures of him and try as they would they couldn't make the author smile—or even look pleasant. Finally one of the photographers who had caught the name Marquand, said, "Can't you pep it up please, Mr. Mark Twain?"

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Drew Eberson, Glenda Farrell's heart for so long, and Francis Clendening, very good friend of Gene Towne's, were married in New York April 17; Johnny Downs and June Draper will wed June 28 and honeymoon in Honolulu; Ilona Woolsey, pretty secretary to Bill Moore, of the Esty Co., and Lester Salkow eloped today. Bet I knew it before Bill did.

George Raft's gift to "Peacemaker" Marlene Dietrich is a ring shaped like a Raft set with rubies; Talullah Bankhead has checked in at El Rancho Vegas to wait for her divorce from John Emery; Jack Dempsey, completely surrounded by pretty girls at Larry Potter's Jade Cafe; Mrs. Ernest Lubitsch, Mrs. Mervyn Leroy and Mrs. Milton Bren choo-chooed out on the superchief tonight for Detroit.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels; so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

FOR WOMEN ONLY!

Dean Retires as Player; Named Cub Coach

Griffs Get 16 Hits Off 3 Pitchers

Win 3d Straight; Chapman Homers; 5-Run Spree in 5th Chases John Gorsica

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Over the hapless forms of the Detroit Tigers, their favorite playmates this season, the Nats climbed into fifth place in the American League standings yesterday. They moved up on the impetus of a 9 to 4 victory which expanded their modest little winning streak to three straight.

Against the defanged Tigers, who haven't won a ball game since Hank Greenberg went military, the Nats continued to pour it on. They came up with a 16-hit fusillade against three Detroit pitchers and made the game a breeze for big Steve Sundra who was taking advantage of the Tigers' presence in town to notch his fourth victory in five starts this season.

They knocked Johnny Gorsica, one of the better Tiger pitchers, out of the box in the midst of a five-run salvo in the fifth inning, which shattered a 3-3 tie at that point, and they picked up added runs against Bud Thomas and Archie McKain.

It was the sixth straight defeat for the Tigers who are finding that travel is broadening only to their losing streaks. They haven't won a game on the road all season, and yesterday's failure dropped them into the sixth place vacated by the Nats.

Sundra was no shining light at the outset, giving up two runs to the Tigers in the first inning, but he steadied cleverly and was in control of affairs after the Nats burst forth with their five runs in the fifth.

Ben Chapman was present at Griffith Stadium yesterday—with a home run, his first of the season. It was both a powerful and important swat, occurring as it did in the fifth inning with a man on base and lifting the Nats' lead from 5-3 to 7-3 at the time.

The Tigers went into a pathetic sort of collapse in that fifth inning when three errors behind him—by Gehringer, Mullin and Croucher—helped make a message of matters for Gorsica, who was having troubles of his own making.

Nats Trail in Fourth

Sundra was fortunate to limit the damage to two runs in the first inning when, with one out, Mullin and Campbell doubled and York singled. Sundra walked Gehringer with only one out but, fortunately for Sundra, Higgins lined a double play ball into Bloodworth's glove.

Roger Cramer inspired the two tying runs for the Nats in the same inning when he singled with one out. The damage began with two out when Lewis and Travis hit identical singles to center and Bloodworth drove in the second run of the inning with a single to right.

Gehringher's muff of Lewis' hard grounder spurred the Nats on to their big five-run fifth inning. Travis followed with a single to right, and Bloodworth drove in the first run of the inning with a single to center. At this point, a strange sequence developed. Center Fielder Mullins, attempting to check a throw to third base, saw

Dizzy Given Double Pay For New Job

Pitcher Elated on Treatment by Club; General Manager Lauds Dean's Spirit

By Earl Hilligan,
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, May 14.—The inimitable Dizzy Dean tried to quit baseball today but wound up by moving from the Chicago Cubs' bench to the club's coaching lines—at double pay.

In a surprise move which climaxed a day of Dean developments and actually left the once-great pitcher momentarily speechless, the Cubs refused Dean's request for voluntary retirement, gave him his unconditional release and signed him as a coaching aide to Manager Jimmy Wilson.

"Boy, has this club been good to me," said Dean when the Cub general manager, James Gallagher, announced Dean would remain with the team. That short remark succinctly summed up Dean's case. For the Cubs gave Dean a new contract as a coach, starting his pay today, and will also give him the remainder of his reported $10,000 player contract at the end of the season.

Playing Career Ends

Thus ends—for at least a year—the playing career of one of baseball's great pitchers, one who won 30 games and lost only 7 for St. Louis' Cardinals in 1934 and who in six seasons as a Cardinal averaged 22 wins a year.

That was before Ol' Diz, whose colorful escapades, suspensions and salary holdouts made him the "newsiest" figure in the game, came to Chicago in April, 1938—costing the Cubs $185,000 cash and three players.

"I'm going to coach a year," he said, "and try to pitch once more after a year of rest for my arm. If I can't pitch then I'll be through for good."

Gallagher and Manager Wilson both paid tribute to that Dean spirit, Gallagher remarking: "He's too valuable a baseball man to wind up in the minors—or picking cotton. He'll be of great value helping young pitchers."

Dodgers Beat Reds in Taking 7th Straight

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 14.—The Brooklyn Dodgers, who earlier this season won nine games in a row, increased their current winning streak to seven games today with a 6-to-2 victory over the World Champion Reds behind the eight-hit hurling of Whit Wyatt.

The triumph gave the National League leaders a sweep of their two-game series and a record of five victores in six games against the Reds this spring.

Wyatt worked with perfection for seven innings in the course of earning his seventh victory against one defeat and when finally he gave up two runs on three hits and a walk in the eighth, the Dodgers already had sewn up the game.

Derringer Chased

Brooklyn scored five of its runs and knocked the veteran Paul Derringer out of the box in the first three innings for his fourth defeat in six decisions.

Lifeguard Class Begins Monday At East Potomac

A training and conditioning class for local swimmers who seek lifeguard positions in District swimming pools this summer, will begin next Monday at the East Potomac Pool, officers of the Welfare and Recreational Association announced yesterday.

There are 25 vacancies for swimmers able to pass strict Red Cross tests, it was said. A second class will begin June 5. Both courses will last five days. Applications should be made to R. J. McCarthy, director of swimming pools for the association.

The East Potomac Pool is expected to open May 30, with the five remaining public pools being opened June 7.

Three Indian Homers Defeat Yankees, 4 to 1

New York Suffers 4th Loss in Row as Harder Throws 6-Hitter to Win Behind Circuit Blasts

By the Associated Press

New York, May 14.—Home runs sent the New York Yankees reeling to their fourth straight defeat today as the Cleveland Indians reinforced their hold on first place in the American League with a 4-to-1 triumph behind the veteran Mel Harder.

The slender, 31-year-old curve ball specialist, in pegging his fourth victory without defeat, held the Bombers to six safeties and was supreme except for the fifth inning. Then singles by Joe Gordon and Gerry Priddy and a long fly by Pitcher Red Ruffling accounted for New York's lone run.

But the tale of the game was in the home runs—three of them—each the first of the year for Catcher Gene Desautels, Clarence (Soup) Campbell, and Gee Walker.

Desautels Homers

Desautels broke the scoring silence in the fifth with a 350-foot liner into the left-field stands. Campbell, a sophomore who played in only a few games for Cleveland last year and now is subbing in center field for the injured Roy Weatherly, raised his high into the right-field stands after Lou Boudreau singled in the eighth and their runs snapped a tie. Walker smashed his into left with one out and the game already won in the ninth.

Ruffling allowed only six hits all together, but the home-run blasts beat him just as Boudreau's circuit clout in the tenth inning yesterday whipped Lefty Russo. Together they gave the Indians a sweep of the two-game series and avenged the Yanks' clean-up of two tussles in Cleveland last week.

New York Upholds Soose Decision

New York, May 14 (U.P.).—The New York Boxing Commission today upheld Friday night's decision giving Billy Soose victory over Ken Overlin in their middleweight title fight at Madison Square Garden.

Overlin's manager, Chris Dundee, appeared voluntarily at the commission meeting and asked that the unanimous decision of the judges and referee be reversed.

The commission not only refused Dundee's request, but warned Dundee that he would be penalized in the future if he again "cut up" in the ring, making violent gestures to show his disapproval of a decision.

Bosox Rally Beats Chisox; Cronin Hero

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 14.—Joe Cronin's grand slam homer off Pete Appleton in a seven-run seventh today clinched a 10-to-7 victory for the Boston Red Sox over the Chicago White Sox.

The White Sox enjoyed a 6-to-3 lead until the seventh, when Bill Dietrich walked Johnny Peacock, first man up.

Lou Finney batted for Dick Newsome, who had pitched his sixth and seventh innings for the Red Sox, and was hit on the left arm by a pitched ball.

After Dom DiMaggio had singled into the left-field corner, scoring one run, Pete Appleton relieved Dietrich. Appleton walked Spence and struck out Ted Williams, then Luke Appling booted what looked like a double play grounder off Foxx's bat and Finney scored.

The visitors, however, outhit the Red Sox 13 to 8 and also profited by a balk by starting Pitcher Dickman which scored Kreevich with the bases loaded in the fourth.

McSpaden Wins Brookline Tournament

By the Associated Press

Brookline, Mass., May 14.—The unusually heavy 21-ounce putter favored by Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Winchester proved the ideal weapon for the country club's slow and grainy greens today when he put together two sub-par rounds of 70 and 68 to win the "Big Eight" 36-hole medal golf tournament for the British War Relief Society.

Favored by the gallery of 5,000, since he was the only Greater Boston pro in the star-studded competition, McSpaden totaled 14 one-putt greens while turning in his 138-total, which was three strokes better than that of his closest rival, Ben Hogan, golf's leading money winner.

Byron Nelson, the P. G. A. titlist, finished third with 143. Three tied for fourth honors with 145—Lawson Little, the National Open champion, Jimmy Demaret and Craig Wood, winner of the Masters'. Sammy Sneed was seventh with 146 and Bomber Jimmy Thomson, who got off to a woeful 79-start, trailed the carefully selected field with 152.

Every one of those experts except McSpaden, whose knowledge of this historic course gave him a decided edge, wasted numerous shots on its tricky greens. And McSpaden was the only one capable of sinking the longer ones. His chipping was deadly during both of his rounds and he collected three of his seven birdies by rapping in two from 20 feet and another from 30.

Stanford Names Street For Colored Teamster

Palo Alto, Calif., May 14 (AP).—Sam McDonald, a Negro, got a job with Stanford University in 1903 as a teamster.

Today a street on the campus was named for him.

McDonald, now superintendent of athletic buildings and grounds, was the first person so honored among the 50,000 former students, faculty members, trustees and employes connected with the school in a half century.

Reds Purchase Ernie Koy From Cards for $35,000

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 14.—The World Champion Cincinnati Reds took the rubber band off the bank roll tonight and bought hard-hitting outfielder Ernie Koy from the St. Louis Cardinals for something like $35,000.

General Manager Warren C. Giles announced the straight-cash deal shortly after the Reds had suffered their fourth straight defeat on their home grounds, this time at the hands of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

He said that Koy would go straight to left field. He was part of the deal that sent Joe Medwick from St. Louis to the Dodgers last year.

The Reds, lacking the punch that carried them to the championship last year and in 1939, now are in sixth place in the National League.

McCoy Will Report To Army May 27

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 14 (AP).—Benny McCoy, for whose baseball services the Philadelphia Athletics paid $45,000 as a free agent and signed to a two-year contract at $10,000 a year, must report to his draft board here May 27. He will be inducted into the Army at that time unless an appeal is received before midnight tonight, Chief Clerk Frank Wierenga said today.

Take a Bow, Mr. Vernon

The fair-haired lad of the Griffith Stadium public in these times is First Baseman Mickey Vernon, which should be a complete surprise to the gentlemen who have charge of the Washington ball team.

POVICH

Nobody except Vernon and the much-maligned talent scout of the Nats, Joe Cambria, is entitled to take any bows for the timely batting punch and the clever fielding job the fellow is contributing to the Washington club. Vernon wasn't supposed to be a member of the Nats this season, in fact.

He wasn't even invited to the Nats' training camp, he was held in such low esteem by the gentlemen in charge. Fact is that the Nats' bosses had told Joe Engel, Chattanooga owner, to sell his only first baseman, Alex Hooks, to the Knoxville club. They would send him a first baseman, they promised. They had Vernon tabbed for Chattanooga.

At the time, the Nats' bosses were enrapt at the stories of the talents of George Archie, the first baseman they bought during the winter from the Coast League. Archie was supposed to walk in and take over the club's first base job. The Washington-owned Vernon was just another guy who had batted .281 for Jersey City in the International League. He was considered quite superfluous in the Washington scheme for 1941.

When the letters went out in January, calling the players to report for spring training in Florida, Vernon got no invitation. He wasn't supposed to be good enough, despite the fact that he led the International League hitters for more than half a season. The fact that Vernon was holding out on his contract didn't endear him to Clark Griffith, nor was the Nats' owner pleased when Vernon took a wife during the training season. Mr. Griffith long ago posted an unofficial sort of ban on marriages at that stage of the season. He does not like his ball players to be romancing.

All of a sudden, however, the Nats' bosses began to ruminate again on the possibilities of Vernon as a first baseman. Archie was proving to be no ball of fire and Bucky Harris recalled that Vernon, in a previous trial with the Nats, had done very well indeed. Griffith invited Vernon to camp, new bride and all, and signed him up.

The first day Vernon donned a Washington uniform at Orlando he put on a show. He knocked five balls over the rightfield fence. He had never displayed that kind of power before, and Bucky Harris was intrigued. But all of a sudden, too, George Archie began to hit the ball. In deference to Archie's coast league feats, Harris strung along with the fellow and relegated Vernon to the bench.

It's Vernon's job now. He's batting in the important third base spot. His three home runs have contributed to three different Washington victories, and his triple the other day figured directly in a fourth. He is becoming more than a mild sort of home run threat. His clout over the right field wall near the scoreboard against Philadelphia pitching the other day was the lustiest sock over that particular wall in years.

The Fans Have Special Applause for Mickey

Around first base, Vernon has not been merely adequate. His play has been on the brilliant side. He's the best target for throws that Washington has owned since the ill-starred deal that sent Joe Kuhel to Chicago, and even Kuhel may have had no bulge in fielding thrown balls.

Bill Terry, of the Giants, offered to buy Vernon for $40,000 last summer when he was hitting .350 for the Giants' Jersey City farm, but while the Nats were considering that offer, Terry withdrew it. Vernon went into a mysterious slump and ended up hitting a mere .281. He hurt his shoulder on a slide and when he swung a bat thereafter, it was in pain. Terry wanted no first baseman in doubtful health at $40,000.

There's nothing the matter now with Vernon's batting stroke. It's a stylishly fluent swing that contains power. At Griffith Stadium these days they're reserving a special sort of applause for the kid who hits 'em so far. And somewhere in the picture of Washington's new hero belongs the beaming face of Joe Cambria who lured him off the campus at Villanova in his freshman year with the promise that someday he'd be a big leaguer. Vernon is a nice sort of ball player.

Ralph Bogart Takes Chevy Chase Medal

District Amateur Champion Posts 75 As Scores Soar in First Day Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

After a day of strangely high scoring over a Chevy Chase course which invited par-beating golf, Ralph Bogart emerged as medalist in the Thirty-first Invitation Tournament yesterday with a mediocre 75.

The 21-year-old District Amateur champion posted a score three shots over his 1940 effort, which in turn was five strokes away from the medal, but yesterday as the field floundered around with high-70 and 80 golf Bogart's total was low for the day.

In fact it was only by a near-dusk playoff between seven players with scores of 79 for five berths in the championship flight that the defending champion, Volney Burnett, the tournament favorite, Claude Rippy, and the Maryland State titlist, M. Parker Nolan, are still on the scene. They qualified in the playoff with Bob Morris and southpaw R. H. Sears while Martin McCarthy and Maury Fitzgerald lost out on the second extra hole.

Good Golfers Fail

On the outside of the championship flight are such stellar performers as Earle Skinker, and Art Cross, 81, publinks champ Roy Smith, 82, John Brawner, 80, Lionel Noah, jr., 83, and four former titlists, Harry Pitt, Dick Lunn, Ralph Quinter and B. Warren Corkran.

Those who returned cards will battle it out in the lower flights.

Indian Spring's golf committee chairman A. S. Melvin, an early starter, posted a 76 which at the time was thought to be of playoff caliber, but when the stratosphere-like scores were completed, Melvin's 41-35 was second lowest of the day and only a shot off the medal pace.

Bogart, runner-up last year and for the past two years amateur champion of the city, played the nines in 38 and 37 for a 75 which included five three-putt greens but it was plenty good enough. He also dropped a trio of 10-footers, one for his lone birdie on the eighth hole.

Landra Platt Qualifies

Two championship flight qualifiers posted 77s, one by Jesse Dowling, jr., Baltimore's long-hitting threat, and another by Landra B. Platt, who pleased the home club gallery with one of his best rounds.

The biggest surprise of the day was Rippy, champion in 1938 and 1939, who was considered the man to beat in the tournament. "The Ripper" was out in a comfortable 38, but trap trouble caught him coming back and he started five over par in three holes. He barely squeezed into the playoff with a 79 and snared an easy par in the playoff. His playing companion, Volney Burnett, was also in trouble all day, and for a while it appeared as though he, too, would be left out but the golfing fireman, who birdied the first hole in the playoff last year and went on to win the title, qualified this time with a par.

Rippy and Melvin will meet this

Middies Rout Mead in Big 2d Inning

Brennan's Hit Tops Seven-Run Uprising; Dwyer Hurls Fine Relief Ball in Vain

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, May 14.—Right Fielder Jackie Brennan batted in four runs and scored a fifth as the Naval Academy baseball nine defeated its State rival, the University of Maryland, 9 to 6, here today.

Brennan cracked out a decisive blow in the Middies' seven-run rally in the second, and participated later in scoring.

Twelve errors marked the contest, with many of them figuring in the scoring by both teams. Capt. Norman Smith hurled the full route for Navy in turning in his seventh triumph of the year.

Dwyer Good in Relief

Lefty Frank Dwyer, who took over the hill assignment for the Terps, limited Navy to four hits thereafter, but his fine relief tossing was wasted as Maryland's late efforts at bat merely cut down Navy's lead.

Navy sewed up its eighth straight triumph and the twelfth win in 15 starts against collegiate opposition, by hitting behind Maryland miscues in the big second inning.

Hal Harwood flied out to open the frame but Ernest Smith started Navy on its way with a long double to center field. Wes Gebert singled to left scoring Smith with the game's initial tally. Lavrakas was hit and Norman Smith was walked, filling the bases. Jackie Stowe's rap to short trickled through Carroll Radebaugh's legs and Gebert and Lavrakas scored. Ben Blue bounced to second and all hands were safe as Leib McDonald bobbled the ball. At this point Brennan came through with his first timely hit sending N. Smith and Stowe home. That left Blue on third. Brennan stole second and scored from there with Blue tallying ahead of him as Sherry Werner singled through the box. That marked finis for Meade and Lefty Dwyer took over the mound assignment. He forced Harwood, at bat for the second time in the inning to ground out, Radebaugh to Mearle Duval, and the frame ended as E. Smith popped to first base.

McGee Traded To N. Y. Giants

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 14.—Fiddler Bill McGee, husky pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, was traded today to the New York Giants for Pitcher Harry Gumbert and, as could be expected, an unspecified amount of cash. Both are right-handers.

McGee, a product of Batchtown, Ill., won 16 games and lost 10 for the Cardinals last season, against Gumbert's record of 12 and 14. Neither has been able to get going this season.

Gumbert won his first start but was taken out of the box in his succeeding four efforts. He joined the Giants in 1935 and had his best year in 1938, when he won 18 and lost 11.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 14.—Of all things:

Bobby Feller said at the Yankee Stadium:

"Winning 30 games in one season is almost impossible for a modern pitcher. For one thing, he doesn't get in as many games as those old timers did. He takes his turn and he isn't used much in relief roles, where you occasionally can pick up a cheap win. Besides, the modern ball makes it tough. Seven or eight fellows on the average big league team can hit it out of the lot and beat you. In the old days it was different."

CONSIDINE

Roger Peckinpaugh said:

"I thought at the start of the year that the Tigers would be the team to beat. Now, of course, I think the Yanks are. The Tigers are completely licked without Greenberg. As long as he was with the team you could never walk him, because York was coming up behind him. Now he's gone, and you can pass York and take away most of their sting."

Dickey Whacks Wacky Double

It's the truth. With one out in the last half of the ninth, and the score tied 1-1, Charley Keller singled off Bobby Feller. Joe Gordon forced him at second. Then Bill Dickey sliced an elegant double into left field. It looked like the ball game. Gerry Walker could not get close to it. The ball hit the ground near the stands while Walker was still 20 feet away. Gordon raced around the sacks toward home. And he would have easily scored with the run that would have won the ball game except that the ball bounced into the stands. That meant an automatic double for Dickey, and also that Gordon was permitted to advance two bases only: from first to third.

Jerry Priddy, next up, rolled out to Mack for the third out, and in the tenth inning the Indians went on to win the ball game, all because Dickey hit an otherwise sensationally timely double into the stands!

Soose Unthrilled by Title

We saw Bill Soose a few hours after he was awarded that thoroughly aromatic decision over Ken Overlin. He's a real nice kid, that Soose, intelligent and sensitive. When he came into the restaurant where we talked to him, the late diners broke out into spontaneous applause. But Soose seemed miserable about the whole thing, and it wasn't his badly bruised right hand—which was so sore he couldn't shake hands with it—that made him feel bad. He just felt low. We doubt very much if he thought he deserved the duke.

He was touched by a gift from Alexis Thompson, the young National Football League team owner. Thompson had a watch whipped up for him at considerable cost several days before the fight. It is fitted intricately into two gold coins. Inside the case reads this legend:

"I knew you'd do it, Billy. May 9, 1941."

Mike Jacobs, by the way, thinks that the next Soose-Overlin fight will be much better. "It wasn't a good fight," he told us coming back from Washington on a plane yesterday, "but I think Soose won what there was of it. It wouldn't have been a fight without him. Overlin back-pedalled and held too much. Next time he'll know he has to open up, to win. And when Overlin opens up, Soose will get a better chance to punch him." Incidentally, Mike plans this one as a garden party for the summer, but just how he's going to do that remains a mystery. For Montrose Proser, the pub-licist, plans to turn the massive joint into a poor man's copacabana next month and keep it that way until fall.

No-Hit Shutout Pitched by Darden

B. L. Darden hurled a no-hit, no-run game yesterday to lead his Navy Receiving Station team to a 3-0 victory over St. Elizabeths Hospital on the Navy Yard diamond yesterday in a Federal Commercial League game.

Darden also got a single and a double in three times at bat. In the seven-inning game, he struck out nine men and walked one. Two other batters got on first base through errors.

Baer Forces Seek Urban Training Site

The lonely stretches at Steve Cochran's Olney, Md., farm apparently are beginning to wear on Buddy Baer's stoical calm, for yesterday Harry Mendel, Ray Alvis and Ancil Hoffman were shopping for a downtown spot for Buddy to conclude his training for the May 23 heavyweight championship fight with Joe Louis in Griffith Stadium.

Buddy, it appears, is anxious for the smell of exhaust and the clanging of streetcar bells and as a result his brain trust is seeking to lease rival Promoter Joe Turner's hall at Fourteenth and L Streets Northwest. If Joe leases the arena to them it will be the first time he has made money on a fight in many a month.

Meanwhile, Buddy did 7 miles of roadwork yesterday out in the wilds near Olney and startled everyone by announcing he thinks he'll favor the audience with a song after he knocks out Louis a week from tomorrow night. There may be music at the fight but the general opinion is Buddy won't hear it. He says he's going to sing "California, Here I Come."

Both Lewis and Baer went through the old routine of smearing their sparring partners rather badly yesterday. Al Hart, the colored behemoth who has been working with Louis at Riverside Stadium, pulled out yesterday to give way to Jay D. Turner, 212-pound protege of Lew Jenkins. Both fighters will work out today, Louis at 3 p. m., and Baer at 2:30 p. m.

Yellow Cab Beats Fat Boy Ten, 5-1

"Bump" Simonds enjoyed one of his good nights last night in the Capital City Softball League at Washington Softball Stadium and hurled the Yellow Cab 10 to a surprising 5-1 victory over Fat Boy. It was the first defeat of the year for the Fat Boy 10. Simonds allowed only 2 hits and fanned 7. It was the second victory in three starts for Yellow Cab.

In the National Night League, Pepco uncovered a new pitching star in the person of Kenny Thomas, who hurled his mates to a 4-1 triumph over N. & G. Barbecue, fanning 10 and granting but 3 scattered hits. George Clow, Barbeque hurler, also fanned 10 but gave up 6 hits. Yateman's home run in the sixth with a man on base settled the issue.

Tonight, two National Night League games will be played with Evening Star meeting Civil Service at 8 p. m. and Giant Foods meeting Community Business Men of Mount Rainier at 9:15 p. m.

Georgetown Bows to Fordham, 3 to 1, in Pitching Battle

Dieckelman's Six-Hitter Is Shaded

Rams' Ed Alex Holds Hoyas to Four Hits In Brisk Game; Error Gives G. U. Lone Run

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 14.—Ed Alex, Fordham's fast right-hander, overpowered enemy swingers on Rose Hill today with a four-hit performance and was chiefly responsible for the Maroons' 3-to-1 conquest of Georgetown in that uncommon baseball occurrence—a briskly played, efficiently pitched duel of college teams.

The Rams made their six hits and all their runs off left-handed Dick Dickelman in the first two innings and then succumbed so completely to his improved flinging that they never got a man beyond first base thereafter.

Three runs, however, were more than enough for the big fellow, who was hanging up his fifth victory in seven starts. Alex was firing his hard one and causing the Hoya Bats to swing futilely at his sharply breaking curve. He fanned 10, walked two and might have had a shutout except for the game's only error, Jackie Hearn's bad throw to first in an attempt to complete a double play which would have retired Hoyas in the seventh.

Coolidge, Gonzaga Net Game Called

Darkness yesterday forced Coolidge and Gonzaga to call a halt to their tennis match at Sligo courts with the score tied up, 3-to-3. The final match, a doubles affair between Sheehan and Irwin, of Gonzaga, and Miller and Gaines, of Coolidge, was called after each had won one game, the first by the former pair, 6-4, and the second by Coolidge, 7-5. The match will be completed at a later date.

Browns Beat Macks, 10-5; Lucadello Star

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 14.—Johnny Lucadello, sent in at third base in an effort to improve the St. Louis Browns' hitting, did just that today, driving in three runs as his mates trounced the Philadelphia Athletics 10-5.

Lucadello garnered a double and two singles, while his colleague Rip Radcliff banged out a two bagger and a pair of singles to add four runs to the Brownie column.

The visitors found the offerings of four Athletic pitchers much to their liking, clouting 13 hits. Bump Hadley, a recent A's acquisition, who gave up five hits in three innings, was charged with the loss.

D. C. Golfing Dentists Led by Dr. E. T. Rice

Dr. Edwin Rice, with a 71, was low scorer at Beaver Dam yesterday as Washington's golfing dentists defeated Baltimore, 5-4. Dr. Daniel Melburn had a net 77 for the winners.

Dr. Joe Madden led the District dentists to a skeet shooting victory over the Baltimoreans at Griffith Farms, with 49 out of a possible 50.

Charlotte Hall Nine Defeated By Coolidge

Calvin Coolidge High School broke into the win column yesterday as the District's new high school defeated Charlotte Hall Military Academy, 8 to 3, behind the six-hit pitching of young Bernie Shankman. Coolidge had lost eight games before yesterday.

Adey Bassin and Catcher Murphy led the stickwork for the winners, the former getting two for three and knocking in two runs, and the latter hitting for the circuit in the second inning with a mate on base.

Klinger Hurls, Bats Pirates To 12-7 Victory

By the Associated Press

Pittsburg, May 14.—The Veteran Bob Klinger pulled a ball game out of the fire today for Pittsburgh with a fine sample of relief hurling and a timely double, enabling the Pirates to beat Philadelphia 12 to 7.

Manager Frankie Frisch started his newest pitcher, Nicholas Strincevich, obtained from Boston, but Nick Etten spoiled the big boy's day with a three-run homer in the first frame. Danny Litwhiler connected with another Philly homer in the second off young Lloyd Dietz and Joe Marty made one off Russ Bauers.

Klinger held the Phils to two hits in the last four innings and his double in the sixth scored Vince DiMaggio with the tying seventh run. The Bucs turned the contest in a merry-go-round in the seventh and eighth when they bunched six hits with three walks for five runs. Arky Vaughan led the attack with four singles.

C. U. Defends Mason-Dixon Track Crown

Saturday's Meet May See 7 Records Go by Boards

By Jack Munhall

Judging from current performances in conference dual meets, at least seven records are likely to be smashed Saturday when Catholic University risks its Mason-Dixon Conference track championship at Baltimore.

J. Dorsey Griffith, able and hard-working Catholic University track coach, has compiled a complete dope sheet which indicates that the marks for the 100, 440, 2 miles, discus, shot put, javelin and pole vault should be broken.

Moreover, there seems to be a good chance that the records for the 220, mile and high jump also may be bettered, for there are entrants in each event who have been flirting with the respective standards.

Accounted a certain record-breaker is C. U.'s Johnny Corbett, who will be favored to win the mile and two miles. Corbett has run the longer race well under his own record of 9 minutes, 56.9 seconds established last year. Corbett, if pressed, might also set up a new mark for the mile. The present mark is 4 minutes, 24.3, made in 1938 by McMahon of Washington College.

Lovett Is Favored

Lovett of Randolph-Macon, who has been clocked in the century at 9.6 under normal conditions and in 10 flat against the wind, will be favored to wipe out the record of 10 flat, established in 1937 by "Gibby" Young of Washington College.

Johnny Doyle of C. U. has done 50.9 this season in the 440 and will be counted on to erase the record of 51.2, posted in 1938 by Gerow of Delaware. Gerow is still in school and also will have to be reckoned with, if he enters the race. He has, however, been concentrating this year on the 880 and mile.

American University's seven-man track squad appears due a record from the discus throwing of Jerry Bisceglia who has heaved the weight 139 feet 1 inch while the existing mark is 130 feet 10½ inches by Rosenthal, of Johns Hopkins in 1938.

The shotput mark of 43 feet 8½ inches, also held by Rosenthal, is expected to be lowered by Rosenthal or Bisceglia, Makofske, of C. U. and Sinclair, of Washington College. On paper, the event looms a toss-up between Rosenthal who has done 45 feet 9 inches, and Bisceglia whose best has been 45 feet 2 inches. Howev., Makofske, 42 feet 11 inches, and Sinclair, 43 feet 3¼ inches, ma, slip in a winner if the favorites falter.

Rawlings, of Randolph-Macon, who has whirled the javelin 180 feet 9 inches, appears a sure bet to wipe out the mark of 172 feet 3¾ inches made last year by Pete Sachon, of Catholic University.

And the seventh expected new record holder would come from among four pole vaulters, headed by Riehl of Catholic University. Riehl's best jump was 11 feet, 7 inches which is considerably higher than the record of 11 feet 5½ inches, hung up last year by Pardew of Delaware University.

CONSULT YOUR DOCTOR IF YOU ARE RUPTURED

If he advises you to wear a truss he will probably refer you to the Kloman Instrument Company.

Tom Collins, factory trained expert fitter, with 30 years' experience, will fit you properly with a light weight, washable, sanitary truss, which has no understraps, springs or elastic and will positively not slip either next the skin or over the underwear. It is invisible and anatomically correct.

Many trusses are improper or improperly fitted, and can cause more harm than good by delivering pressure to delicate nerves and blood vessels, which eventually gives a nervous reaction that saps the vitality and ages the wearer before his time.

Come in and let us examine your truss and adjust it free of charge. We will be glad to explain your rupture to you and teach you the proper method of wearing a truss.

Bridgewater Beats Eagles Nine, 9-2

Paul Estep Pitches 3-Hitter to Lead Visitors; Errors Hurt American U.

The Golden Eagles of Bridgewater College defeated the Eagles of American University, 9-2, here yesterday in a game that ended A. U.'s diamond season. Staff Cassell's boys compiled a record of three victories and ten defeats. It was Bridgewater's eighth triumph in 15 games.

Paul Estep, a paunchy, 215-pound right-hander, held American to three hits while his mates pounded Harry Newby for ten which, coupled with loose A. U. fielding, enabled the visitors to score their runs in clusters of three, in the first, third and eighth innings.

A. U.'s two runs were scored in the seventh when Tommy Simpson tripled to start a rally. Bob Lanzillotti, Burke Hertz and John Manchester all reached base on errors. Simpson and Lanzillotti both scored on Manchester's grounder which scooted through the legs of Second Baseman Billy Suter and then was booted in left field by Bob Miller.

Although errors helped Bridgewater considerable in its three-run uprisings in the first and third innings, there was nothing tainted about their outburst in the eighth. Keith Brake hit on the right-field embankment for an automatic double. Pitcher Estep hit one a mile to center-field but got only a single when Brake, fearing the ball would be caught, lagged at second and succeeded only in reaching third. Paul Siple reached base when Newby unsuccessfully tried to catch Brake off third on Siple's grounder and then Bob Miller blasted one on the hill for his second double.

"Dutch" Schulze, American's colorful catcher, barely escaped ejection from the game in the sixth when he made a wisecrack at Umpire Jeffries after the official twice had ruled against Schulze on disputed decisions.

Devitt Rally Ties Episcopal

Alexandria, Va., May 14.—Scoring two runs in the seventh inning, Devitt Prep gained a weird 11-11 tie with Episcopal High School here this afternoon, in a contest called at the end of the seventh by a prearranged time agreement. The deadlock halted Episcopal's victory streak at seven in a row.

Cullen pitched the entire game for Devitt and gave up a dozen hits, while Snow and West shared the mound assignment for the hosts, and yielded ten safeties.

Army's Drafting of Players Takes Spotlight of '41 Baseball

By Bob Considine.

New York, May 14.—The current baseball season has a long time to run but there is no doubt that it will be remembered as long as the game is played. For this is the second time in the game's history, and the first in 23 years, that a war has left its heel-print on the sport.

That fact, plus the general introduction of the batting helmet, will make the season unique.

To date the Army has claimed or is about to claim about $500,000 worth of Big League ball players. This is the amount that privates Hank Greenberg, Hugh Mulcahy, Johnny Rigney, Cecil Travis, Buddy Lewis and Joe Marty—baseball's camp-bound argosy—would bring if placed on the baseball market. Others will be tapped for bones.

Greenberg's induction into the service is historic in that it is the first time there was ever a real test of just how valuable is a player who wins the most valuable award.

Hank copped that honor last year, when his big bat bludgeoned the Yanks and Indians out of the way and gave the pennant to the Tigers.

This year, however, the Tigers entered the baseball race so lowly held by the experts that not one picked them to repeat, though they had the same team as won the 1940 pennant, plus the services of a fine young pitcher, Floyd Geibel.

The reason for the hesitancy was Greenberg's uncertain status. He finally changed into khaki on May 7, and with him went all chance that the Tigers could repeat. It wrecked, therefore, a multi-million dollar firm's chances of a very successful season. He was indeed "most valuable."

However, this won't be true of the others who have either gone into the service or are about to go. The Phillies couldn't be worse without Mulcahy and Marty than they are. And Washington with Lewis and Travis in the lineup all season would not finish much more than a place higher in the second division. Rigney's absence will not further slacken Chicago's not very serious pennant bid.

The use of the batting helmet by all members of the Dodgers and Senators and by isolated players throughout both leagues breaks a stubborn Big League stand against this sensible protection against skull-breaking beanballs. In the old days, bearded players scoffed at the introduction of fielder's gloves. When Roger Bresnahan appeared for the first time with shin-guards he was brutally heckled by the he-men of the game.

Larry MacPhail, who introduced night baseball to the Majors is mainly responsible for the batting helmet. He saw his $125,000 Ducky Medwick, $45,000 Pee-Wee Reese and regular pitcher Hugh Casey plunge unconscious into the dirt last season. Hit by bean balls, and he remembered the dozens of other beanings of a serious nature back down the years.

After the Medwick beaning MacPhail went to work on a helmet that would offer protection without weight and without being obvious. Drs. George Bennett and Walter Dandy of Johns Hopkins designed the perfected helmet now in use. It is a regular baseball cap reinforced by form-fitting plastic sections inserted into inner pockets.

The worth of the helmet, which MacPhail calls "The Brooklyn safety cap," was spectacularly proved early this season when Pete Reiser, a vital player in the Dodgers' pennant fight, was hit squarely on the temple by Ike Pearson of the Phils. Doctors who examined Reiser, who was knocked unconscious by the shock of the blow, said he would have suffered a bad fracture of the skull without the helmet. As it was he escaped with a bump.

The war and the helmet will insure 1941's place in baseball history. Let's hope the latter outlasts the former.

Aiken Paces Lucky Strike Duckpin Team

A 167 game and 425 set by Southpaw Harry Aiken paced the Lucky Strike team into first place in the unlimited team section of the Washington City Duckpin Association tournament last night at Lucky Strike Alleys, with a 1,879 count.

Clarendon went into second place with a 1,849 count with Lou Jenkins high man with 162-416.

Securities Review, of the RFC League, went into first place among Class E teams with 1,639, Frank Sargent tossing in a 153 game.

Leonard Smith is the new singles leader in the unlimited class, with a 420 count, which moved Tony Santini back into second place with his 416 count of Tuesday night. Astor Clarke took over fifth place with 407.

The Fort Davis Summer Independent loop was headed by the Hillcrest Pharmacy bowlers for L. Lewis had top singles of 147 while his teammate, Tom Powell, was best for the set with a 376 total. The quintet won team highs with 586-1, 702 and took the odd contest from Bradburn despite Gruver's near highs of 143-361 for the latter. Pat Moonan's 136-354 counts were of no avail for his Library of Congress team dropped two games to Tom Boordes' Esso Service with Seay's 119 leading the winners. Cruz, Naiman's Photos, paced a two game win over Hardesty's Service Market with his 142-353.

The Temple Minor meet at Northeast Temple found Joe Raftery, Jimmie's Restaurant, the leader for the night with his 163 game and 391 set. Eastern Pharmacy totaled 616 to win high team game and the Jimmie's Grill lads won the set after a 1,699 pinfall. Loggia Roma, Jimmie's Grill, New Deal Men's Shop, Boveglio Club and Eastern Pharmacy defeated their opponents in all three games.

Terp Golfers Win From Catholic U.

Maryland University golfers scored their second 6-0 triumph of the season over Catholic U. yesterday at Beaver Dam. Liebman and Holmes were low with 77s. The next match for the Terps is the Maryland Intercollegiates this weekend in Baltimore.

Liebman defeated Zailkof, 4 and 3, Cook won over Regan, 3 and 2, and Maryland won the best ball in the first foursome, 5 and 3. Harmon defeated Berberich, 5 and 3; Holmes won every hole from Pirro, 10 and 8, and the Terps won the second best ball, 6 and 5.

Winner Pays $14.80 Mutuel and Is Ridden By Beverly Hacker; 5,000 Fans See Races

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 14.—Equaling the track record, Mrs. M. N. Knierem's Red Wrack turned in a smashing victory in the Charleston Handicap, featuring the midweek program here. The Cumberland-owned gelding won by two lengths in an upset that found R. C. Waple's Berwyn in second position, five lengths in advance of O. S. Jennings' Blablah.

The crowd of 5,000 made Berwyn a heavy favorite, despite his package of 121 pounds. The son of Westwick, winner of the Inaugural Handicap here, ran his usual game race but the impost proved too much for him. Red Wrack had only a scattered backing and returned a $14.80 mutuel.

The winner's time of 1:14 3-5 for the Charles Town course, 120 feet more than six furlongs, matched that of Pimlico Lady. Red Wrack was carried out at the stretch turn by Berwyn and had he escaped that trouble he would have hung up a new mark. Jockey Beverly Hacker rode Red Wrack and he did a good job.

Berwyn was hustled along by Jockey Willis Kelly to take command in the run to the first turn. Blablah and Light of Morn made efforts to catch the leader and weakened themselves as a result.

Then Red Wrack, who had been saving ground when unable to keep up early, was shaken up and responded. Hacker guided Red Wrack to the outside of Berwyn. Kelly tried to keep the leader from running out, but Berwyn got out of control and began bearing toward the outside rail. Red Wrack, abreast of the leader, was forced to go along. For a moment it appeared that Blablah, with Palumbo up, might take advantage of the mishap to steal the race.

The program produced a $16.20 daily double and 275 ticket were cashed on the combination. H. O. Wilt's Tavern, with Jockey Martin Bletzacker aboard, won the second race, ahead of Flagette and Miss Ksar. The third race went to Mrs. M. V. Jenkins' Quick Vine, kicked home by Jockey Albert Vesseli. Sun Scene was second and Wenuit was third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEVER HOME, $19.20, $9.00, $3.00; MISS HILDUR, $7.00, $3.20; LULA KHAYYAM, $2.20.

NEVER HOME went to the front on the inside at once, saved ground while drawing clear and won driving. MISS HILDUR raced forwardly on the inside and closed with good energy. LULA KHAYYAM was off in a tangle and was forced to be taken up leaving the backstretch, but closed willingly. MICROPLAY had keen early speed and weakened gradually.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:09½. Off at 3:10. Winner, H. O. Wilt's br. g. (6), by Laurano—Sucky. Trained by W. T. Allen. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:20⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAVERN, $7.00, $4.80, $2.80; FLAG ETTA, $10.80, $5.40; MISS KSAR, $5.40.

TAVERN outran the field going to the first turn, opened a long lead and was not threatened at any stage. FLAG ETTA was closest to the pace from the start and was under pressure at the close to stave off MISS KSAR. The latter was hard ridden and closed with good energy.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:42½. Off at 3:43. Winner, Mrs. J. V. Jenkins' b. m. (7), by Haste—Arbor. Trained by M. V. Jenkins. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:16⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUICK VINE, $5.80, $3.20, $2.40; SUN SCENE, $5.00, $3.20; WENUIT, $2.60.

QUICK VINE, first away, set a good pace and drew out in the closing stages. SUN SCENE saved ground while racing forwardly, was taken out entering the stretch and was held safe, but was best of the others. WENUIT was not a serious factor at any stage. MISS MUD was closest to the pace early and tired.

Daily Double, TAVERN and QUICK VINE, Paid $16.20 for $2

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:12½. Off at 4:13. Winner, Mrs. G. H. Pearce's b. g. (7), by Prince of Wales—Debit. Trained by G. H. Pearce. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:26⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WELSH LAD, $9.50, $4.60, $3.20; GIGGLE LEE, $3.60, $2.80; HAGERSTOWN BOY, $5.40.

WELSH LAD was well placed from the start, wore down GRIST to take command and drew out to win with something in reserve. GIGGLE LEE hit the gate at the start, was sluggish and raced wide, closing gamely. HAGERSTOWN BOY was hard ridden and showed a good effort. GRIST was hustled while setting the pace and weakened.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:46½. Off at 4:46½. Winner, Mrs. W. N. Knierem's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED WRACK, $14.80, $4.80, $4.00; BERWYN, $2.80, $2.40; BLABLAH, $3.20.

RED WRACK was unable to keep up early, saved ground while improving his position, came to the outside of BERWYN, was carried wide by the leader and rallied when clear to win going away. BERWYN was hustled into the lead, drew out and bore out at the stretch turn and was tiring at the close. BLABLAH was hard ridden and had no excuses. LIGHT OF MORN was well placed early and tired.

SIXTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:25. Off at 5:25½. Winner, J. Pedrosa's br. h. (8), by On Watch—Sox. Trained by F. Castro. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLOCKS, $7.60, $4.20, $3.20; SATIN ROYCE, $10.20, $6.20; HAPPY HOSTESS, $3.40.

CLOCKS, off in the first flight, came out for racing room and wore down SATIN ROYCE in the concluding strides. SATIN ROYCE raced ROVING EYE into submission to take a good lead, but could not resist the winner while under punishment. HAPPY HOSTESS had speed in spots. DEBLIN closed ground from a sluggish beginning.

SEVENTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:51½. Off at 5:52. Winner, J. I. Simmons' b. g. (5), by Mowlee—Rea. Trained by C. A. Cranford. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:26.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REMOLEE, $5.40, $3.80, $2.60; BRAZEN HUSSY, $11.60, $4.80; SCHLEY GOREE, $3.00.

REMOLEE forced the early pace of BRAZEN HUSSY to take command leaving the backstretch and drew out in the final drive. BRAZEN HUSSY was hard ridden while holding the lead and weakened gradually after being displaced. SCHLEY GOREE was off poorly and gained some ground. GROUCHY was well placed for 3 furlongs and tired.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:19. Off at 6:19½. Winner, R. F. Tartiere's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELLE D'AMOUR, $8.00, $4.00, $3.20; MAMIES LAD, $3.80, $3.40; AMERICA FIRST, $4.40.

BELLE D'AMOUR opened a long lead at once, saved ground, responded when shaken up and held MAMIES LAD safe in the closing test. MAMIES LAD, shut off leaving the gate and blocked after a quarter, drove to contention on the inside, was taken out at the final bend and hung at the end. AMERICA FIRST raced in the thick of contention from the start and weakened at the close. TRIXIE LASS was closest to the pace to the stretch and faltered.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Don't tell a soul, but there is a report that the flamingoes in the infield here aren't tropical birds at all. I'm told they really are Rhode Island Reds on stilts. Mowmet, winner here Tuesday, was the first Mowlee horse to win as a first time starter. Alan Clarke, his breeder, wasn't here to see him win. Clarke says the colt Walter Haight has recuperated from bucked shins and is back in training. The Bennings Stable is trying to make a deal to bring him here, but Clarke is holding out for too much coin. Clymene, my Whirlaway, is on the reserve list in today's fourth race. She needs racing and I don't have much hope for her if she gets in action. Other members of the stable are Maetake, Cap's Queen and Sallipatica. We took over Maetake from Lou Cappo, who was drafted last month. I guess you have seen those station wagon automobiles around with the name of the farm painted on the side. Well, I saw one up this way the other day and the sign read, "Ain't Got No Farm." Note to Mrs. H. D. —I'm sorry, madame, but I can't tell you where to place a bet when you do not go to a race track. Tain't legal to bet with bookies. Yes, Charles Town has jockey insurance for all its riders. And the insurance company is going to get some action if the boys aren't more careful going into that first turn. Former Jockey Henry Erickson, now track superintendent here, has this oval in excellent shape. Henry is a little man who can do a big day's work. He is just as energetic now as he was when he was booting horses home. He loved to ride and he loves it around here. They tell me that Tiger Finkelstein has wired to Hitler asking for the job that Hess flew out on. Maurice Oliver has quit the volunteer fire department. Turned in his hat yesterday. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First Race — MALVOIS showed flashes of speed at Maryland tracks and will have to be caught if able to escape the reserve list. MYRTLE M. raced well last out and is dangerous. PETE'S GOLD for the show end.

Second Race — DANZIG comes from that fit Langdon stable and seems to have the right spot in this field. BABY MOWLEE will be close in this company. NITANOT to take care of the others.

Third Race—WESTING deserves the call in this field. Has the speed and gets in with a light assignment. QUESTRE belongs close up among this kind. BROOMORIA should be a factor.

Fourth race—SEPLIN has been prepared for action of this kind. Needs only to get off the also eligible list. LITTLE MOWLEE has gone back but deserves attention in this company. HIGH AIM could make a money appearance.

Fifth race—LAST BET is the day's best bet. Outclasses these and I see no reason for mistakes. GLITTER GIRL has speed and the abbreviated distance helps. DELHI DAN promises to show some speed.

Sixth race—VENDOR'S LIEN, despite top weight of 118 pounds, deserves the top vote in this test. GARDEN POOL likes the track and should be the runner-up. PANDORAMINT will take it all if the mud comes up.

Seventh race—TYR gets the No. 1 post position and may take the top and never look back. MATCH POINT scored last out and is a threat again. GROUCHER'S BOY won here at the first asking.

Eighth race — STRUMMING had trouble last out and appears best of this gang. SUMMER STOCK is better than that last. EASTER HOLIDAY to fill out the pay circle.

Sub race—If this event is used, I'll take WAY OUT, CRUSAND and GOLDEN KEY.

Best bet—Last Bet.

Farm Staples Soar on Loan Rate Boost

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 14.—Soaring farm commodity prices that reached four-year peaks in some cases today greeted Congressional approval of legislation to raise American agriculture's income through establishment of higher Government loan rates.

Wheat shot up almost 5 cents a bushel to above a dollar—highest price posted here since last May before the market collapsed with German invasion of western Europe. Wheat has risen 19 to 22 cents since March 1.

Cotton rose more than a dollar a bale in New York to above 13 cents a pound, highest in more than four years.

Corn, Hogs Leap

Corn climbed more than a cent to near 75 cents, hogs a dime to around $9 per hundredweight, soybeans almost 4 cents to as high as $1.37 a bushel and lard 15 to 20 cents to around $10 per hundredweight or better. Corn, soybeans and lard prices were the highest since 1937. Hogs were the highest since the spring of 1938.

On the Produce Exchange butter and egg futures rose about ½ cent per pound and a dozen to new highs for the past several years while spot butter advanced to 35¼ for extras and eggs to above 22 cents a dozen, highest in more than five months.

Heaviest buying in more than a year, partly reflecting large-scale flour buying, engulfed the grain pits here. Grain traders estimated that loan rates based on 85 per cent of parity, provided in the legislation, would mean around $1.14 for No. 2 grade wheat here compared with 81 cents last year. The average rate on the farm would be near 97 cents compared with 64 cents last year while the corn rate would be near 70 cents compared with 61 cents for the 1940 crop.

Wheat Directly Affected

Wheat, corn, cotton, rice and tobacco are the commodities to be directly affected by the legislation which now goes to the President. Traders expressed belief, however, that some livestock and livestock products, such as hogs, butter and eggs, would be involved indirectly in view of the possible affect on corn, principal feed.

The Government has inaugurated a huge program of livestock produce purchase for domestic and foreign relief under the lease-lend bill to stabilize prices and stimulate production. Current hog prices were around the level intended to be maintained through this program while butter and eggs are slightly higher.

Factory Workers' Real Income Seen At Record High

Cleveland, May 14 (AP).—The Cleveland Trust Co. calculated today that factory workers' real income "now is substantially higher than in any previous period."

Noting that "the best test of income is its purchasing power," the bank said in its monthly business review:

"When earnings are adjusted for the cost of living the purchasing power of current earnings of factory workers is 12 per cent higher than the 1937 peak, 17 per cent higher than the 1929 peak, and 30 per cent higher than the 1920 peak."

Power Rate Sets New 1941 Peak

New York, May 13 (AP).—Electric power output for the week ended May 10 rose to the highest weekly level since late March and carried the Associated Press index of power production up to a new 1941 high.

Outturn for the week, as reported by the Edison Electric Institute, was 2,791,609,000 kilowatt hours, an increase of 2.1 per cent over the previous week's 2,734,460,000 and 16.9 per cent above the 2,387,566,000 reported for the same week last year.

The increase was more than seasonally expected. The Associated Press power index, at 143.2 per cent, compared with 141.2 per cent the previous week and 122.1 per cent a year ago.

Aircraft Parley To Open Today

The third annual Aircraft Export Conference, sponsored by the Areonautical Chamber of Commerce of America, opens at the Wardman Park Hotel today.

Discussion will center this year on the problem to find the most effective means of industry cooperation with defense efforts. Consideration also will be given to planning for postwar aviation exports.

Among officials who will meet with 70-odd industry executives will be Merrill C. Meigs, chief of the aircraft section of OPM, and Brig. Gen. Russell Maxwell, administrator of export control.

North American Offers Stock in Affiliate

New York, May 14 (AP).—Public offering was made today of 58,710 shares of 4¾ per cent preferred stock of Wisconsin Electric Power Co. at $96.75 a share by a group headed by Dillon, Read & Co.

The stock represents holdings of North American Co. and does not constitute new financing for the company.

J. W. Randall Heads Surety Association

New York, May 14 (AP).—J. W. Randall, vice president of Travelers Insurance Co. and Travelers Indemnity Co., has been elected president of the Association of Casualty & Surety Executives, a service organization composed of 61 leading casualty and surety companies.

Grab of Northern France, Rich in Industry And Minerals, Called Biggest Prize of War

Modern Armament Plants Included In Occupied Area

(Fourth in a series on Germany's economic spoils.)

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

International News Service Staff Writer

Before World War II, France was the most nearly self-contained of the belligerents. Her balance between agriculture and industry was well-maintained, the country was rich in basic mineral and other natural resources.

Industrially, she was strongest in the north, which is the section that Germany now occupies. And the irony of the situation lies in the fact that since 1919 partly with the aid of German reparations for damage wrought during the first World War, France thoroughly rebuilt and modernized her industrial plant. Thus, Germany has taken over not only the rich iron ore region of Lorraine and important bauxite deposits, but also the cream of the streamlined industrial tools of France.

Neglected Potentials

France, before this war, was preeminently the country of neglected potentials. In spite of a limited number of excellent new industrial plants, France lagged behind the United States, Germany and the United Kingdom in supplementing human muscle with mechanized tools and power equipment.

From the standpoint of power politics, the acquisition of Northern France has been the most significant grab of the war. In economic terms, the replacement of the French tricolor with the swastika has meant the passing back to the Reich of the rich iron-ore deposits of Lorraine, as well as those of the Briey and Longwy basins, which in the aggregate constitute one of the world's choicest deposits of this basic industrial substance. Before the war, France swapped ore with Germany and Belgium for coal and coke. In 1937, France produced 38,000,000 tons of iron ore, and exported half.

Another military and economic prize in occupied France was the Schneider-Creusot armament works, the French equivalent of the German Krupp's. The region also was equipped with automotive and railway equipment plants, a farm machinery industry, and plants for producing miscellaneous machinery and cast iron pipe.

Big Bauxite Deposits

Likewise, Germany rounded out its own large aluminum industry by acquiring not only the French industry, but also important French deposits of bauxite, the raw material for aluminum. Pre-eminent in chemistry, Germany added to its war boodle the efficient French chemical trade. It also has in occupied France the great textile industry.

French silk is already being transformed into German parachutes. Germany also obtained a well-equipped rubber-tire plant, but, in view of the difficulty in getting the raw material, this is of limited immediate importance.

France also has coal, oil, asphalt, lignite and rock salt.

Although artistic gifts are of no immediate importance in a mechanized Europe, France, as an international trader, was preeminent in goods representing taste and individual handicraft, in the luxury field. France excelled in women's fashion apparel and in perfumes, as well as in fine wines and liqueurs.

France: A Luscious Plum

The fall of France has constituted the chief casualty in World War II. In order to delineate what a luscious plum France constitutes in an economic sense, the subjoined table shows how France, before occupation by the Nazis, compared in essential resources with old Germany and the United Kingdom.

	France	Old Germany	United Kingdom

Defense Aide Will Address D. C. Bankers

By Thomas M. Cahill

Charles F. Palmer, Defense Housing Coordinator; H. R. Baukhage, radio commentator, and Dr. E. A. Goldenweiser, director, division of research and statistics, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, will be principal speakers at the twenty-third annual convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, at Hot Springs, Va., June 5-8. They were announced last night by Sidney F. Taliaferro, vice president and trust officer, Riggs National Bank, and general convention chairman, reporting on the coming meeting at the annual preconvention dinner of the association, at Columbia Country Club.

More than 250 bank officers, directors and guests assembled for the dinner at which Charles M. Newcomb, of Candler, N. C., spoke on "The Psychology of Laughter." In his address, he discussed underlying scientific laws of laughter introducing "laboratory specimens" throughout the talk.

Continuing his report on the annual convention, Mr. Taliaferro announced that Ord Preston, president of Union Trust Co., heads the program committee, with Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier of Hamilton National Bank, vice chairman. These and the following committee chairmen are at work perfecting arrangements for the annual session: Entertainment—Willard G. Barker, president, Morris Plan Bank; transportation—W. T. Vandoren, vice president and cashier, Liberty National Bank; hotel—William B. Willard, vice president of National Savings & Trust Co.; sports—Stanley D. Willis, trust officer, National Metropolitan Bank; publicity—George M. Fisher, vice president and treasurer, Washington Loan & Trust Co.

In the afternoon, there was golfing for a cup donated by President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank, and past president of the District and American Bankers Associations. Frank M. Perley, trust investment officer, American Security & Trust Co., was chairman of the dinner committee and presented the golf prizes.

Earnings Reports

United Air Lines yesterday reported a net loss of $1,014,272 for the first quarter of 1941, equivalent to 67.6 cents per share of outstanding stock, compared with a net loss of $238,951, equivalent to 15.9 cents per share, for the first quarter of 1940.

The company reported substantial increases in passenger and cargo traffic for the first quarter of the year, but said they were more than offset by sharply increased operating expenses. Operating revenues gained 6.2 per cent and operating expenses, 30.5 per cent, over those for the first quarter of 1940.

Revenue passenger miles flown in the three months totaled 36,761,479; mail pound miles, 1,564,711,620; express pound miles, 587,387,917, and revenue mail planes, 5,249,749. Operating revenues for the quarter were $3,127,177.23 and operating expenses, plus taxes, totaled $4,147,084.

International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., and subsidiaries reported today net profit of $9,239,709 for the first quarter of 1941, equal to 60 cents a common share, and compared with the first quarter 1940 figure of $9,820,114, equal to 64 cents a common share.

Robert C. Stanley, chairman and president of the company, estimated the monthly production rate was 20 per cent above 1940 totals and three times that of 1939, when the company sold more than 210,000,000 pounds of nickel.

Columbia Gas & Electric Corp. and subsidiaries reported net balance applicable to capital stock of $5,442,784 for the first quarter 1941, equal to 31 cents a common share, compared with $7,584,059 or 48 cents a common share for the like period of 1940.

Edward Reynolds, president, and Philip G. Gossler, chairman of the board, attributed a decline of 20 per cent in net operating revenues "almost entirely to the increase in tax accruals."

Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., musical instrument firm, reported net profit of $1,107,309 after all charges for the fiscal year ended March 31. The net was equal to $2.48 a share on the common stock and compared with profits of $1,050,132, or $2.39 a share, in the previous year.

Maytag Co., manufacturers of washing machines, reported for the March quarter net profit of $521,206, equal to 16 cents a share on the common stock, compared with $356,384, or 6 cents a share, in the first 1940 quarter.

Greyhound Corporation, motor transport company, in the three months ended March 31 netted $502,148 or 17 cents a common share against $249,770 or 8 cents a share in the like 1940 period.

Goering Takes Over Rumanian Steel

Berlin, May 14 (AP).—Rumania's iron and steel industry, cut off from its former sources of supply and export facilities, has practically been taken over by Germanys' heavy industry, the Pariser Zeitung reports.

The Hermann Goering Works, the paper said, had acquired a lease on Rumania's Malaxa plants and on all the other industrial companies which Malaxa, Ltd., controlled.

The Malaxa combine, producing iron, steel, arms, ammunition, machines and railroad equipment, has been regarded as the foremost industrial concern in otherwise agricultural Rumania.

April Cotton Use Sets New Record Of 920,142 Bales

By the Associated Press

Consumption of cotton established a new monthly record of 920,142 bales in April, the Census Bureau reported yesterday. The largest previous monthly consumption was 854,179 bales in March this year.

Officials said the high rate of consumption reflected heavy manufacture of cotton goods for military use and an expanding civilian demand growing out of defense spending.

Consumption totaled 6,995,238 bales for the nine months ended April 30, compared with 5,953,999 bales in the corresponding period last season. Officials predicted consumption for the season ending July 31 would be the largest on record.

Rayon Sales Treble In 10-Year Period

Rye, N. Y., May 14 (AP).—John A. Spooner, advertising manager of the American Viscose Corporation, said today rayon sales have trebled since "those troublous times of ten years ago when rayon was considered just a cheap substitute for silk."

Speaking before the Association of National Advertisers, Spooner credited scientific testing of rayon fabrics for strength, color, fastness and "cleanability" for the increase in confidence in the material.

Can Deal Dropped

New York, May 14 (AP).—Negotiations between National Can Corporation and Crown Cork & Seal Co. for acquisition of the can subsidiary of the latter have ended without any agreement, according to Lesch McManus, president of Crown Cork.

Giant Tri-State Power Firm Found Guilty of Corruption

St. Charles, Mo., May 14 (AP).—The charter of Union Electric Company of Missouri, $250,000,000 tri-State utility, was declared forfeited and the company was fined $175,000 today by Circuit Judge Edgar B. Woolfolk for violation of the State corrupt practices act. If the fine is paid within 120 days, there will be a stay of execution as to the ouster, the judge said.

The court's decree also enjoined the company from doing business in Missouri as part of the penalty, but execution of this provision likewise will be stayed upon payment of the fine.

Judge Woolfolk said the stay of execution would continue so long as the company continued business in a lawful manner. The court retained jurisdiction to enforce its decree in the event of any future developments.

Union Electric, an affiliate of the North American Company, was alleged to have made illegal contributions in municipal elections in St. Charles in 1937 and 1938.

The company distributes electricity in St. Louis and adjacent communities and, through subsidiaries, to towns in Illinois and Iowa. It owns the huge Keokuk, Iowa, and Bagnell, Mo., hydro-electric plants.

The suit filed April 20, 1939, by Prosecuting Attorney David A. Dyer charged that the company, under a former management, made the financial contributions to St. Charles municipal candidates who were opposed to construction of a city-owned power plant.

Under the Missouri corrupt practices act it is unlawful for corporations to contribute money, directly or indirectly, to any political party or candidate or to use money to influence an election.

Dyer's suit against the utility was an outgrowth of disclosures during an investigation of the company's business and political practices by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

W. B. McClellan, who became president of Union Electric in May, 1939, was out of the city and other officials said there would be no comment in his absence.

2 Railroads Ask ICC to Deny Plea Of Pennsy System

By the Associated Press

Two Eastern railroads urged the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday not to allow the creation of a Pennsylvania Railroad System "of such overwhelming size and power as to overshadow all other railroad systems" in the East.

The New York Central and the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, which it controls, filed a petition with the I.C.C. in opposition to the granting of a request of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Pennsylvania company, controlled by the railroad, to acquire stock control of the Wabash Railroad Co.

The I.C.C. has called a hearing for June 4 on the application.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, the petitioners said, owns 30.17 per cent and the Wabash Railway Co. owns 21.40 per cent of the voting stock of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, while the Wabash owns 99.44 per cent of the voting stock of the Ann Arbor Railroad.

"The effect of the granting of the application, therefore," the petition said, "would be to place the Pennsylvania in control of the Lehigh Valley and Ann Arbor."

B. & O. Offering Put on Market

New York, May 14 (AP).—An issue of $5,880,000 Baltimore & Ohio Railroad equipment trust certificates due in 1 to 10 years has been purchased by Drexel & Co. and Harris, Hall & Co. on a bid of 100.2589 for the securities as 1⅞s. The interest cost to the railroad on that basis was 1.825 per cent.

Reoffering was made at prices to yield from 0.45 to 2.20 per cent.

$75,000,000 Issue To Sell Privately

New York, May 14 (AP).—Financial circles heard today United Gas Corporation had completed arrangements with 14 insurance companies for the purchase of its $75,000,000 refunding bond issue.

The transaction would be subject to Securities and Exchange Commission approval.

D. C. Building Spurts 56.9% In 4 Months

Soaring 56.9 per cent, Washington building permits in the first four months this year totaled $15,709,040 against $10,011,755 in the same 1940 period.

The Capital ranked fourth in the nation in volume of building, according to a survey by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. With a spectacular gain of about $25,000,000, San Diego in California jumped to second place in the nation. Only San Diego and Detroit exceeded Washington in extent of gain.

Permit valuations for the 20 leading cities compare as follows:

Bond Club Outing Set

The annual outing of the Bond Club of Washington is scheduled for Friday, June 13, at the Manor Club, it was announced yesterday. Committee heads are: general, Harvey B. Gram jr.; tickets, William C. Coe; nominating, Baker Robinson; stock exchange, Austin Rohrbaugh; prizes, Marshall Exnicios; dinner, Robert Norman; putting, Clifford Howard; horseshoes, Munford Ellis.

Feature as usual will be the mock stock exchange session.

Two Bonds Listed Here

The Washington Stock Exchange yesterday announced listing of two bond issues. They are the Anacosta & Potomac Railroad modified 3¾s of 1951, and the City & Suburban Railway modified 3¾s of 1951.

Both issues originally carried 5 per cent interest. Recently, a compromise offer by the Capital Transit Company and Washington Railway & Electric Company was accepted by the majority of investors. As a result, W. R. & E. guaranteed payment of principal and interest.

A market still is maintained on the local stock exchange for the old 5 per cent bonds, still held by those who did not agree to the modification plan.

D. C. Trade Put at 114 Per Cent

Washington was one of 102 areas in the United States where business conditions showed an improvement in April over the index for March, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States by Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., national advertising concern.

Business conditions in Washington as of May 1, were reported at 14 per cent above normal, representing a gain of 1 per cent over the standing for April 1. On May 1, 1940, the city's business index stood at 3 per cent above normal.

Real Estate Bonds Gain

Sharp improvement in two Washington real estate bond issues was recorded in April, according to the monthly compilation of Amott, Baker & Co.

Bid price for Mayflower Hotel Co. first 5s of 1950 advanced 5½ points to 99½, while Washington Properties, Inc., general 7s of 1952 rose 5 points to 65½ at the end of April. National Press Building 3s and 5s dipped one-half point to 85½, while the 4½ of the same company were off 1½ points at 28½.

The Amott-Baker average based on 200 real estate bond issues, improved 0.3 per cent in April, leaving the average 4.6 per cent high than on January 1.

Advertising Gains 7.4 Per Cent

During the week ended May 3 newspapers in 83 major cities printed 7.4 per cent more retail display advertising than during the corresponding week of last year, according to an analysis released yesterday by Advertising Age.

Retail lineage during the week amounted to 24,181,805 lines, the publicatoin said, compared with 22,515,560 lines during the same week of 1940, marking the seventh successive week during which substantial gains over last year have been registered.

For the 18 weeks since the beginning of the year, total retail advertising in the 83 measured cities is reported as 363,163,978 lines, an increase of 4 per cent over last year's comparable total of 349,070,194 lines.

Customs Receipts Rise

Customs receipts of the Treasury so far this fiscal year, total $325,899,093, about $24,000,000 more than in the similar period last year, in spite of budgetary predictions that duty collections would be lower this year.

Chemical Building Shows Sharp Gain

New York, May 14 (AP).—Chemical & Metallurgical Engineering says in its May issue contracts awarded on current construction projects in the chemical process industries amount to $17,387,000, compared with $4,420,000 a year ago.

The outstanding proposed project reported this month, the magazine says, is a new plant at Des Moines, Iowa, for the Marquette Cement Mfg. Co. estimated to cost $2,000,000.

Weakness in Rail Stocks Depresses List; Traders Concerned Over Coal Labor Strife

New York, May 14.—Railroad stocks dipped for their third consecutive session today, carrying most of the stock market slightly lower.

Operators were apprehensive of reports that further soft coal labor troubles might be in the offing, puzzled over the meaning of the Rudolf Hess flight to Britain, noted predictions of shortages of such strategic raw materials as magnesium and aluminum—and generally refrained from trading.

The Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks slipped .1 of a point to 39.9. The turnover was the smallest in two weeks, 322,640 shares compared with 431,850 yesterday.

The end of the day, except for a slight stiffening among steels, was exactly the same as the opening. The rails were off at the start and stayed off. A few selected issues, such as Western Union and Standard Oil (N. J.), opened higher and held their ground. Western Union was benefitted by declaration of a $1 dividend; Standard Oil by its near-record earnings report for 1940.

Commodities markets got the real play of the day, inspired by the Senate action in approving 85-per-cent-of-parity loans on cotton, corn, wheat, rice and tobacco.

Wheat at Chicago jumped 4 to 4⅜ cents a bushel, corn climbed ¾ cent to 1⅛ cents. Cotton rose about 30 cents a bale on the news, fell off a full dollar as some traders reversed positions, then closed 25 to 70 cents ahead of yesterday. Other commodities generally also moved ahead.

The farm products action redounded to the aid of farm implements stocks and retail stores prospects and share gainers included J. I. Case, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck. Among others on the rising side were Bethlehem Steel, Goodyear, Eastman and Sperry.

On the downside were Chesapeake & Ohio, which set a new 1941 low, Santa Fe, Nickel Plate preferred, Pennsylvania Railroad, Consolidated Edison, duPont, Dow Chemical American Can, United Aircraft and Douglas Aircraft.

In the Curb, where 90,000 shares changed hands, compared with 75,000 yesterday, declines were recorded for Aluminum of America, Niles-Bement-Pond, New Jersey Zinc and International Petroleum.

Active bonds ending in the minus column included Rock Island refunding 4s at 11¼, Colorado & Southern 4½s at 22⅝, Delaware & Hudson 4s at 54¾, Illinois Central 4¾s at 47, Baltimore & Ohio convertibles of '60 at 27¼, New York Central 5s at 67 and Erie 5s at 24.

Among the few industrials and utilities bucking the trend were Goodrich 4¼s, Bethlehem Steel 3½s and Montana Power 3¾s.

U. S. Governments were without a definite trend. Some maturities closed a bit higher on the Stock Exchange, while others were down by as much as 22/32 of a point. The same situation prevailed, generally, over the counter, where most of the business was transacted.

Some British Empire bonds perked up, apparently on the Hess affair. These included obligations of Canada and Australia. Other foreign issues were quiet.

W. J. Murray Made Head of McKesson Co.

By the Associated Press

New York, May 14.—Directors of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., today elected William J. Murray, jr., former vice president, as president of the drug firm and elevated President Charles F. Michaels to chairman of the board.

Their election is subject to approval of the New York Federal Court and will be presented to Judge Alfred C. Coxe tomorrow at a hearing on the plan of reorganization submitted by William J. Wardall, trustee.

Other general officers named subject to approval of the court were Schuyler Merritt 2d, treasurer; Henry Michaels, secretary, and H. R. Peters, comptroller.

McKesson & Robbins was taken under Federal Court trusteeship December 8, 1938. Eight days later its President, F. Donald Coster, had been identified as Philip Musica and committed suicide. Federal investigations showed irregularities in the crude drug department.

The new president has been with McKesson & Robbins since it absorbed the Murray Drug Co., of Columbia, S. C. The new chairman of the board was president of Langley-Michaels of San Francisco when it was merged with McKesson & Robbins in 1928.

Industrial Loans Gain 8% in Period

Industrial banking companies have advised the Commerce Department that they increased their new loans to consumers about $137,800,000, or 8.3 per cent, in the first quarter of 1941, over the similar period last year.

Consumer repayments also increased, however, and loans outstanding on March 31 were about 10.6 per cent above the similar date last year.

Five Giant Firms Aid Bond Drive

New York, May 14 (AP).—At least five of the Nation's biggest companies with employes scattered through the 48 States reported today they were planning or had in effect voluntary systems for employe purchase of defense savings bonds.

They emphasized that purchase of bonds by employes was entirely voluntary, in some cases replacing or supplementing previously existing employe savings plans. The companies are the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the New York Life Insurance Co., Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), General Electric Co., and United States Rubber Co.

C. & S. Breakup Held Harmful to Defense

New York, May 14 (AP).—Justin R. Whiting, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, said today in a report to stockholders that breaking up the big utilities systems, as proposed by the Securities and Exchange Commission, would impair economic and efficient operation helpful to the national defense program.

Continuing the fight begun by his predecessor, Wendell L. Willkie, against the SEC's findings that the corporation should be divested of most of its operating subsidiaries, Whiting charged the SEC with confusing the situation with a new interpretation of what constitutes an integrated utility system.

D. C. Women Golfers Beat Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, 14.—Washington's inter-city women's golf team proved entirely too strong for the host Baltimoreans here today, winning 14-4, over the Elkridge Club course.

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, the Maryland State champion, played each nine in 38 for a 76 to smash the competitive course record held by Mrs. Betty Meckley. Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. Myron Davy, captain of the winners and runner-up in the State tourney last year, posted a best ball 74 to sweep three points from Mrs. R. Boyd Morrow and Mrs. M. L. Bell. Mrs. Stokes dropped long putts on the finishing hole of each nine to help her record score.

The second bracket of the District line-up, the winner and runner-up in the 1940 city title play, Elizabeth Houghton and Mrs. Leo Walper, gave the District team a 6-0 lead with three more points and it was easy from there in for the visitors.

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes and Mrs. Myron Davy, Washington, defeated Mrs. R. Boyd Morrow and Mrs. M. L. Bell, 3 to 0.

Miss Elizabeth Houghton and Mrs. Leo Walper, Washington, defeated Miss Jeanette Myers and Mrs. Edward B. Mower, 3 to 0.

Mrs. L. G. Pray and Mrs. T. O. Brandon, Washington, defeated Miss Effie Bowes and Mrs. R. D. Holman, 3 to 0.

Mrs. H. C. Trace and Mrs. Maurice Glick, Baltimore, defeated Mrs. L. B. Platt and Mrs. K. S. Giles, 2 to 1.

Mrs. J. E. Patterson and Mrs. Florence Geoffrey, Washington, defeated Mrs. I. M. Parsons, jr., and Mrs. W. H. Evans, 3 to 0.

Miss Gladys Greiner and Mrs. C. C. Barr, Baltimore, defeated Baroness de Grobea and Mrs. W. F. Evans, 2 to 1.

Nats Beat Detroit, 9-4, For 3d Straight

the ball slither out of his hands into right field and Travis scored while Bloodworth moved to third on the misplay. It was at this point that Chapman drove in the third and fourth runs of the inning with his long drive far into the left field seats.

But the Nats weren't through. Better make that the Tigers weren't through. Jake Early's grounder was muffed by Croucher, and Sundra sacrificed him to second. Case beat out a hit to Croucher and a bit later Mickey Vernon got the fifth run of the inning home with a single to right.

Thus in possession of an 8-3 lead, Sundra coasted. In the eighth, Vernon tripled against the right center wall and Lewis scored him with a single to center but that run was quite superfluous.

Gray Hurls 2-to-1 Victory

Gray, of Western, bested McNab, of Washington-Lee, in a fine pitcher's duel yesterday as the Red Raiders defeated the suburban nine, 2-1, on the losers' field.

Western scored its runs singly in the third and fourth innings, while the Little Generals picked up their lone tally in the sixth. The game was called at the end of the seventh.

Col. R. S. Thomas Rites Today In Arlington

Funeral services for Col. Robert S. Thomas, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, under whose supervision the National Airport at Gravelly Point was planned and started, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the Fort Myer Chapel.

Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery with full military honors.

Col. Thomas, widely acquainted in Washington, died Sunday at the Army and Navy Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark. He was engineering officer of the Second Army at Memphis, Tenn., where he was transferred last December from Washington, where he was district Army engineer.

Previously he had been stationed at Fort Humphries, Va., (now Fort Belvoir), at the Army War College here and at the National Guard Bureau. He and Mrs. Thomas maintained a home at Accotink, Va.

In addition to his wife, Col. Thomas is survived by four brothers and four sisters. Commander Frank P. Thomas, War Plans Division, U. S. Navy; Woodlief Thomas, who is associated with the Federal Reserve Board; Miss Martha C. Thomas, a member of the faculty of Hood College, Frederick, Md.; Mrs. F. J. Wilson, wife of Maj. F. J. Wilson, Corps of Engineers; Mrs. C. W. Walker, Tulsa, Okla.; Miss Elizabeth T. Thomas, New Brunswick, N. J.; Albert Thomas, Paris, Tenn.; Dr. Atha Thomas, Denver, Colo.

District Court No. 2728. Notice and order of publication. Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia (pursuant to the provisions of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia), have filed a petition in this court praying the condemnation of the land necessary for the widening of Brentwood Road from T Street to Bryant Street, and for the extension of Bryant Street at 13th Street; T Street between 9th Street and Brentwood Road; 9th Street between T Street and Brentwood Road; and 13th Street, south of the intersection of Bryant Street and Brentwood Road, and for the excess condemnation for the acquisition of land, all in the Northeast section of the District of Columbia, as shown on a map or plat filed with the said petition, as a part thereof and praying also that this Court empanel a jury in accordance with the law in provided for in such cases to assess the damages each owner of land to be taken may sustain by reason of the said widening of Brentwood Road from T Street to Bryant Street, and for the extension of Bryant Street at 13th Street; T Street between 9th Street and Brentwood Road; 9th Street between T Street and Brentwood Road; and 13th Street, south of the intersection of Bryant Street and Brentwood Road, in the District of Columbia, and the condemnation of land necessary for the purposes thereof and for additional land adjacent thereto, and to assess the benefits resulting therefrom, plus all or any part of the costs and expenses of said proceedings, upon any lands which the jury may find will be benefited, as provided for in and by the aforesaid Act of Congress approved May 28, 1926. It is by the Court this 12th day of May, 1941, ordered that all persons having any interest in these proceedings be and they are hereby warned and commanded to appear in this Court on or before the 16TH DAY OF JUNE, 1941, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continue in attendance until the Court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits of the jury to be empaneled and sworn herein; and it is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be published twice a week for two successive weeks in the Washington Evening Star, The Washington Post and the Washington Times-Herald, newspapers published in the said District, commencing at least 20 days before the said 16th day of June, 1941. It is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be served by the United States Marshal, or his deputies, upon each of the owners of the fee of the land to be condemned herein as may be found by the said Marshal or his deputies within the District of Columbia, and upon the tenants and occupants of the same, before the said 16th day of June, 1941. BY THE COURT: ALFRED A. WHEAT, Chief Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By H. B. DERTZBAUGH, Assistant Clerk.

IF IT AIN'T MY OLD FRIEND, RIP WINKLE!
I'LL BE—HELLO, GEORGE!
SAY, I'VE GOT SOMETHING TO TELL YOU!
—LET ME TELL YOU MINE FIRST! SINCE THE LAST TIME I SAW YOU, AHEM-AHEM, I BECAME THE GRANDFATHER OF TWINS!!
OH, YEAH? SINCE THE LAST TIME I SAW YOU, AHEM-AHEM AHEM—
I BECAME THE GRANDFATHER OF TRIPLETS!!

MR. AND MRS. — LIFE IS FULL OF SURPRISES — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

HOW MUCH TO DRY CLEAN THIS TOP COAT?
OH—'BOUT SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS
SAY, DID THE TAILOR SEND BACK THAT TOP COAT OF MINE?
YES, IT'S ON THE RACK. AND THE BILL'S PINNED TO IT
HEY! WHAT'S THIS?
WHAT'S WHAT?
THIS BILL IS FOR $4.25! HE SAID HE WAS CHARGING ME ONLY 75 CENTS
OH, BUT HE HAD SOME OF MY THINGS TO BE CLEANED AND I THOUGHT THEY MIGHT AS WELL ALL GO ON THE ONE BILL

CAROL'S UNCLE CONVERTED ALL HIS PROPERTY INTO CASH FIVE YEARS AGO—THEN HE BUILT THE LIBRARY WITH IT'S SECRET ROOM, TO HIDE IT!
HE MUST HAVE TOLD LINGLE ABOUT IT—FOR HE KNEW—I DON'T KNOW HOW RIGGS FOUND OUT, BUT HE KNEW TOO—
THE FORTUNE WAS LEFT TO CAROL—SHE DIDN'T KNOW THE MONEY WAS HERE—
AND BY THE TERMS OF THE WILL, SHE WAS SUPPOSED TO LIVE HERE!
SO THAT'S WHY EVERYONE TRIED TO SCARE ME AWAY FROM HERE
BOTH RIGGS AND LINGLE TRIED TO BUY THE HOUSE FROM YOU—REMEMBER?
OF COURSE—THAT MEANS THEY DIDN'T KNOW THE MONEY WAS GONE
IT LOOKS AS IF SOMEONE ELSE WAS THE THIEF!

You wouldn't think it would be a great amount of trouble to find someone who could whistle a few bars of "Pop Goes the Weasel" on demand.

But when that demand comes at the nervous moment when a radio show goes on the air and you want someone to whistle it at that precise time, you'll find that persons with the talent are exceedingly rare.

Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth, who conduct the "Vox Pop" show which you hear over WJSV Thursdays at 6:30 p. m., had the bright idea a couple of weeks ago that whistling that tune would be a good air introduction.

Anyone could do it, they felt. After all, everybody can whistle. But they reasoned without that peculiar aspect of whistling—that when people are looking at you, and grinning, it's one of the hardest things in the world to do.

Parks tried it and failed. Wally, ditto. Then the announcer, more ditto. Actually six other announcers were auditioned. Beautiful voices, lots of aplomb and all that, but they all failed in the pucker.

It was then that an unsung—or unwhistled?—hero stepped into the breach. It was Morgan Ryan, production man on the show, who'd been sitting around pretty disgusted while all this was going on. He just stepped up to the mike and whistled on cue, that was all, and now has the job permanently.

Fearless Ryan, one-in-a-million, they now call him!

The Post Radio Highlights

Contract Bridge

Some players feel perfectly free to take out their partner's business doubles whenever their own hand is freakish or lacks the defensive strength indicated by their bids. Such was the case during the bidding of today's hand when South took out North's double, although it was clearly intended as business because his hand was a little below par defensively and the club void made it probably that in spite of partner's announced strength, East and West had a majority of the suit.

Today's Hand

NORTH DEALER

	♠ 5 4 ♡ A 8 4 ◇ 10 6 3 ♣ K J 6 5 2
♠ 10 ♡ Q 9 3 ◇ K Q J ♣ A Q 10 9 8 7	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ Q J 7 3 ♡ J 10 5 2 ◇ A 8 7 ♣ 4 3
	♠ A K 9 8 6 3 ♡ K 7 6 ◇ 9 5 4 2 ♣ None

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♣
Dble	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ◇.

After playing out an honor, declarer made his contract by taking the deep finesse of the spade eight on the second round of trumps.

The king of diamonds was opened, East's ace overtook the jack on the second round and he returned the heart jack, which South won with the king. The ace of spades was cashed, dummy entered with the heart act and a low spade led. When East followed low, declarer finessed the eight, which held. He could afford to lose one trick, not two, and he did not mind losing this trick to West if the spades split 3-2. If West held two natural trump tricks, declarer was helpless; but he could overcome a bad break with four spades in the East hand by the finesse. The trump ace was cashed first to catch a possible singleton honor.

Altogether, declarer lost one spade, three diamonds and a heart, just clearing the tape for his bid of two spades.

Forecasts

For the District of Columbia—Mostly cloudy and somewhat warmer Thursday; some likelihood of brief showers by night and on Friday; gentle variable winds, becoming moderate southerly Thursday.

For Maryland and Virginia—Mostly cloudy and somewhat warmer; a few light showers in west portions Thursday; widely scattered showers Friday.

Weather Conditions

The Atlantic disturbance has continued to move northeastward with increasing intensity and was centered Wednesday evening about 400 miles east of Cape Cod, with lowest pressure approximately 1002.0 millibars (29.59 inches). Pressure is relatively high over the Atlantic States with a maximum of 1022.4 millibars (30.19 inches) at Savannah, Ga. The disturbance that was centered over the Dakotas Tuesday night is moving slowly east-southeastward and was located over northwestern Iowa with a minimum pressure of 994.6 millibars (29.37 inches). Temperatures are rising in advance if this disturbance and abnormally high maxima were reported over the middle Plains and the middle and lower Missouri Valleys. Grand Island, Nebr., reported a maximum temperature of 99 degrees. However, cooler weather is spreading slowly southeastward over the northern Plains. Since Tuesday evening there have been scattered showers in the middle and upper Mississippi and lower Ohio Valleys and from North Dakota westward over the North Pacific States.
